Local debuts passion for photography at the Hangar Gallery

BY ASHLEY ARCHIBALD
Daily Press Staff Writer

CALIFORNIA AT OCEAN It seems like every denizen of the Westside is empowered with a smartphone equipped with a camera, and they use them, for good or for ill.

Pictures of the Santa Monica Pier abound, as do surreptitious shots of high-priced meals at fancy restaurants snapped before disapproving waiters can discourage the practice. All aspects of the world are processed through one of a multitude of flattering filters that can take your umpteenth photo of that neighbor kid's kite and imbue it with the sepia-tinged tragedy of spent youth.

Chris Blough takes a different approach.

Armed only with an iPhone, Blough documents the Westside with an eye for composition that puts some traditional photography to shame. He compiled a second book of his photos entitled "California at Ocean" referencing the intersection near his Santa Monica domicile and inspiration for many of the shots, which lean heavily on landscapes and static objects best captured through the phone lens.

His work has won widespread recognition within the Instagram photo community — one of the largest photo-editing and sharing apps recently bought by Facebook for a cool $1 billion — and he's one

"If I'm on first, I'm looking to score," said Turner.

And score he did during Santa Monica baseball's 3-0 victory over the Ventura Cougars in their season opener on Saturday at home.

Turner found himself leading the line-up and the offense for his team as a designated hitter.

Report: State parolees disarming tracking devices

Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. Thousands of California parolees, many of them sex offenders, are removing court-ordered GPS monitors, often with little risk of serving time because state prisons are too full to hold them, according to an investigation.

More than 3,400 arrest warrants for convicts who tampered with tracking devices have been issued since October 2011, when the state began referring parole violators to county jails instead of returning them to its overflowing prisons, the Los Angeles Times reported.

Nearly all of the warrants were for sex offenders, who are the vast majority of parolees with GPS monitors, and many were for repeat violations, the newspaper said.

"It's a huge problem," Fresno parole agent Matt Hill told the Times. "If the public knew, they'd be shocked."

The shift to county jails comes as part of Gov. Jerry Brown and the legislature's "realignment" program, to comply with court orders to ease overcrowding in state prisons. But many counties have been under their own court orders to reduce the populations of their jails.

Some counties have freed parole violators within days, or even hours, of arrest rather than keep them in custody, the Times said. Some have refused to accept them at all.

Before prison realignment took effect, sex offenders who violated parole remained behind bars, awaiting hearings that could send them back to prison for up to a year. Now, the maximum penalty is 180 days in jail, but many never serve that time.

With so little deterrent, parolees "certainly are feeling more bold," Jack Wallace, an executive at the California Sex Offender Management Board, told the newspaper.

Rithy Mam, a convicted child stalker, was arrested three times in two months after skipping parole and was freed almost immediately each time. After his third release, his GPS alarm went off and he vanished, law enforcement records show.

Police say Mam menaced a 15-year-old girl and her 13-year-old sister, getting in their home by giving candy to a toddler, before authorities recaptured him in a local park. He is in custody on new charges of child molestation.

Californians voted in 2006 to require that high-risk sex offenders be tracked for life with the monitors, which are attached to rubber ankle straps embedded with fiber-optic cable. The devices transmit signals monitored by a private contractor.

Arrest warrants for convicts who tamper with their monitoring devices are automatically published online. The Times reviewed that data as well as thousands of jail logs, court documents and criminal histories provided by confidential sources. The records show that the way authorities handle violators can vary significantly by county.

A proposal by Democratic state Sen. Ted Lieu would require that parolees who tamper with their GPS monitors be sent back to prison for up to three years. Other lawmakers have similar bills in the works, the Times said.

Undeserving

Editor:

The Santa Monica Conservancy this Sunday intends to give The Rehabilitation Award to Community Corp of Santa Monica (CCSM) for rehabilitating a number of older multi-family buildings in the city. Given CCSM's history of destroying historical homes in the Pico Neighborhood, this is just shocking.

Let's look at recent history. Joe and Rosemary Kessler over time bought every home on High Place. It was lovingly referred to as Kesslerville by Pico Neighborhood residents. Almost all the homes on High Place were California craftsman bungalow houses that are on the city's Survey of Historic Resources, some over 90 years old. In Ocean Park when developers threatened to buy up and tear down craftsman bungalows on Third Street south of Ocean Park Boulevard to build multi-family housing, City Hall stepped in. An historic district was created and these beautiful California craftsman bungalows were preserved.

CCSM bought a craftsman bungalow at 2303 Fifth St. in Ocean Park and preserved it as rental housing. That is not what CCSM and City Hall did in the Pico Neighborhood. In 2002, City Hall gave CCSM the money to buy Kesslerville; all the craftsman bungalows on High Place and adjacent Virginia Avenue. CCSM evicted the tenants and demolished the eight to nine beautiful bungalow homes on the street to build high-density rental housing. An organization that shows disrespect for the historical properties in the Pico Neighborhood does not deserve this award.

Lincoln Blvd. bus lanes another planning disaster

SEVEN YEARS AGO, THE CITY COUNCIL approved a plan to convert curb parking lanes for "bus and bicycle only" use on Lincoln Boulevard from the city border with Venice to Michigan Avenue.

I wrote about it numerous times in 2005, saying it was a dumb idea.

Parking would be eliminated on northbound curb lanes during morning rush hours and the southbound curb lanes during evening rush hours. I noted that only eight Rapid/Regular No. 3 Big Blue Buses ran on the 1.5 mile-stretch at peak hours and there just wasn't enough bus use to justify the lanes.

City staff claimed the lanes would save up to eight minutes of bus time. I figured a minute or two. It turns out that I was correct because staff hadn't included passenger boarding and disembarking times in their original figures.

In the meantime, staff was waiting for a similar scheme to be implemented on the Venice/Marina del Rey stretch of Lincoln before implementing its plan.

Lincoln business owners complained that eliminating street parking would inconvenience customers. Because of their complaints and the realization that the "the overall public benefit of a very short bus-only travel lane does not significantly reduce the travel time for customers riding the service compared to the impact of traffic delays created in the segment" the plan is now on indefinite hold.

While it may be dead for the time being, traffic jammers in City Hall promise the proposal could be resurrected if bus/bike lane plans were to be implemented further down on Lincoln. It seems that city traffic planners just can't let go of stupid ideas and bad planning that only increases traffic congestion.

TUMLIN STILL FOOLING HIMSELF

The Planning Commission held two public hearings this month on the Bergamot Area Master Plan. The eastern border area around Olympic Boulevard and Colorado Avenue has become the "neighborhood du jour" for developers despite citizen opposition over more traffic congestion.

Enter one of city planning's favorite unicorn chasers: Jeffrey Tumlin, a principal in Nelson-Nygaard Consulting Associates, Inc., based In San Francisco. His urban and traffic planning consultancy has received multiple city contracts totaling millions of dollars. When it comes to non-sensical and outlandish solutions to traffic and development issues, Tumlin wins the prize.

Tumlin's disdain for residents is open and obvious. In his resume posted on Nelson-Nygaard's website, he describes cities — Seattle, San Francisco, Abu Dhabi and Santa Monica — where he's solved traffic and urban planning problems unique to each location.

Under "Santa Monica," he posts, "For decades, Santa Monica politics had been dominated by NIMBYs (SIC) who used traffic fear as their primary tool for stopping development …" Aside from being absurd, the statements are offensive. I'm calling Tumlin out on his rudeness and lack of respect for his clients.

Tumlin ignores that Santa Monica has been dominated by social engineering politicians who, for decades, have shoved traffic calming and wishful thinking that's created our traffic nightmares down everyone's throats.

Tumlin came up with a cockamamie theory that various sustainable practices would negate traffic increases from new development. It was "no new peak hour car trips." However, even he realized that was ludicrous, so he amended it to "no net new p.m. peak hour car trips." Only, that's a fantasy, too.

While still clinging to a leaky boat that's going down fast, Tumlin actually told the Planning Commission on Feb. 13, that the proposed Bergamot Area Plan would result in a reduction of 700 p.m. peak hour daily car trips. About two-million total square feet of new projects are in the pipeline for the Bergamot area with just the pending development applications. Yet, 20,000 projected daily car trips are projected in the various applicants' Environmental Impact Reports.

City Hall planners and politicos need to do what most of us "NIMBY's" have already done and that's to stop listening to this mess. Time to cancel Nelson-Nygaard's contracts. If City Hall's decision makers want hokum and fairy tales, there's the children's reading room at the library — and it's free.

'FREEDOM MEMORIAL' AN EXCELLENT IDEA

A lot of people think I complain a lot. So, for a change of pace, here's something worthy of my praise.

Congratulations to council persons Bob Holbrook and Kevin McKeown for suggesting a memorial to recognize the men and women from Santa Monica who served in our military services and gave their lives in defense of our freedom.

Based on some excellent research by City Hall intern Ginamarie Vollucci, 97 persons have already qualified for listing on an honor wall to be erected at the mausoleum in Woodlawn Cemetery. There'll be room for additional names to be added including those who may die in Afghanistan along with those from earlier wars who may have been overlooked or whose military records were lost or missing.

Holbrook came up with the idea for the memorial and McKeown was a strong advocate for it. At their last meeting, the City Council unanimously approved establishing a private fundraising effort to raise money to pay for a "Peace Memorial."

An estimated $7,500 to $10,000 should do the trick. A public fundraising campaign will kick off at the annual Memorial Day services in Woodlawn Cemetery on May 27.

I can understand the political correctness involved in not wanting to call it a "War Memorial," but calling it a "Peace Memorial" is not accurate, either. After all, these heroes died fighting wars.

How about "Freedom Memorial?" Isn't our freedom why they made the ultimate sacrifice?

Smugglers still cashing in on Michigan's can refunds

ALANNA DURKIN
Associated Press

LANSING, Mich. Michigan lawmakers want to crack down on can and bottle smugglers they say are scamming Michigan for undeserved recycling refunds, corrupting a generous 10-cent per container payback policy once infamously portrayed in a "Seinfeld" episode and which beverage officials now claim costs the state millions of dollars annually.

"Seinfeld" characters Kramer and Newman failed miserably in their comedic attempt to cash in on the refund, when they loaded a mail truck full of cans and bottles in New York and attempted to drive them to Michigan. But lawmakers say it's a serious problem, especially in border counties, and they want to toughen penalties on people who try to return unmarked, out-of-state cans and bottles for refunds.

"If you are intending to defraud ... then you should be held accountable for it," said Republican Rep. Kenneth Kurtz of Coldwater. He recently introduced legislation aimed at cracking down on scammers who drive car and truck loads of cans from Indiana, Wisconsin and Ohio — states that do not offer refunds — to stores across the border in Michigan.

His legislation would make an attempt to return between 100 and 10,000 non-returnable containers punishable by up to 93 days in jail and a $1,000 fine. Current law sets penalties only for those who actually return fraudulent containers.

Michigan's 10 cent-per-container refund — the highest in the country — was enacted more than 30 years ago to encourage recycling. Many say it's worked. The state's recycling rate for cans and bottles was nearly 96 percent in 2011. By contrast, New York, one of nine states with nickel deposits on most containers, saw only a 66.8 percent redemption rate in 2007, the most recent figure available.

Despite measures Michigan lawmakers have taken over the years, including tougher penalties for bottle scammers and new machines that kick out fraudulent cans, store owners and distributors along the border say illegal returns persist.

Mike Hautala owns Hautala Distributing, which services Gogebic and Ontonagon counties in the western part of the Upper Peninsula near the Wisconsin border. He said for every case of beer his distributorship delivers to a store along the border, it picks up about seven more cases of empty cans.

The state loses $10 million to $13 million a year to fraudulent redemptions, according to most recent 2007 estimates from the Michigan Beer and Wine Wholesalers Association. Angela Madden, the association's director of governmental affairs, said that number has likely gone down slightly because of changes implemented since, but not by much.

Bill Nichols, store director at Harding's Friendly Market in Niles about three miles from the Indiana border, said the store takes in about $6,000 worth of cans a week. He said every week he kicks out people for trying to return large garbage bags full of cans from Indiana, a state that offers no refund.

"You can go into the parking lot and look at the license plates and see that it says Indiana," he said.

Distributors pick up the containers people drop off at stores and pay the store a dime for every container. If the distributor picks up more bottles and cans than it left — the likely result of fraudulent redemption — the distributor is left in the hole, Madden said. If the distributor picks up fewer cans than it dropped off, the money that does not go back to the store is sent to the state. Twenty five percent of that money is sent back to retailers and 75 percent is put in a fund that pays for things like environmental cleanup, she said.

Hautala said he lost about $25,000 last year picking up more returned containers than he delivered. He said his company will recover some of that money from distributors who sell more containers than they pick up.

In 2008, Michigan passed laws aimed at cracking down on bottle fraud. One of the primary components required manufacturers to place a special mark on Michigan cans and bottles and said those containers could only be sold in Michigan or other states that have deposit laws.

A report the Department of Treasury delivered to Michigan lawmakers last fall estimated that the technology may have helped reduce redemptions of out-of-state containers by nearly 4 percent. But that reduction could also come from decline in sales, the report said.

As containers were given Michigan-specific marks, vending machines used in stores to count the cans and bottles were formatted with new technology to read the mark and reject cans that come in from across the border.

The Q Line

Housing woes

A recent Daily Press article revealed that City Hall put no money toward affordable housing in the last fiscal year. That fact calls into question City Hall's ability to keep up with its mandated responsibilities. The loss of redevelopment money has been blamed for the shortage of available funds.

So, this week's Q-Line question asks:
How should city officials approach the affordable housing issue and why?

STANDING UP FOR THE ENVIRONMENT: Many low-income or minority groups have learned to raise their voices and stand up against the discriminatory locating of hazardous waste sites, polluting factories and other sources of bad air quality and compromised waterways and soils. Pictured: An environmental justice rally in the Rogers-Eubanks community of North Carolina.

Groups calling for environmental justice

Dear EarthTalk:

I understand that the "environmental justice" movement seeks to protect the poor and non-white communities from being unfairly targeted to host activities like sewage treatment plants, landfills and polluting factories. Have there been notable victories?

– P. Silver,
Peekskill, NY

The environmental justice movement was born in September 1982 when a group of poor residents of rural Warren County, North Carolina laid down in front of trucks transporting waste containing toxic PCBs to a nearby landfill. Those primarily African American activists eventually lost their battle to keep toxic waste out of the area, but their actions eventually led to an executive order by President Clinton in 1996 that institutionalized the U.S. government's duty to identify and address "disproportionately high adverse health or environmental effects of its policies or programs on low-income people and people of color." It also mandated that the federal government look for ways to prevent discrimination by race, color or national origin in any federally funded programs dealing with health or the environment.

In the time since, many other low income or minority groups-Latinos, Asians, Pacific Islanders, Native Americans and others-have learned to raise their voices and stand up against the discriminatory locating of hazardous waste landfills and transfer stations, polluting factories and utilities, and other triggers for bad air quality and compromised waterways and soils across the U.S. and beyond.

Some of the better known environmental justice groups came to be out of specific struggles in their own local neighborhoods. Concerned Citizens of South Central LA (Los Angeles) was created to fight the now infamous LANCER incinerator in the late 1980s, and today provides leadership on environmental and other social justice issues throughout southern California. Likewise, Mothers of East LA, originally formed to stop the siting of a prison in an East Los Angeles community, has become a strong voice against incinerators and other waste processing and landfill facilities interested in moving to the area.

Elsewhere, West Harlem Environmental Action formed in 1998 to fight (unsuccessfully) the building of the North River Sewage Treatment Plant in West Harlem in New York City. Despite that defeat, the group is now a leader on environmental justice issues around New York State. And the Deep South Center for Environmental Justice began with humble activist roots but is now in high demand helping rural communities in Louisiana's "Cancer Alley" protect themselves from further degradation and harm at the hands of oil refineries and other heavy industry located there.

Several national organizations now devote significant resources to these issues. The Center for Health, Environment and Justice (CHEJ), which emerged out of the 1970s Love Canal controversy when the U.S. government relocated 800 families from their polluted Niagara Falls, New York neighborhood, today functions as an activist clearinghouse for related issues. The Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC) has devoted significant resources to environmental justice efforts, including helping to identify cancer clusters in poor communities near heavy industry. Many Sierra Club local chapters battle environmental discrimination in their neighborhoods. And the federal government today provides millions of dollars to environmental justice projects through the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and other agencies.

GETTING READY FOR A BIG SPLASH: Bottles of Cabernet Sauvignon in protective steel cages (left) are ready to be loaded onto a boat in Charleston, S.C., on Wednesday afternoon.

California winery experiments with aging wine deep in ocean

BY BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press

CHARLESTON, S.C. An experiment in the age-old art of winemaking began on Wednesday as a California winery submerged four cases of Cabernet Sauvignon in Charleston Harbor to see how the ocean affects the aging of the wine.

Mira Winery of St. Helena, Calif., placed the bottles of wine in yellow steel mesh cages and then submerged them offshore in an undisclosed location. In three months, the wine will be removed and subjected to chemical tests and tasting by experts to see what differences it has from wine aged on land. The winery could produce and sell underwater-aged wine in the future if the trial goes well.

While wineries in Europe have experimented in recent years with ocean aging of wine, the idea is novel in the United States, said Jim "Bear" Dyke Jr., the Charleston resident who owns the Napa Valley winery. At least a handful of European wineries have produced underwater-aged wine, some of which has been sold in the U.S.

Winemakers have long known wine recovered from sunken ships has a unique taste and the ocean is thought to have something to do with that.

Dyke and his colleagues expect the water pressure, temperature and gentle swaying from currents to produce unique effects. He would not specify the depth of the water in which the wine will be submerged.

"This is a very exciting thing for me as a winemaker," said Gustavo Gonzalez, Mira's winemaker. "When you make wine it's pretty much the same thing for everybody. You can change it up a bit but and see what happens and your cabernet may taste a little bit different from your neighbor's cabernet."

The idea is to find out if ocean aging has the potential to change that, he said.

"We'll pull it out in late May and see what the effect of the water temperature, the water pressure and, more interesting to me, the swaying motion of the water does to the wine," he said.

Michael Kaiser, the director of communications for WineAmerica, the National Association of American Wineries, said he had not heard of aging wine in water.

"It's correct it does change the makeup of the wine. When you store wine it's not supposed to be stored underwater and especially in salinized water," he said. "But it's interesting that someone would experiment with it to see what it's like."

He also suggested that wine recovered from sunken ships may simply taste better because the wine is really old, although the water may affect it as well.

The wine that was sunken on Wednesday has additional wax seals and the cages are made of marine steel to withstand the ocean environment. The mesh allows the water to move around the bottles.

The four cages are chained together and equipped with GPS tracking devices so they can be located in case they are moved by the currents or if an unauthorized diver decides to have an early wine and cheese party

Dyke called the experiment "a beginning for us. It's the beginning of a testing process to see if we can do this in larger quantities for a longer period of time." The winery was founded last year.

Gonzalez said the wine submerged on Wednesday is a 2009 vintage that has already been aged in a wine cellar. Depending on how the experiment goes, the winery may age some of its 2013 vintage completely in a wine cellar and some of it completely in the ocean.

Once the wine is pulled from the ocean it will be chemically compared to the wine aged in a wine cellar. It will also be tasted and compared by wine experts, Dyke said.

Charleston Harbor was selected for the experiment because Dyke is from Charleston and because the city is increasingly known for its fine dining.

"With our southern roots in Charleston and Charleston being an historic location what better place to do this?" Dyke asked.

of only a couple hundred people that the Instagram blog follows with regularity.

"The reason I like mobile is that I'm not always going to carry this," Blough said, pointing to a considerably more powerful — and consequently bulkier — Cannon 60D. "I don't want to miss the perfect shot because I don't have my camera."

The iPhone 4S and 5, Blough's mobile instruments of choice, were like the breadcrumbs that led him back to photography after a 10-year detour through the "real world."

Blough's day job involves marketing and ad sales for an entertainment website that targets the collegiate crowd (read: boob jokes, marijuana references, flash games), a far cry from the artistic bent of his hobby.

He first learned the craft junior year of high school in the suburb of Chicago called Rockford, Ill. on traditional equipment, developing film in old-school dark rooms that smelled heavily of chemicals and shone with red lights.

By the time he went to college, Blough was well-versed in photography if not necessarily experienced. Rather than continue with the craft, he took up marketing as a major and joined the army of people attempting to monetize the sprawling playground that is the Internet.

"I was scared at the idea of making photography a real job," Blough said.

Work with the Walt Disney Company and Myspace intervened. It wasn't until Blough ditched his old phone and took up a fourth-generation iPhone that he rediscovered the simple joy of photography.

According to the Pew Research Center, some 45 percent of American adults have smartphones and the little cameras that go with them. That number expands as one looks worldwide, and certainly other pho-

Despite coming off a shoulder injury that kept him out of the lineup for a time last year, Turner delivered everything you would want from a lead-off hitter, recording two walks, two runs and two stolen bases.

"He didn't see a strike until his third at-bat. It's safe to say they know who he is," said Samohi head coach Kurt Schwengel.

Schwengel says he plans on keeping Turner as the designated hitter until he regains the strength in his shoulder — and maybe even after.

"We want opposing pitchers to know they're going to have to start off the game against Alex Turner," said Schwengel. "You can't put a price tag on scoring first."

The aggressive offensive effort by Samohi was backed by the immaculate pitching of Conner Greene. Greene struck out nine batters, including the first four of the game.

The senior Greene remained poised and in control throughout the game despite racking up a high pitch count early. Greene had 59 pitches by the end of the third inning and 100 total for the day.

"I noticed they were scared of my curveball, but I didn't expect to go so deep into the count with each guy," said Greene, who pitched a shutout for five innings until being taken out for Alex Gironda.

Gironda, who closed out the game, had two strike outs on 32 pitches, bringing the Vikings to an impressive 11 strikeouts total.

"We had lights-out pitching and it's been that way all fall. We have five guys who could have closed that game out," said Schwengel.

The Cougars struggled offensively all game but did a good job of pouncing on defensive opportunities, specifically starting pitcher Jay Navarro. Navarro, playing the role of workhorse for his team, picked off four runners.

Ventura managed to pick off five runners in total and had three in the first three innings.

"You're going to get picked off a couple times in a long season being aggressive, but five is a bit much," said Schwengel. "As clear as a victory as it was, it should have been a lot more. We have some stuff to work on but it's nice to know your weaknesses."

The Vikings' next scheduled game is Wednesday at home against Notre Dame.

tographers than Blough have taken notice.

Entire organizations have arisen out of the democratization of photography including the international Mobile Photo Group, established in 2011, which caters exclusively to photography produced using a mobile or handheld device.

While these ubiquitous products tend to be accessible and user-friendly, there is no app to transform the user into the next Ansel Adams, and Blough knew it. He got encouragement from family, friends, his girlfriend Chante Pradella and an unlikely source — the Internet itself.

Instagram, the aforementioned photo-editing app, holds weekly contests on its site called "Weekend Hashtag Project." Each assignment comes with a general subject suggestion and a hashtag — the best photo submission gets displayed on the website.

Blough threw in a photo of a wall with the words "ice cream" half-displayed in scrawling cursive type, a stark snapshot that one might see framed in a kitchen positioned near a print of an espresso cup.

It swept the competition and earned him a spot on the Instagram site. He now has several thousand followers, and constantly updates with new images of Los Angeles and the Westside that connects him to other weekend warrior photographers.

Blough feels he has a skill set that sets him apart, however. While others concentrated on their photography skills or their careers, he was learning how to sell people on ideas and concepts. He hopes that will translate to selling himself as he tries to launch into the world of professional photography and take on people-focused projects with his more versatile Cannon.

"It was 10 years, and I enjoyed the lull. It was necessary in the big picture," Blough said.

Blough will have an opportunity to display both his phone work and action photography at the Hangar Gallery at Santa Monica Airport through March 23, and will also have a spot in the annual Airport Artwalk on March 16.

from a relative unknown to superstar hero of "The Hunger Games" franchise at just 22. Her quick ascent began with another Spirit Awards nominee, "Winter's Bone," which won the top honor at the 2010 Sundance Film Festival and earned Lawrence her first Oscar nomination.

Lawrence said she loves independent film for the thrill of freezing with the crew in the middle of the night because they all believe in a story.

"That's why I do what I do. I love that feeling. I mean, I'd rather be warm," Lawrence said.

McConaughey, also a best-actor nominee at the Spirit Awards for "Killer Joe," is a Hollywood A-lister but a relative newcomer to key film awards.

"I had to take my pants off to win a trophy," McConaughey said, adding that five of his last six films were independent productions and the "most creative fun of my acting career, hands down."

"Silver Linings Playbook" filmmaker Russell noted that his initial trip to the Spirit Awards was 19 years ago, when he won the prize for best first film for "Spanking the Monkey."

His son Matthew, an inspiration for "Silver Linings" because of his battle with bipolar disorder, was a year old at the time, and was in the crowd to watch his father claim his awards.

"He gave me this movie, so I want to thank him, Matthew, for this movie," Russell said.

"Silver Linings Playbook" centers on the relationship between a man (Bradley Cooper) just out of a mental hospital and a young widow (Lawrence).

Pistorius' brother facing charge in traffic death

RAF CASERT
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG The murder case involving Olympic star Oscar Pistorius took another unexpected turn Sunday with the news that his older brother, Carl, is himself facing charges for the death of a woman in a traffic accident.

Carl Pistorius faces a charge of unlawful, negligent killing for a 2008 road death, "in which a woman motorcyclist sadly lost her life," Kenneth Oldwage, the Pistorius family lawyer said on Sunday. The accident happened in Vanderbijlpark, south of Johannesburg. The charge of "culpable homicide" was dropped and then reinstated and will be challenged in court, the lawyer told The Associated Press.

It is the second time someone associated with the Pistorius case has been found to face a serious charge that has been dropped and then reinstated. It was revealed that the chief police investigator in the case is facing charges of seven counts of attempted murder for shooting at a vehicle with seven passengers. Following the revelations, Hilton Botha was removed from the Pistorius investigation and a new chief detective was appointed on Thursday.

To drop and then reinstate charges is "not uncommon in South African criminal law. The law specifically makes provision to allow charges to be dropped and then to be reinstated as a result of further investigations," said Jacob van Garderen, director of Lawyers for Human Rights. "It is a practical procedure, a process that is there to assist both sides."

In another twist this weekend, model Reeva Steenkamp, who was shot to death by Oscar Pistorius on Valentine's Day was on television again in a new episode of the reality show "Tropika Island of Treasure 5" even though she was buried last Tuesday.

On Monday, Oscar Pistorius must report to the police station in Brooklyn, a suburb of the nation's capital Pretoria, and sign in, a twice-weekly procedure which is part of his bail conditions.

Pistorius was released on bail Friday and stayed at the home of his uncle Arnold in Waterkloof, an affluent suburb of Pretoria, where Oscar is now staying. His brother, Carl, came to visit the house Sunday.

The Beach Report Card is made possible by: simplehuman, LAcarGUY, SIMA and Grousbeck Family Foundation

Heal the Bay reminds you not to swim or surf within 100 yards of any flowing storm drain or for 3 days after a rainstorm. After a rain, indicator bacteria counts at beaches throughout California usually far exceed health criteria in the state's Beach Closure and Health Warning Protocol.

LEGEND
DRY -- each location is graded on an A – F scale based on bacterial pollution levels present in the surf zone.
WET -- grades for days of recorded rainfall and the following 3 days
ns -- no sample taken

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card™ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Happy Birthday

Steve Jobs (Apple has the No. 1 store on the Third Street Promenade)
Edward James Olmos (Actor, Board of Trustees for New Roads School)

Exercise tonight, Taurus

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ You are focused right now, despite some confusion in your mind about a different situation. Ask questions. Return all of your calls and emails. Opportunities appear, and you'll need to make a choice. Tonight: Work late, if need be.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ You can't control your thoughts, even when you know they're not relevant to the moment. You can choose not to share them, but is that helpful? Center yourself, and allow your mind to be present. Remember, you have limits. Tonight: Squeeze in some exercise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Stay anchored, and know full well what is happening. At times, doing nothing can prove to be most effective. A boss might try to lure you into a project, but taking the lead won't be worth your while. Smile, but keep your ideas to yourself. Tonight: Mosey on home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Keep listening, even if you're shocked at what you hear. You might wonder how you can balance all of the different factors in your life. Reach out to someone at a distance whom you admire. This person always has a lot to share. Tonight: Your creativity flows; use it well.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Curb a need to go overboard. You might want to consider why you are doing this. Only when you have that answer can you decide to hold back some. Your imagination opens up many different doors. Lose the mindset that you are stuck. Tonight: Your treat.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Greet compliments and offers positively. A close loved one's kind gesture will motivate you to take a step back and observe what is happening around you. Tonight: Go with someone's suggestion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ The time has come to assume a low profile. You might want to mellow out and try a different approach. You are surrounded by people who believe that they have better answers than you do. Tonight: Not to be found.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Confusion surrounds your long-term goals. Know that they might not be possible, considering your present commitments. Discussions provide unusually creative answers and solutions that might allow you to have it all! Tonight: Look at both the pros and the cons.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Take charge, and try not to worry so much about the here and now. Several different opportunities come from others who present you with one idea after another. Be happy rather than overwhelmed. You have so many choices! Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Look beyond the obvious. You could be overwhelmed by everything you need to do right now. Understand that you have one choice: prioritize. Fortunately, you have energy and discretion working for you. Tonight: In the moment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Relate to someone directly if you want to resolve a problem. The other party could have many ideas. Instead of making him or her out to be in the wrong, choose to find solutions that work for both of you. Your ingenuity will find the path. Tonight: Dinner and chat.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Others think they have the answers, and they let you know. Don't get triggered. Look through a long-term lens in order to find alternative solutions. You have many options involving property and investments. Do your research before you decide. Tonight: At home.

Monday, February 25, 2013

This year you will look at life's issues through many different lenses. As a result, the decisions you make will tend to be grounded. Many opportunities head your way. Take your time deciding which option is right for you. If you are single, your love life becomes very exciting come summer. In the period that follows, be open to meeting the right person. If you are attached, your sweetie could find you to be exciting, yet he or she might feel challenged by everything that is going on in your life. Take a special dream vacation together. VIRGO seems like your opposite, but you have the same issues.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Updates: The Treasury Department's inspector general for tax administration revealed in January that twice as many fraudulent income tax refunds were paid to inmates in 2011 (173,000) as for the tax year 2010. However, the IRS claimed that the fraudulent returns it did manage to stop totaled $2.5 billion (almost half of which was disingenuously claimed by two inmates). Also, the Department of Health and Human Service's inspector general revealed in January that Medicare was illegally billed for $120 million from 2009 to 2011 for services used by inmates and illegal immigrants -- neither category of which is authorized to use Medicare.

■ Recurring Theme: As of January, New York City music teacher Aryeh Eller, 46, has almost reached a milestone in his battle with the Board of Education. Soon, he will have earned a million dollars in salary and benefits since the board removed him from the classroom 13 years ago and dispatched him to a light-duty "rubber room" after complaints of fondling and sexual harassment in the one year that he actually taught. An arbitrator had found insufficient evidence for his termination, but the board refuses to let him back in the classroom, fearing he is a danger to students.
