Candidates for elected office swung through Santa Monica in recent days. Presidential candidate Bernie Sanders made his second visit to the area on Sunday, visiting the Santa Monica Pier and returns tonight for his election night celebration. Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Kamala Harris continued her Get Out The Vote bus tour with a stop to greet morning commuters at the Downtown Santa Monica Expo Line station on Monday.

Teacher retiring after 40 years in SMMUSD

Music background informed Hyatt's career in education

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

Something powerful drew Lova Hyatt to the world of teaching. And something even stronger kept her there for 40 years.

As she prepares to retire from the Santa Monica-Malibu school district at the end of the school year, Hyatt hardly sounds surprised that she's been around for four decades.

"To me, a professional teacher is more of a vocation than a job," she said. "It's like a calling toward a special kind of work in the world. I feel I was called not only because of

California voters could make historic mark Tuesday

MICHAEL R. BLOOD

With a final blitz of TV ads and hand-shaking, Democratic presidential rivals Hillary Clinton and Bernie Sanders headed toward a potentially historic election in California, while for the first time two Democratic women appeared positioned for a November showdown for a U.S. Senate seat.

Sanders capped his long-running California swing with stops Monday in liberal bastions around San Francisco, including a get-out-the-vote rally with rocker Dave Matthews. On Tuesday, he's plan-

The California Primary comes after a strong weekend for Hillary Clinton. The former secretary of state won primaries in the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico putting her just 23 delegates short of the 2,383 needed to win the nomination, according to an Associated Press count.

Clinton won all seven delegates available in the U.S. Virgin Islands and at least 36 of the 60 delegates available in Puerto Rico.

There are four delegates remaining in Puerto Rico, but they cannot be allocated until the vote count is finished. That won't happen until Tuesday, because the island's elections officials took Monday off after counting results until dawn.

Clinton now has 1,812 pledged delegates won in primaries and caucuses; Sanders has 1,521.

When including superdelegates, the party insiders who can vote for the candidate of their choice at the party's summer convention, her lead over Sanders is substantial: 2,360 to 1,567.

AP surveys the superdelegates throughout the primary season to track who they planned to support at the July convention. If a superdelegate tells AP they plan to unequivocally support a candidate at the convention in July, they are added to that candidate's tally.

Both Clinton and Sanders spent Sunday in California, the biggest prize among the six states voting on Tuesday. Sanders shook hands and stopped for photos during a stroll of more than an hour along the shops, restaurants and amusement park rides of the Santa Monica Pier.

That included a stop at a charity "Pedal on the Pier" fundraiser, where Sanders told people riding on stationary bikes that the U.S. should have "an economy that works for all people, not just the one percent."

Sanders previously held a rally at Santa Monica High School last month.

Santa Monica Police seek to curb underage drinking as graduation nears

This week, more than 4,300 Santa Monica households will receive mailings notifying them of the Santa Monica Police Department's increased enforcement of youth drinking laws during graduation season and throughout the summer.

The mailing is the most recent in a series being sent to residents urging adults not to host underage drinking parties.

"These mailings are meant to encourage adults to act in the best interests of youth and the community by keeping alcohol out of minors' hands, especially during this high-risk time of year," said Lieutenant Saul Rodriguez, Public Information Officer for the SMPD.

According to the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), first time teen use of illicit substances, including alcohol, peaks in summer months.

"Underage drinking, especially in social settings such as parties, can pose significant risks including use of other drugs, intoxicated driving, injuries, and fatalities," Rodriguez said.

Each year approximately 5,000 young people under the age of 21 die as a result of underage drinking, including approximately 1,900 deaths from motor vehicle crashes, 1,600 as a result of homicides, 300 from suicides, and hundreds from other injuries such as falls, burns, and drowning (National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism; NIAAA).

Since October of last year, the SMPD has conducted a range of enforcement operations such as Minor Decoys, Shoulder Taps, and neighborhood party patrols intended to reduce youth access to alcohol, and by extension, lower the rates of underage drinking in Santa Monica.

The operations are funded by a grant from the Substance Abuse, Prevention, and Control Division of the LA County Public Health Department. The police department has been working on the grant with the Westside Impact Project, a county-funded initiative to reduce alcohol-related harms in Santa Monica and Venice.

The Westside Impact Project has been supplementing the police department's enforcement with community-based operations known as "Recognition and Reminders", which are intended to check the age verification and carding practices of alcohol retailers in Santa Monica.

"We hope these mailings will remind parents and party hosts to be vigilant in preventing underage drinking during this celebratory season," said Dana Sherrod, Prevention Coordinator for the Westside Impact Project.

Recent data show high rates of underage and binge drinking rates among Santa Monica youth. According to a summer 2015 survey of Santa Monica youth conducted by Harder+Company, an independent community research firm, 86 percent of local youth ages 16 to 20 indicated that alcohol is "somewhat" or "very easy" to get. The data also show house parties are one of the main points of access, with over 60 percent of respondents reporting they obtained alcohol from parties and other social gatherings.

The Westside Impact Project is a community initiative funded by the County of Los Angeles, Department of Substance Abuse Prevention and Control, which aims to reduce alcohol-related harms in Santa Monica and Venice. The Project is implemented by the Institute for Public Strategies, a nonprofit organization based in Los Angeles County. Instead of traditional prevention approaches that focus heavily on education, The Westside Impact Project utilizes environmental solutions around the primary community sources of alcohol: bars, liquor stores, and restaurants, as well as social settings such as underage drinking parties.

Downtown

Downtown Community Plan workshop features urbanist John Bela

The City of Santa Monica will host a community conversation about Downtown Santa Monica, what makes it great and what could make it better. Urbanist and public space designer John Bela will lead the discussion on what brings places to life, and map the concepts included in the Downtown Community Plan to improving quality of life, social connectedness, and public space.

The Downtown Community Plan is guided by the 2010 Land Use and Circulation Element (LUCE) vision of a thriving, mixed-use urban environment that provides multiple opportunities for living, working, entertainment, and enrichment. The LUCE envisioned an energetic and contemporary Downtown for residents, employees, and visitors that integrates the Expo Line and preserves the unique character of the district and its commercial and residential life. The LUCE also called for enhancing Downtown through better linkages to some of City's most visible attractions: the Civic Center and the Beachfront. However, the LUCE deferred implementation of the vision and the specific standards to creation of a Specific Plan for Downtown.

Over the past two years, the Downtown Community Plan process has included over a dozen workshops and public hearings, as well as stakeholder interviews and discussions with various boards to develop an action plan to achieve a community vision for the future of the Downtown. For more information, visit downtownsmplan.org.

This is the first community engagement event for the Downtown Community Plan. Two more will follow this summer-the next one in July-in addition to a series of small group discussions and an online questionnaire to collect community input. Feedback from the three community events, small group discussions, and online questionnaire will be incorporated into the final Downtown Community Plan set for release in spring 2017. For those who cannot make one of the in-person opportunities, feedback can be submitted online through the comments section of downtownsmplan.org.

Bela is an urbanist and public space designer. He combines a background in art, science and environmental design to create vibrant, dynamic, and resilient urban human habitats. A pioneer in user-generated urbanism, John has successfully completed many projects that involve radical new formulations of social space. John is a Senior Lecturer at the California College of Arts in San Francisco and a Distinguished Lecturer at UC Berkeley. He holds degrees in Landscape Architecture and Environmental Design, Biochemistry, and Sculpture. For more information, visit http://gehlarchitects.com/people/john-bela.

To RSVP visit the event webpage. To learn more about the Downtown Community Plan, visit downtownsmplan.org. Follow along on social media, using #ThePlanSM.

The event will be held Thursday, June 9, 7 - 9 p.m. at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium, East Wing Room, 1855 Main Street

Today we vote

TODAY WE GO TO THE POLLS TO MAKE our voices heard. Many of us will choose to be silent. That is a sad and depressing fact. In a world where so many have given so much for the right to have a say in their government, the fact that we have low voter turnout is appalling.

The practice of voting is one that everyone who can do, should do. It may seem like a waste of effort since the Republican Party has their presumptive nominee and the Democrats will likely have their presumptive nominee today no matter what happens in California but the fact is that there are other issues on the ballot. There are other choices to be made.

We are voting for a new Senator. There are 36 candidates who want to be sent to the Senate. Our two leading candidates are Kamala Harris and Loretta Sanchez. Both are qualified and either will likely be a good choice going forward. But in order for your voice to be heard you must participate.

There are 34 other choices for Senator from various parties, and those of even no party. I am not one of them. I am not running for office this year and likely not in this lifetime.

I have a very low tolerance for the endless sitting around in hearings and sessions listening to others pontificate on how important they feel some minor issue is and making more strangling laws that fail to actually serve the greater good.

A policy wonk is often also a person who is excellent at back room politicking. They see the way the game is played out in public and in private. Yes we have laws that are supposed to prevent politicians from acting in private and to curb graft, but as my older brother always reminds me, "look to see whose ox was gored." That means that in any new legislation someone lost and someone won.

For example, years ago we didn't have to wear helmets to ride bikes as kids. Motorcyclists didn't have to wear helmets. Skiers and snowboarders were never seen with a helmet but only with a funny knitted hat.

Then the law changed and it was mandatory for motorcyclists, then kids on bikes. So whose ox was gored? Those who liked to ride helmetless. Who won? Helmet manufacturers and insurance companies. They created a much larger market for their goods and it keeps expanding. The insurers created a possible new way to try and deny coverage by saying "you violated the law we don't want to cover your damages."

How did that law get passed? The helmet manufacturing industry wanted to increase their market so they hired a lobbyist to write a law and got a politician to propose it, and the policy people worked it through the legislature to the point that the Governor signed it.

Does the helmet law help the greater good? Maybe, maybe not. But is it the law? Yes. Kind of like a new restraining order we have in California.

It is now the law of California that if a person who owns a gun and is a danger to themselves or others by way of mental illness, a family member or police officer can seek and receive a restraining order to remove the gun from the restrained person. I learned this last month when I attended a continuing education seminar for family lawyers on this new restraining order.

I spoke to my fellow lawyers and the general consensus was that this is yet another solution in search of a problem. So why did it happen? Remember a few years back that tragedy of a young man in college in Santa Barbara who killed people with his gun? His parents tried to stop it and the police said there was nothing they could do. So who won with his new law? The police. They now have a new and easier way to do searches and seizures. It is an increase in their powers and suspension of someone's Constitutional rights without any bad acts. I'm not a fan- but it's the law.

So "why vote?" you may be asking, because the way that laws get passed is by people pushing for their laws. If you want good laws to be passed you need good people in charge and the only way your choice of a good person gets heard is if you vote.

Supporting our schools

Editor:

As school principals, educating children is our mission and our passion! Together, we are writing today with one voice - to ask our community to join us in an important effort to improve education for every child in our school district.

We are so thrilled to be educators in a school district that benefits from the support of thousands of donors who give generously every year to the Santa Monica-Malibu Education Foundation (SMMEF). These donations fund important programs for all children - arts education, instructional assistants and enrichment at every school. Remember, these programs can no longer be funded by PTAs. Your donations to SMMEF make these programs possible.

With less than a month left to help fully fund these programs for the next school year, we are asking everyone to pitch in! SMMEF is 82 percent of the way towards making sure these programs return to our schools next year. Thanks to the generosity of the Franklin Elementary School PTA, your donation will now be matched dollar for dollar up to $200,000!

As principals, we see these programs and teachers in action every day, engaging and inspiring our students to achieve their full potential.

We also see the difference these programs make in our academic goals for all students. They are vitally important to the quality of our children's education, and we want them to continue next year.

Unless everyone does their part, however, the Board of Education may have to cut or cancel some of these programs for next year, which would be unfortunate for all students at all SMMUSD schools.

Please join us and donate what you can at smmef.org to help maintain these programs for all students. Every gift makes an impact. Thank you to all families, community members and businesses that have already donated to get us this far!

Strong schools are the backbone of a strong and vibrant community. Thank you for supporting a high-quality public education for our district's students. We can't think of a better investment to make.

ning an election night event in Santa Monica.

Clinton, tantalizingly close to seizing the Democratic Party nomination, cautioned that "it's not over until it's over." But she told reporters in Compton that "having a woman president will make a great statement, a historic statement about what kind of country we are, about what we stand for."

The former first lady is hoping a win in California, where she carried the 2008 presidential primary over then-Sen. Barack Obama, would be a capstone to a history-making candidacy.

Sanders, meanwhile, has been furiously campaigning across the state for an upset that he hopes will strengthen his claim that he is the party's best candidate to face Donald Trump in November.

In the race to replace U.S. Sen. Barbara Boxer, Attorney General Kamala Harris and Rep. Loretta Sanchez of Orange County, both Democrats, appear headed toward a 1-2 finish Tuesday that would send them to a November runoff under California's unusual election rules. Recent polling shows little-known Republican candidates lagging in single digits.

The 34 Senate candidates will appear on a single ballot, and voters can choose any candidate, regardless of party. But only two — the top vote-getters — will advance to the November election.

If the trend holds, it would be the first time since voters in the state starting electing senators a century ago that a Republican has not appeared on a California general election ballot for U.S. Senate. That would underscore the continued withering of California's GOP, which accounts for only 27 percent of registered voters.

Trump, the presumptive Republican nominee, is essentially running against himself at a time when he has been trying to unite a splintered Republican Party behind his candidacy.

The names of Ted Cruz and John Kasich, his last rivals for the nomination before they dropped out, are among those that remain on the ballot. Trump could face questions about his strength unless he secures an impressive margin of victory while driving up strong Republican turnout.

Another measuring stick: most Republican delegates are awarded by the outcome in each of the state's 53 congressional districts. Trump, as the presumptive nominee, would be expected to win them all.

In the state Legislature, Republicans are trying to prevent Democrats from gaining a two-thirds majority in both chambers, which would give the party a virtual lock on political power. Democrats face the prospect of several same-party runoffs that have attracted millions of dollars in outside spending.

The state this year has seen a surge in voter registration among younger people and Hispanics, most of whom registered as permanent vote-by-mail voters. However, that registration spike is not showing up in vote-by-mail returns received so far, said Paul Mitchell of research firm Political Data Inc.

"I think that could be a big story coming out of the election," Mitchell said in an email. "We had this big, statewide, cathartic rush to register to vote, but when the ballots were sent and Election Day came, was it just the same likely voters — whiter, older, homeowners — who participated?"

Hyatt leaves SMMUSD with a trove of strong relationships, an abundance of happy memories and the satisfaction of knowing she tried to do her best with the children in her classrooms each day.

She also steps away with a collection of professional awards and honors. She was once named teacher of the year at John Adams Child Development Center, she received a certificate of merit for outstanding service at that 17th Street campus in 1987 and was recognized as teacher of the year at John Muir Elementary School in 2000.

"As a teacher, I felt self worth knowing that I tried daily to make a difference in a child's life by touching them in some unique way," she said. "In my classroom, I strove to give opportunities to learn about life, about each other, and about how society works. I feel the child's classroom is their society. It's important to encourage them to look at how their body, mind, environment and world function."

The seeds of Hyatt's education career were planted during her own schooling, when she tried figuring out why she liked certain teachers and loathed others. She then acted as a teacher to the children in her neighborhood.

Hyatt grew up on the Westside, attending Richland Avenue Elementary School and splitting time at Webster and Marina Del Rey middle schools before graduating from Venice High School in 1973.

After earning an associate's degree in child development at Santa Monica College, Hyatt began working in SMMUSD in the mid-1970s at John Adams Child Development Center under the direction of Rose Honda. She was responsible for children ages 5 and under for about 20 years.

While teaching preschool, Hyatt took night classes to earn her bachelor's degree and education credential at Cal State Northridge.

In 1996 Hyatt transferred to John Muir Elementary, where she's been for the last two decades. Last year Hyatt married Stuart Shimotsu, whom she had been dating for about 12 years.

Hyatt said she hasn't thought much about what she will do in retirement, but she'll probably have more time for the singing career she launched some 35 years ago.

With a foundation of weekly vocal technique lessons, Hyatt has performed in the Los Angeles-based Gilbert and Sullivan repertoire company Opera a la Carte for more than 10 years. She's been involved in several musical productions as well.

"I feel these experiences helped me to effectively conduct groups of young children by capturing and incorporating excitement and enthusiasm for learning in the classroom," she said. "I definitely feel they need an important connection to beautiful things in our world."

CRIME WATCH
BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON MAY 25, 2016 AT ABOUT 8:40 A.M.

Officers responded to a radio call for service at 220 Broadway regarding a possible bicycle theft. Officers spoke with a possible suspect involved in the crime. Officers determined the suspect, Anthony Dorian Jackson, 47, of Los Angeles, was in possession of various identification cards and credit cards belonging to other people. The suspect also possessed narcotics paraphernalia and narcotics. The suspect was placed under arrest. Bail was set at $10,000.

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from (easiest) to (hardest).

Difficulty Level ★★

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

WORD UP!

gegenschein 1. Astronomy. a faint, elliptical patch of light in the night sky that appears opposite the sun, being a reflection of sunlight by meteoric material in space.

TODAY IN HISTORY

1955 – Lux Radio Theatre signs off the air permanently. The show launched in New York in 1934, and featured radio adaptations of Broadway shows and popular films.

1965 – The Supreme Court of the United States hands down its decision in Griswold v. Connecticut, effectively legalizing the use of contraception by married couples.

1967 – Six-Day War: Israeli soldiers enter Jerusalem.

1971 – The United States Supreme Court overturns the conviction of Paul Cohen for disturbing the peace, setting the precedent that vulgar writing is protected under the First Amendment to the United States Constitution.

1971 – The Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms Division of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service raids the home of Ken Ballew for illegal possession of hand grenades.

1975 – The inaugural Cricket World Cup begins in England.

1977 – Five hundred million people watch the high day of the Silver Jubilee of Queen Elizabeth II begin on television.

1981 – The Israeli Air Force destroys Iraq's Osiraq nuclear reactor during Operation Opera.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ (1) Yahoo News Australia reported (with photos) a man in Tallebudgera Creek on the country's Gold Coast swimming with his pet snake. The man, standing chest-deep in water, would toss the snake (apparently a carpet python) a few feet and, according to the videos, the snake would swim back to him each time. (In the man's other hand, of course: beer.) (2) In April, police in Broome (in Australia's far northwest) on traffic patrol stopped a 27-year-old man whose "several" children, including one infant, were unrestrained in his car while "cartons of beer" were "buckled into car seats," according to an Australian Broadcasting Corp. report. He faces several charges, including driving on a suspended license.

■ Transgender Blues: Ms. Jai Dara Latto, 23, won the title Miss Transgender UK last September in London, but in February organizers stripped her of the title as being insufficiently trans, passing the crown to Ms. Daisy Bell. Officials had spotted Latto (who has worked as a "drag queen") in a BBC documentary wearing boxer shorts, and since switching underwear is usually such a crucial step for transgenders, officials concluded that Latto must not yet have made a sufficient-enough commitment to qualify for the title.

Live it up tonight, Taurus

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Others experience a similar sense of pressure and tension to what you currently feel. Original thinking might help you break past the issue at hand. Expect some disagreement when you share your ideas. Hold off on making any personal statements for now. Tonight: Happy at home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ You have a strong sense of how to manage a problem. You believe you will be greeted by smiles and success, but convincing others of the rightness of your idea might be another matter altogether. Your perception could be off, but only time will tell. Tonight: Live it up!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ You'll be in a position where others keep interfering with your day. Know that these people might not be aware of their actions. Open up to new possibilities, which could be a result of recent turmoil. Listen carefully to what a friend shares. Tonight. Be as forthright as possible.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Your emotional nature explodes on the scene, adding more commotion than you had intended. You could be overly tired and wondering when you can take a break. Reach out to loved ones for their help and feedback. Tonight: You are a hit everywhere you go.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ You might feel the need for a change of pace. Although you are totally capable of making this happen by yourself, others seem to want to help. In fact, a friend will step up in order to let you know that you are really cared for. Tonight: Get some extra R and R. You will need it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ You have a way of handling a matter that makes it work better for you and for others. Maintain your sense of humor, as you'll see a friend jump through hoops to get your attention. This person will adjust his or her response according to what you say. Tonight: Out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Defer to others, if you can. Don't get too involved in someone else's thoughts and ideas. Be more like an observer or a boss, and let this person work out his or her issues naturally. You could be up for a major change if you'd just relax. Tonight: Don't pressure yourself so much.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Understand those around you better by imagining what it is like to walk in their shoes. You might feel as if you can't really tolerate that experience, but it will be important in creating a stronger bond between you and others. Tonight: Tap into your imagination.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You'll want to understand what is happening between you and someone else. Your sense of humor will help you take what could be a piercing remark with a grain of salt. You could be shocked by a loved one and his or her ideas. Tonight: Time to lighten up the mood.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You could be pushing harder than you have in a while. You might be wondering why someone is behaving in such an outrageous manner. Know that you can't change this person, but you certainly can distance yourself from him or her. Tonight: Sort through your priorities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Don't push as hard as you have in the recent past. Some of you might consider starting a diet, while others will opt to start a new gym or exercise program. A friend or loved one could be more fiery and irritable than you realize. Tonight: Get some extra R and R, then decide.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Your imagination will fill in the blanks of what is not being discussed between you and another party. You might have a theory as to why this person who is opening up the discussion does not want to spend more time with you. Tonight: Be both naughty and nice.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS
The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★★Dynamic ★★ So-So
★★★★ Positive ★ Difficult
★★★ Average

This year you are willing to do whatever you need to do in order to achieve your goals. You recognize the importance of being honest with yourself. As a result, you will greet transformation and change with less trepidation than the majority of people you know. What might have been upsetting several years ago proves to be an exciting experience now. Go with the flow. If you are single, you will find this period to be quite meaningful, as you will meet people who ultimately could lead you to Mr. or Ms. Right. Relish the process. If you are attached, as a couple your communication skills soar. Make plenty of one-on-one time for each other. CANCER reflects a changeability that is within you.
