Colonel L. M. Howe,

The White House
Washington, D.C.

My dear Mr. Howe:

I am sending you under separate cover two health books, which are marvelous for retaining one's good health. I sent Franklin D. Roosevelt one of these at Albany at the time he caught cold and I know it helped him. This book may have been mislaid up there and I would like to have you hand one to the President and keep one for yourself.

Honestly, Mr. Howe, I believe I am younger than I was five years ago and I give credit to this book. ( I am just seventy and a half years old today.) There are suggestions in this book taken from the good opinion of Dr. R. S. Copeland, United States Senator from New York.

I would like to have the President and you have three things in your possession which I highly recommend: First, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup of Pepsin. Second, Dr. Miles' Nervine Tablets and third, H. A. Metz's Pyramidon Tablets. Now, I believe Dr. Copeland will O.K. these items. We have had these in our home for years, and they have been a blessing in helping to keep well.

Public men are more subject to big meals and banquets, so I can recommend especially Dr. Caldwell's Syrup of Pepsin, and for years also I have had a prescription in my home of Pepsin-Bismuth, which I wrote the President about previously. This, too, is wonderful for one who happens to eat too much, giving instant relief.

I am enclosing two very interesting clippings, which I would like to ask that you kindly refer the points of merit in these to the President. Everything is going along fine out here. Business is on the increase because of bettering farmer's conditions, and I must commend the Administration and all connected with it for the wonderful perseverance and good judgement in going forward in the recovery. I have the greatest faith in the improved outcome of the whole country, and I have conveyed that faith during these strenous times to all with whom I have come in contact.

With kind personal regards to the President and yourself, I remain

Sincerely yours,

SAYS FARMERS LOST BILLIONS

Bliss Asserts Agrarians Bore Brunt of Depression

Ames, Ia.—Special: Evidence that the farmer's complaint against unequal economic conditions in the last decade hasn't been mere talk was presented here Thursday when R. K. Bliss, director of the extension service at Iowa State college, talked before field agents and specialists attending their annual conference.

Between 1921 and 1933 Iowa farmers received nearly $2,000,000,000 less for their products than would have been the case had farm commodity prices remained as high in relation to pre-war price levels as did prices of non-agricultural products, Mr. Bliss said. The actual figure he gave was $1,951,000,000.

"This figure, worked out by college economists, shows clearly the need of a program which will restore the purchasing power of the farmer's dollar," he told the conference. "Restoring that purchasing power is the aim of the programs now being put into effect by the AAA—among them the corn-hog program to be made effective in Iowa this winter."

Prices of non-agricultural products, he said, did not drop as far below the 1910-1914 levels as those of farm products. "In other words," Mr. Bliss went on, "Iowa farmers have taken all the drops in prices that other industries suffered in the depression, plus an additional drop of $1,951,000,000."

In the United States as a whole, Director Bliss said, farmers received $26,000,000,000 less than they would have had farm prices dropped in the same proportion as industrial product prices.

"This loss amounts to an average of about $19,707,000 to farmers in each Iowa county," he explained. "With 16 townships to a county, the loss per township during the 12-year period was $1,231,000. For each farm family, of which Iowa has about 210,000, the loss averaged $9,095.

NRA'S ULTIMATE OBJECTIVE

Former Gov. William E. Sweet of Colorado told a church group in Chicago that the ultimate aim of NRA was controlled capitalism rather than state socialism. He is an official interpreter and exponent of the Roosevelt new deal.

Mr. Sweet painstakingly outlined the objectives of the administration. In the first place, he saw the changes under way becoming permanent. The ideal would be a form of self imposed discipline by business interests. That and what he described as "other changes to follow" would result in new distribution of profits. For example, a worker might receive the same wage for two days' work that he formerly got for a week of six days. He admitted this meant the end of huge fortunes, but held to the idea that it must be accomplished under a capitalistic system. Mr. Sweet made the following statement:

> Controlled capitalism, not state socialism, must be our objective. There must be a redistribution of the profit system of the United States if there is ever any semblance of recovery. From now on the watchword is mass consumption. It compels a planned economy. We are going to balance production and consumption under the democratic system of government. Whether these changes come under the democratic tradition, within the framework of the capitalistic system and the constitution, rests with us.

It seems to be well established in the minds of thoughtful persons that in returning to a normal economic condition a way must be found more nearly to equalize the material awards to the various elements of American society. Economic equilibrium has been lost because of inequalities that have been permitted as rugged individualism ran riot. It was impossible under such a systen. to prevent a disturbance of economic and social life when there was drained from the masses for concentration in the hands of the few the real wealth of the country.

Consequently when this is recognized as an error the process must be reversed, and that is the purpose of such governmental machinery as has been set up for control of industry in the interest of the people. Meaning, of course, that a large part of this concentrated wealth must be made to flow back whence it originally came. When all the sand in the hour glass has sifted through to the bottom it must be turned upside down else it becomes useless.

Mr. Sweet properly has interpreted the purpose of the new deal. He may be in error if he concludes the method employed will achieve the results desired. NRA is still an experiment. But the objective will be the same if eventually NRA is abandoned and another treatment is prescribed. A part of the concentrated wealth must flow in the other direction.

NATIONALISM AND DISARMAMENT

The steering committee in Geneva has recommended adjournment of the disarma-

is known to have been unsympathetic toward Postmaster General Farley's efforts in Mr. McKee's behalf.

It was somewhat surprising that Mr. McKee, who still is trailing Mr. La Guardia in the last Literary Digest poll, with Mayor O'Brien a poor third, should have made such a positive statement as the above when he also was declaring he would be proud if his candidacy were to merit the approval "of those in Washington." Which prompts the suggestion that a part of the fear he feels on the showing of the La Guardia strength is because "those in Washington" refused to embrace him and his candidacy. And today even Mr. Farley, who tried to put Mr. Roosevelt behind Mr. McKee and failed, is conspicuous by both his absence and his silence.

MR. WIGGIN'S SACRIFICE

Albert H. Wiggin, who was president of the Chase National bank in New York on an enormous salary with bonuses thrown in for good measure, voluntarily has sacrificed his $100,000 a year retirement pension. This was done as the senate banking committee, of which Ferdinand Pecora is counsel, uncovered facts and figures relating to the financial operations of this institution.

Mr. Wiggin somewhat lamely asserts in his letter of resignation that "at the time of the agreement to pay me annual compensation of $100,000 it was believed to be in the best interests of the bank." He sought to make no explanation of this statement. Yet the public, including stockholders of the Chase National, no doubt will wonder just how such an agreement could be beneficial to all interests concerned.

It seems reasonable to suggest that if a bank, even one so powerful as the Chase National, were able to pay a retirement annuity so enormous and salaries to executives in proportion a compensating effect must be felt somewhere. It simply is not possible to believe that a financial institution so generous in one direction also could afford to be liberal in another. There must have been sacrifices somewhere in order that the big men of the Chase National might prosper in this fashion.

It already has been shown that such sacrifices were made. The Chase National lost millions for years. This loss was for the stockholders rather than for the Wigginses and others whose fabulous salaries and bonuses were continued by the board. Possibly, another explanation may be found in the selling of securities with wide margins of profit.

The caption may be somewhat misleading. Mr. Wiggin may not be making a great sacrifice, relatively speaking. He is denying himself $100,000 a year for doing nothing in the interest of the bank of which he was the head. But for years his salary was a round quarter of a million dollars, and there were fat bonuses in addition. So sacrifice cannot mean in this case that Mr. Wiggin necessarily must suffer personal privation. It would be difficult to find a wolf so bold that it would dare to approach the door of a man who annually for years had collected a princely salary.

pose of the new deal. He may be in error if he concludes the method employed will achieve the results desired. NRA is still an experiment. ### NATIONALISM AND DISARMAMENT

The steering committee in Geneva has recommended adjournment of the disarmament conference until December 4. What action will be taken is not known as this is written. In some European quarters the hope is still held that the conference may be kept going. An encouraging sign is the German rumor that the Hitler government would announce within a fortnight or so terms on which the republic would be willing to resume arms discussions. But on the whole the Geneva parley seems to be in the last stages of its disintegration.

The Geneva situation is proof of the frequent contention that intense nationalism and a liberal attitude toward arms reductions do not go along together. Since the world war, nationalism has been growing stronger and the disposition to reduce arms has become weaker. Europeans know this to be true, yet they do nothing to discourage the one that they may give impetus to the other.

America's part in the developments leading up to the possible disintegration of the arms conference has been wholly altruistic. At this time the United States necessarily must assume an independent attitude. Which means that if we must we can and will prepare for our defense. More and more it looks as though nationalism had thrust upon the civilized world the hateful and expensive menace of arms competition.

MR. M'KEE IS SCARED

*Joseph V. McKee, independent democratic candidate for mayor of New York, has indi*cated that he is scared by the advances made by Fiorello La Guardia, the fusion choice. In a speech last Tuesday he tried to bring no less a personage than President Roosevelt into the fight. "I say to you," he shouted to his audience, "a vote for La Guardia is a vote against Roosevelt; a vote for McKee is a vote for Roosevelt."

Mr. McKee appears to have erred in this statement. If he had substituted Mr. Farley's name for that of the chief executive he would have been 100 per cent accurate in his assertion as to what a vote for him meant. President Roosevelt has refused to take sides, and

Dear Mr. President:

By express prepaid I am shipping some sapotes to you which were grown on my place here in Sierra Madre. The sapote is native to Central America but does exceedingly well in this section of Southern California.

The sapote requires an acquired taste and should be eaten when soft to the touch. We use it as the principal ingredient of a salad with any kind of salad dressing; or it can be used as a dessert with cream. In Central America the natives eat it as protection against malaria, as it contains a great deal of quinine. It also has the property of producing sleep.

I sincerely hope you will enjoy this fruit which perhaps will be a novelty to you and yours.

With every good wish and my pledge of cooperation to you and the work of the N R A, believe me to be

Dear Mr. President:-

I am mailing you under separate cover one sample cluster "Mahan" Pecans. This cluster of nuts was cut from my own tree which was transplanted in Jauary 1929, and has been bearing since the second year out.

The purpose of this sample, and communication is to interest you in "Mahan" Pecan sprouts to put out on your farm at Warm Springs, Ga., and to secure the order for such sprouts as you wish to put out this winter. The "Mahan is the worlds best Pecan judged from every standpoint of merit.

Should you see fit to give me an order for "Mahans" they would be shipped from Monticello, Fla., and guaranteed true to variety by the Monticello Nursery Company.

I do not Know your manager at Warm Springs, Ga., hence this appeal to you direct.

The "Path Finde" states that your farm is already self sustaing, but a few "Mahans" would help wonderfully to keep it on a paying basis.

Yours Very Truly, W. W. Hicks.

Mr. President

My Dear Sir:

It is with a degree of hesitancy that I address you, knowing that you cannot possibly give your personal attention to all such correspondence.

In a former letter I mentioned a book entitled "Wheat and Politics". This book contains many things vital to the farmer. Fearing that it may never have come to notice, my wife and I have decided to send you a copy under separate cover. We hope its pages may be of interest to you.

The greatest needs of the farmers today are; lower rates of interest, facilities for getting money to operate on without unnecessary red tape; and a price for grain above the cost of production. I am paying 8% for current expense money to operate. Paying cash for everything. My 1932 crop was sold by a bank liquidater for 28¢ per bushel, which is about 60% below the cost of production.

We can't stand this. Our farmers are fast going into the coffers of the Money Power. Under present conditions, no bank should be allowed to charge more than 6% interest and government money to farmers should not be more than 3%. I am 74 years old. Been farming 50 years and feel that I am about to loose the accumulations of those years.

We know that you are putting forth your greatest efforts and we are offering the above as a few suggestions only-- and hoping that you may ever be successful in your endeavor toward battling the Depression.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Roosevelt,

In an exhibition in these galleries of "Travesties in Pastel and Crayon" by Madaline Harrison, an excellent satire on the N.R.A. is shown.

So full of humor is this drawing, that I felt it should be preserved as part of Americana.

As your influence is represented in this drawing, I am priveleged to present it to you with the compliments of the artist, as part of your collection.

It would have given you a great deal of pleasure to have seen this exhibition which "Travesties" the art world in general, the author Barbusse (who lectured here recently) as well as other incidents of the American scene of which the N.R.A. received it's "poke".

I hope you will accept this drawing and enjoy it's subtdle humor as much as the Philadelphia Art Crtic, Mr. Bonte on the Phila. Inquirer) who said in his review, "Amusing by reason of their satric point of view and the informality of their fashioning the "Travesties in Pastel and Crayon" by Madaline Harrison----goes wild, but these Harrison pictures are lots of fun just the same."

Dear President Roosevelt,

Will you please accept this flag my Aunt and I made for you, from wrappers off the bread we use. I have no Mother or Father and I live with my Aunt and Uncle.

I printed the names of the states on the back.

We are all doing our best to help you and the N.R.A.

My Aunt says everything will be all right soon because you are a good man and you are trying so hard to help all us poor people.

My Uncle is working now. He was out of work for nearly two years. And we had to ask for food from our town. My Aunt did not like to do that so she is much happier now my Uncle is working. We wish you and Mrs. Roosevelt good health and happiness all your lives.

NOV 14 1933

Mr. President:-

Kindly allow an American citizen to present to you as a token of admiration for your wonderful fight for National Recovery the accompanying book "Les Merveilleuses Guerisons du Docteur Gillet".

This book will tell you of the remarkable success Dr. Gillet has had in treating many cases of infantile paralysis, how by a simple action on the nervous system, he was able to restore full vigor to paralysed limbs, how patients discarded trusses and artificial means of walking. Pages 259 and on are testimonials of such cases.

I can vouch that the character of the author is a guarantee that this book is not intended as an advertisement, but as a medium of spreading the good word and as a duty to suffering humanity.

I could receive no greater thanks,

Dear Mr. President;

The two enclosed small pamphlets may interest you for a few moments. I especially hope that you will take time to read the one about Macon as you have been here with our mutual friend "W.T." Anderson.

If you are interested in stories with reference to early Georgia around Pine Mountain I would like to call your attention to " Chappel's Miscellanies of Georgia " in which the country is described and its history repeated. I would be very glad to present you with a copy if you would care to have it.

Please do not bother to reply unless you would like to have the Miscellanies. We are sorry that you can not come to Macon on this trip. You have sixty thousand friends here.

Yours very sincerely,

An Indian Map of Georgia

Ever since I was a small boy going out hunting with my older brothers and their friends I have been interested to know more about the Indians and the mound builders who once lived in Georgia. I was just as much interested in finding old arrow heads and "chips" as I was in hunting birds, and many a time let a field lark fly over my head without seeing him because I had my eyes on the ground looking for pieces of pottery and "Indian relics".

As I have grown older my time has been taken up with many other things but the fascination with regards to this race which has passed on from our land still remains. I have found that the older historians of Georgia have described and more or less accurately located many of the larger well known mounds in our state. I have also found that John R. Swanton of the Bureau of Ethnology has written most interestingly of the early history of our Creek Indians who lived in the central and southern parts of Georgia. He has even roughly indicated on a map the general locations of many old Indian villages, or tribes.

I have wanted for years to find someone who is sufficiently interested and had the time, to get the data together and make up a detailed map of our state showing accurately, not just the general location of the tribes, but the exact location of the mounds and the exact location of each old village site. Those of us who as boys wandered and hunted over our

Hon. Clyde L. Herring,
Governor,

Georgia fields know how these sites are easily located by the finding of large numbers of arrow heads and finely chipped pieces of flint. Of course the mounds are also easily identified.

Recently I have been in communication with Mr. Stirling and Mr. Swanton of the Bureau of American Ethnology in Washington and have suggested to them that we try and get this information together. My first plan was to get the newspapers interested and the school teachers and try and get the information through them. Mr. Swanton, who knows more about our southern Indians than anyone else, immediately asked me not to do this. He states that every time any great publicity is given about Indian mounds and village sites in the press, that uninformed people come to the conclusion that these contain items of monetary value; the mounds are then torn to pieces, nothing of cash value is found, but such information as genuine expers could have gotten by careful study is forever destroyed.

And so I am planning to try and get together such information as I can without any newspaper publicity. I hope to get this information to a great extent through correspondence with men in different parts of the state. I will then assemble the information, place it in permanent form and turn it over to one of the colleges in the state or to the state library.

How You Can Help

In every county in the state, and practically in every hamlet there is one man or there are several men who know where the old mounds and village sites are. It is impossible for me alone to get in touch with the men who have this information. I wish you to help me to do this. It may be that you yourself know the location of certain mounds and village sites. There must have been almost thousands of these latter, as the Indians lived in small villages and those here in middle Georgia at least frequently moved. When Colonel James Moore came to the present site of Macon in December 1703 to get some fighting Creek Indians to go down into south Georgia and northern Florida with him to exterminate the Apalachee Indians, he got one thousand warriors from the surrounding villages. I have read somewhere that there were eleven villages close by these old Ocmulgee Fields. I know one site fifteen miles away high up over Echiconnee Creek on the trail which Colonel Benjamin Hawkins travelled in 1796 and which William Bartram used twenty years before. I know another where Benjamin Hawkins camped on the night of Feb. 22, 1797, and cut his initials on a beech tree the following morning. I know another village site eight miles up the Ocmulgee River from the largest mound in Ocmulgee Fields, and located on the Western bank of the river. Whereas I know only these three sites, there are probably twenty-five sites in Bibb county alone. I expect to locate all of them within the next year as I, living in Bibb county, know the men who know about these old mounds and village sites. One man is a retired brick manufacturer who spends all the cool months hunting up and down the river. Another man is an insurance man. Another man is a clerk in a store. Another man is a civil engineer. I expect all of these men and others, and the Boy Scouts to help me get together the information about Bibb county.

Hon. Clyde L. Herring,
Governor,

You can help by either giving me information which you have as to the actual location of the mounds and village sites, or by writing me and telling me what man or men there are in your county who have this information. It would help greatly by your giving such a man this pamphlet and asking him to write me the information to put into the map. I also intend writing a record to go with the map describing the location of the sites and stating the sources of my information. The description of the location must be very exact and accurate. Most of the sites are along creek or river banks. I wish to know which side of the creek it is on, the right side going down stream or the left side. I wish to know whose land it is on, even what land lot if possible. I also wish to know how far it is from the nearest town, with name of the town, how far from the highway, and what highway. In other words I wish the description to be so accurate that, having the description, any man of average intelligence could easily go to the field or mound. The more complete the description is of each site the better it will be, (size of mound and the condition, and the ease of approach, etc.)

Will you help get the information from your county or from such parts of Georgia as you are most familiar with? If you will, please send me the information to my address given on the back of this folder, sending me either the location of the sites, or the names and addresses of such men as you know who are interested and might help.

Plan of the Work

It is my intention to try and gather first the information as to locations of sites from Indian Springs down through Bibb county to Albany and Thomasville, and from Bibb county down the Ocmulgee River to the coast. I will then start after other portions of the state. Of course as other information comes in, it will be filed and followed up. If therefore you know any man interested in any part of the state, please let me know about him. I am however to start with, immediately interested in this so called Lower Creek Country. I expect to start on the sites along the upper Flint and Chattahoochee and Oconee Rivers just as soon as I get information started coming in from this lower part of the state. Please help if and as you can.

I am writing to certain people who I know have been interested in the subject in the past, and am writing to others who may not be interested, but who know many people in their counties. In each instance I am asking their help not only in their own counties, but am also asking them to give me the name of some man interested in the adjoining counties. I hope in this way to get information from all over the state in the next twelve months.

Hon. Clyde L. Herring,
Governor,
Des Moines, Iowa.

Just as soon as we get the information regarding the villages we expect to start working on the old Indian trails. They should be especially interesting to chart.

MACON THE HISTORICAL CENTER OF GEORGIA

1. The so-called Indian Mounds around Macon are considered by experts as being some of the oldest in the United States, being from two thousand to five thousand years old.
2. Two mounds within three miles of Macon are considered the most perfect in the entire United States. We have an option to buy them.
3. The large ceremonial mound in East Macon is the most historic spot in Georgia. Here the Creek Federation was formed. To this sacred spot the Creeks returned in 1690. Here the Creek warriors and the fifty white fighting men from Charleston had their rendezvous in December, 1703.
4. At this site plans were laid for extermination of the Indian allies of Spain. From this site one thousand Creeks set out with Colonel James Moore in December, 1703, and wiped out the Spanish cities in South Georgia. This determined the English supremacy in Georgia thirty years before Oglethorpe came to Savannah.
5. We have an option to buy this historic ceremonial mound for the sum of five hundred dollars.
6. Federal Relief Funds are available to be used to pay the labor necessary to clean up and restore the mounds and to build roads to them. Similar work is being done by such labor in the Mississippi Valley today.
7. If we do anything we must do it while the Federal Relief funds are available; that is within the next few weeks. Our option expires December sixth.
8. In Putnam County near the highway to Athens there are two stone eagle mounds.
9. All of these old prehistoric remains of an extinct people can be advertised and exploited and be made to attract thousands of tourists to Macon and to Central Georgia. If it is ever to be done, now is the time when we can get free labor.

My dear Mr. President:

Sitting on these long winter evenings meditating over what the future may have in store for us Farmers who have little or no income to pay taxes and interest on account of low prices on our products, it occurred to me that it would be possible to reach you in person through our beloved Senator from North Dakota, Honorable G. Senator Nye is so thoroughly familiar with the plight of us Farmers and so universally trusted by his constituents that, in spite of a Democratic landslide for you, Mr. President, he received the largest majority of any man in the history of the Republican party in this State. In spite of his Republican Label, he is not a strong partisan man and I assure you, Mr. President, that any suggestion he may make to you along the lines of Farm Relief is absolutely reliable and backed up by his constituents.

I am sure that you are sincere and moved by the highest motives, and that you want to mete out justice to all, but, nevertheless, I believe you are misinformed to some extent. Therefore, you can not afford to underestimate such reliable information as Senator Nye has to offer you.

So, Mr. President: In appreciation of the good intentions you have shown and the high hopes I have placed in you for the future welfare of Agriculture, I am presenting to you through Senator Nye a small present. It is perhaps insignificant and of little actual value to you, but it represents a lot of patience on my part, because I have made it with my own hands. It consists of some three hundred odd pieces of rare hardwood glued together and is used to score the game of Cribbage and as far as I know it is the only one of this particular pattern in existence, but it carries with it a wish and hope that you, Mr. President, with the aid of this score board may be able to master the game and clean up on the Cribbage sharks in Washington in the same manner as you cleaned up on the Hooverites at the last election.

Mr. President, in behalf of the people of the state of North Dakota who stood by you so loyally at the polls, I present to you this score board hoping that it will not only aid you in the conquest of Cribbage, but that it also may aid you in meeting and solving the many and difficult problems of the state which will be sure to confront you for the next two or three years, to the end that truth and justice and righteousness as well as prosperity may

Miss M. A. Le Hand,
Secretary to the President,
THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, D.C.

Dear Miss Le Hand:

Thanks for your note from Warm Springs, and to further express my appreciation of your writing me about the President enjoying the oranges I sent him; I am sending you a little package of the tastiest Pecan Nut Meats you could ever wish to have. If it is entirely in order, open the box at the President's desk, and let him take the first kernel. I don't know how you can do this, but if there is anybody in the world can, you can.

Happy Christmas to you.

Respectfully,
Walter Hawkins
