Withdrawal/Redaction Sheet
Clinton Library

DOCUMENT NO. AND TYPE	SUBJECT/TITLE	DATE	RESTRICTION
001. list	re: DOBs [partial] (1 page)	03/03/1995	b(6)
002. list	re: DOBs [partial] (1 page)	03/03/1995	b(6)

COLLECTION:
Clinton Presidential Records
First Lady's Office
Melanne Verveer
OA/Box Number: 20054

FOLDER TITLE:
Summit: Follow-Up

2013-0534-S
rc1771

RESTRICTION CODES

Presidential Records Act - [44 U.S.C. 2204(a)]

P1 National Security Classified Information [(a)(1) of the PRA]
P2 Relating to the appointment to Federal office [(a)(2) of the PRA]
P3 Release would violate a Federal statute [(a)(3) of the PRA]
P4 Release would disclose trade secrets or confidential commercial or financial information [(a)(4) of the PRA]
P5 Release would disclose confidential advice between the President and his advisors, or between such advisors [a)(5) of the PRA]
P6 Release would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy [(a)(6) of the PRA]

C. Closed in accordance with restrictions contained in donor's deed of gift.
PRM. Personal record misfile defined in accordance with 44 U.S.C. 2201(3).
RR. Document will be reviewed upon request.

Freedom of Information Act - [5 U.S.C. 552(b)]

b(1) National security classified information [(b)(1) of the FOIA]
b(2) Release would disclose internal personnel rules and practices of an agency [(b)(2) of the FOIA]
b(3) Release would violate a Federal statute [(b)(3) of the FOIA]
b(4) Release would disclose trade secrets or confidential or financial information [(b)(4) of the FOIA]
b(6) Release would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy [(b)(6) of the FOIA]
b(7) Release would disclose information compiled for law enforcement purposes [(b)(7) of the FOIA]
b(8) Release would disclose information concerning the regulation of financial institutions [(b)(8) of the FOIA]
b(9) Release would disclose geological or geophysical information concerning wells [(b)(9) of the FOIA]

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Luisa Alba de Morales
Dominican Republic

Dear Mrs. Morales,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Janet Jagan
Guyana

Dear Mrs. Jagan,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Delores Ingraham
The Bahamas

Dear Mrs. Ingraham,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Beverly Arthur
Barbardos

Dear Mrs. Arthur,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Kathleen Levy Esquivel
Belize

Dear Mrs. Esquivel,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Ximena Sánchez de Lozada
Bolivia

Dear Mrs. Sánchez de Lozada,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Lucia Flecha de Lima
Embassy of Brazil
Washington, DC 20008

Dear Mrs. Flecha de Lima,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Marta Larraechea de Frei
Chile

Dear Mrs. Frei,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Jacquin Samper
Colombia

Dear Mrs. Samper,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Josette Figueres
Costa Rica

Dear Mrs. Figueres,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Josefina Villalobos de Durán Ballén
Ecuador

Dear Mrs. Durán Ballén,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Elizabeth Calderón Sol
El Salvador

Dear Mrs. Calderón Sol,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. María Eugenia de Léon
Guatemala

Dear Mrs. Léon,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Bessie Reina
Honduras

Dear Mrs. Reina,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Nilda Patricia Zedillo
Mexico

Dear Mrs. Zedillo,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Ms. Cristiana Chamorro
Nicaragua

Dear Ms. Chamorro,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Dora Pérez Balladares
Panama

Dear Mrs. Balladares,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Ms. Keiko Sofia Fujimori Higuchi
Peru

Dear Ms. Higuchi,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Barbara Janice Compton
St. Lucia

Dear Mrs. Compton,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Hazel Manning
Trinidad and Tobago

Dear Mrs. Manning,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. María Julia Pou Lacalle
Uruguay

Dear Mrs. Lacalle,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

File
Summit

WORKPLAN
FOR THE FOLLOWUP OF THE
SYMPOSIUM ON CHILDREN OF THE AMERICAS
(DRAFT 3/2/95)

I. Equitable Access to Basic Health Services

Summit Goal: To reduce child mortality by one-third and maternal mortality by one-half by the year 2000. (Based on 1990 levels)

Objective: ELIMINATE MEASLES IN THE AMERICAS

Activity: Launch Measles Elimination campaign

Date/Place: Pan American Health Organization Headquarters
Washington, DC
April 7, 1995 9:00 am (tentative)

Purpose: To launch the "Measles Elimination Campaign" in the Americas which is expected to eliminate the indigenous transmission of measles by the year 2000.

Discussion:

Mrs. Clinton has been invited to launch this six year (1995 - 2000) project in the region of the Americas. Similar efforts are being organized in the other countries of the region where the respective First Ladies will also participate simultaneously in the launching of this initiative.

Outputs:

- Elimination of the indigenous transmission of measles by the year 2000.
- Increased vaccination coverage (DPT/Measles/OPV/BCG) to 95% in children under one year of age.
- 80% of women in childbearing age living in high risk areas will have been vaccinated with 2 doses of the Tetanus Toxoid (T.T.) vaccine.
- Weekly routine surveillance of fever and rash illnesses from at least 50% of all health establishments into their disease surveillance system in all countries.

- Computerized Rash and Fever Illness surveillance software installed in all countries for collecting and analyzing suspected measle cases.

- Annual country work plans showing the cost of different immunization activities by type of cost and source of funding in all countries.

- Updated norms and manuals which reflect the development of new vaccine technologies and improved methods of disease control.

- Regional laboratory network for supporting the processing of samples for measles diagnosis.

- Information exchange meetings of immunization managers (a minimum of 24 subregional meetings and 6 regional meetings during the life of project).

- InterAgency coordination through the InterAgency Coordination Committees (ICCs) consolidated in every country.

Specific Tasks:

- PAHO will instruct their field offices to organize an event involving the First Ladies in the respective countries to launch the Measles Campaign on April 7.

Encourage partnerships w/ as many groups as possible

- Mrs. Clinton will send a letter, attaching the Rapporteur's Report of the Miami Symposium, to the First Ladies in the Americas with a cover letter announcing her plans to launch the campaign on April 7 and encouraging them to promote similar events in their respective countries.

- Review the action plans that each country will prepare for the elimination of measles at the planned meeting of the Association of First Ladies to be held in Paraguay in October 1995.

- PAHO will seek funding for the support of the estimated $46 million Measles Elimination Project in the Americas through international and national sources.

Funding for the Activity:

(Pending input from PAHO)

Objective: REDUCE MATERNAL MORTALITY RATES IN THE AMERICAS

Activity: Maternal Mortality Conference

Date\Place:

Purpose:

Discussion:

Outputs:

Specific Tasks:

Funding for the Activity:

II. Universal Access to Education

Summit Goal: To achieve a primary completion rate of 100 percent and a secondary enrollment rate of at least 75 percent by the year 2010.

Objective: To achieve a significant increase in the number of girls who complete primary school.

Activity: International Conference on Girls' and Women's Education

Date/Place: Guatemala
July or August (proposed)

Purpose: To issue a declaration on girls' education and its role in the sustainable development of the Americas.

Discussion:

Research has demonstrated that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. When countries focus resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in infant, child and maternal mortality; individual and family nutrition and health; domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity; democratic participation and individual and family well being.

Guatemala has promoted an innovative Girls' Education Initiative that counts on the support of public and private sector leaders and is receiving financial support from the Japanese, IDB and World Bank as well as the Guatemalan private and public sectors. Guatemala also has one of the lowest levels for girls education in the region and thus would serve as an interesting site to discuss the issues confronting the achievement of girls completing primary school.

Outputs:

- Provide an impetus for girls education as an important component of sustainable development in all countries of the region.

- Build consensus among key actors so that girls' education is seen as a social and economic development issue, not a gender issue.

- Establish country and hemispheric targets for addressing specific country and hemispheric barriers to girls' education and for achieving increased enrollment and completion rates for girls in primary and secondary school.

- Issue a Declaration on girls education and its role in the sustainable development of the Americas.

Specific Tasks:

- Mrs. De Leon could host the international conference in Guatemala and invite Mrs. Clinton to launch the event.

- Mrs. Clinton could address the participants by highlighting the importance of investing in education of girls as a sound development investment for countries with limited resources.

- The conference could provide an opportunity for the participants of the region to examine international research on girls' education, to share lessons learned from each country in the Americas on effective policies, programs and practices for increasing educational opportunities for girls, to present reports from each country on specific barriers to girls' education and strategies for addressing barriers, and to discuss strategies for promoting public and private-sector collaboration.

- Participants at the conference could visit schools and communities where girls' education projects are currently being implemented. They will be able to observe first-hand the effects of the public and private sector collaboration that is now benefitting girls, boys, families, and communities in Guatemala.

- A planning team representing the international and national community could be established to provide logistical and technical support to those hosting the conference.

- USAID could send its coordinator on girl's and women's education to Guatemala to manage the planning process with the planning team.

Funding for this Activity:

(Pending input from IDB???)

Objective: To galvanize the educational reform movement in the Americas.

Activity:

Withdrawal/Redaction Marker
Clinton Library

DOCUMENT NO. AND TYPE	SUBJECT/TITLE	DATE	RESTRICTION
001. list	re: DOBs [partial] (1 page)	03/03/1995	b(6)

COLLECTION:
Clinton Presidential Records
First Lady's Office
Melanne Verveer
OA/Box Number: 20054

FOLDER TITLE:
Summit: Follow-Up

2013-0534-S
rc1771

RESTRICTION CODES

Presidential Records Act - [44 U.S.C. 2204(a)]

P1 National Security Classified Information [(a)(1) of the PRA]
P2 Relating to the appointment to Federal office [(a)(2) of the PRA]
P3 Release would violate a Federal statute [(a)(3) of the PRA]
P4 Release would disclose trade secrets or confidential commercial or financial information [(a)(4) of the PRA]
P5 Release would disclose confidential advice between the President and his advisors, or between such advisors [a)(5) of the PRA]
P6 Release would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy [(a)(6) of the PRA]

C. Closed in accordance with restrictions contained in donor's deed of gift.
PRM. Personal record misfile defined in accordance with 44 U.S.C. 2201(3).
RR. Document will be reviewed upon request.

Freedom of Information Act - [5 U.S.C. 552(b)]

b(1) National security classified information [(b)(1) of the FOIA]
b(2) Release would disclose internal personnel rules and practices of an agency [(b)(2) of the FOIA]
b(3) Release would violate a Federal statute [(b)(3) of the FOIA]
b(4) Release would disclose trade secrets or confidential or financial information [(b)(4) of the FOIA]
b(6) Release would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy [(b)(6) of the FOIA]
b(7) Release would disclose information compiled for law enforcement purposes [(b)(7) of the FOIA]
b(8) Release would disclose information concerning the regulation of financial institutions [(b)(8) of the FOIA]
b(9) Release would disclose geological or geophysical information concerning wells [(b)(9) of the FOIA]

File
Summit

Friday, March 3, 1995
10:30 am Hemispheric Meeting

1 - Mark Schneider 647-8247
USAID
DOB: (b)(6)
Gloria

2 - Robert Ledogar 212-326-7783
UNICEF
(b)(6)

3 - Richard Feinberg 456-9131
NSC
Tony Masuchi

4 - Liliana Ayalde 647-9549
USAID
(b)(6)

5 - Irene Klinger 861-3194
PAHO/WHO
(b)(6)

6 - Nan Burroughs 623-1396
IDB
(For Muni Figueres de Jimenez)
Will cb to confirm.

(b)(6)

Joao Yunes

(b)(6) [001]

Withdrawal/Redaction Marker
Clinton Library

DOCUMENT NO. AND TYPE	SUBJECT/TITLE	DATE	RESTRICTION
002. list	re: DOBs [partial] (1 page)	03/03/1995	b(6)

COLLECTION:
Clinton Presidential Records
First Lady's Office
Melanne Verveer
OA/Box Number: 20054

FOLDER TITLE:
Summit: Follow-Up

2013-0534-S
rc1771

RESTRICTION CODES

Presidential Records Act - [44 U.S.C. 2204(a)]

P1 National Security Classified Information [(a)(1) of the PRA]
P2 Relating to the appointment to Federal office [(a)(2) of the PRA]
P3 Release would violate a Federal statute [(a)(3) of the PRA]
P4 Release would disclose trade secrets or confidential commercial or financial information [(a)(4) of the PRA]
P5 Release would disclose confidential advice between the President and his advisors, or between such advisors [a)(5) of the PRA]
P6 Release would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy [(a)(6) of the PRA]

C. Closed in accordance with restrictions contained in donor's deed of gift.
PRM. Personal record misfile defined in accordance with 44 U.S.C. 2201(3).
RR. Document will be reviewed upon request.

Freedom of Information Act - [5 U.S.C. 552(b)]

b(1) National security classified information [(b)(1) of the FOIA]
b(2) Release would disclose internal personnel rules and practices of an agency [(b)(2) of the FOIA]
b(3) Release would violate a Federal statute [(b)(3) of the FOIA]
b(4) Release would disclose trade secrets or confidential or financial information [(b)(4) of the FOIA]
b(6) Release would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy [(b)(6) of the FOIA]
b(7) Release would disclose information compiled for law enforcement purposes [(b)(7) of the FOIA]
b(8) Release would disclose information concerning the regulation of financial institutions [(b)(8) of the FOIA]
b(9) Release would disclose geological or geophysical information concerning wells [(b)(9) of the FOIA]

Friday, March 3, 1995
10:30 am Hemispheric Meeting

1 -	Mark Schneider USAID DOB: (b)(6) [002] Gloria	647-8247
2 -	Robert Ledogar UNICEF (b)(6)	212-326-7783
3 -	Richard Feinberg NSC Tony Masuchi	456-9131
4 -	Liliana Ayalde USAID (b)(6)	647-9549
5 -	Irene Klinger PAHO/WHO (b)(6)	861-3194
6 -	Muni Figueres de Jimenez IDB Nan Burroughs Will cb to confirm	623-1396

Before 2:00pm

→ 1/19/94 Mtg

10:30

Name	Organization	Phone
Nicole Rabner	Office of the First Lady	202/456-6266
J. INGEBAK	UNICEF	211 ~~826 4477~~
Liliana Ayalde	USAID	202/647-9549
Melanne Verveer	OFL	202/456-6266
MARK L SCHNEIDER	USAID	202/647-8247
IRENE KLINGER	~~PAHO~~/WHO	202/861-3194
JOAO YUNES	PAHO/WHO	202/861-3250
Pam Burroughs for Muni Figueres	Inter-American Development Bank de Jimenez	(202) 623-1396
Richard Feinberg	NSC	202/456-9131

→ Roxanna

Robert Ledogar

212/326-7783

Friday

Clinton Library Transfer Form

Case #, if applicable	2013-0534-S	Accession #
Collection/Record Group	Clinton Presidential Records	Series/Staff Name	Melanne Verveer
Subgroup/Office of Origin	First Lady's Office	Subseries
Folder Title	Summit: Follow-Up	OA Number	20054	Box Number
Description of Item(s)	25 photos from the Symposium on Children of the Americas featuring HRC

Donor Information

Last Name:		First Name:		Middle Name:		Title:
Affiliation:		Phone (Wk):		Phone (Hm):
Street:		City:		State (or Country):		Zip:

Transferred to:	Audio/Visual Department
Other (Specify):
Transferred by:	Brittany Cochran
Transfer Point
Date of Tranfer	6/26/2014

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

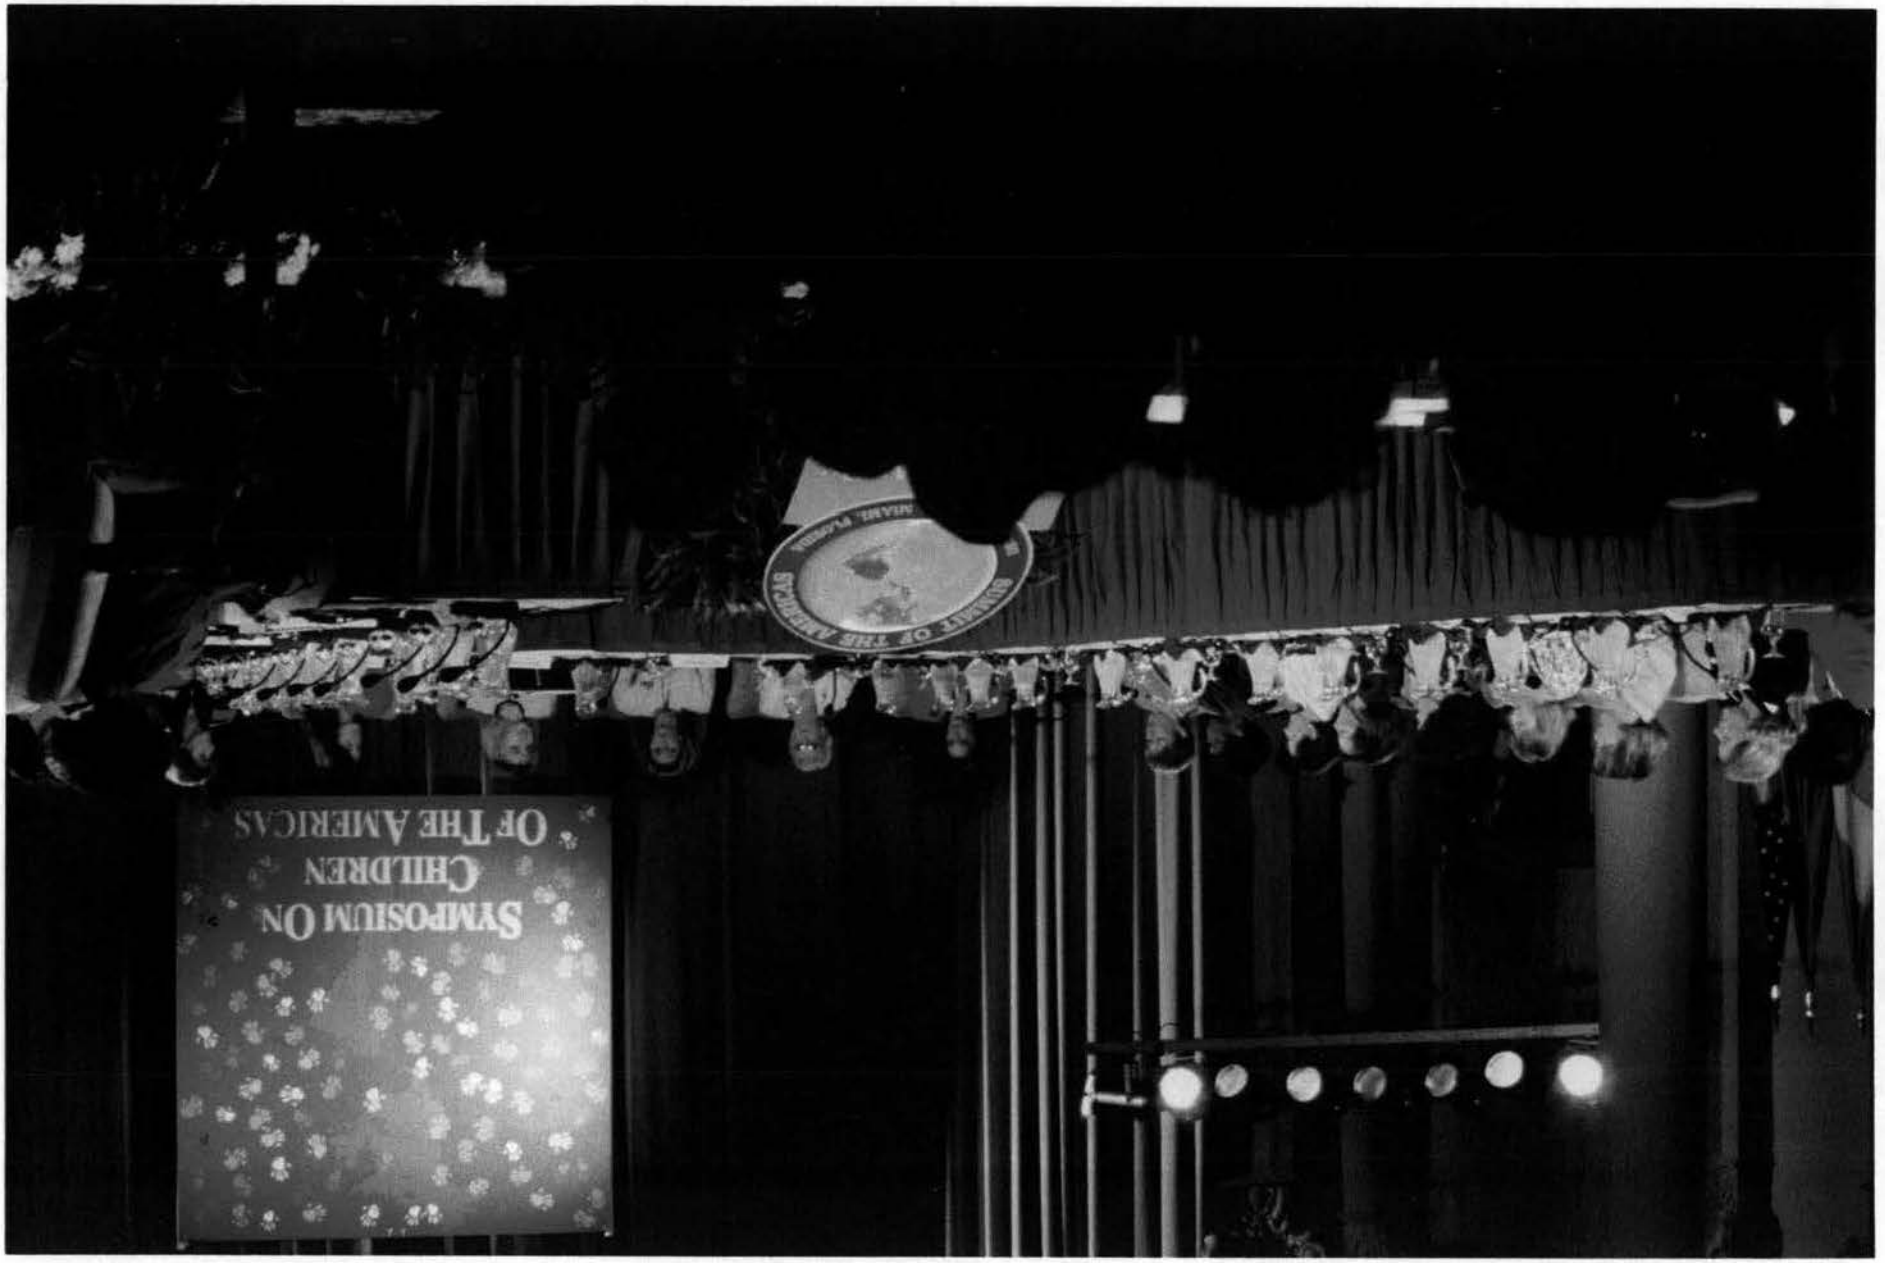
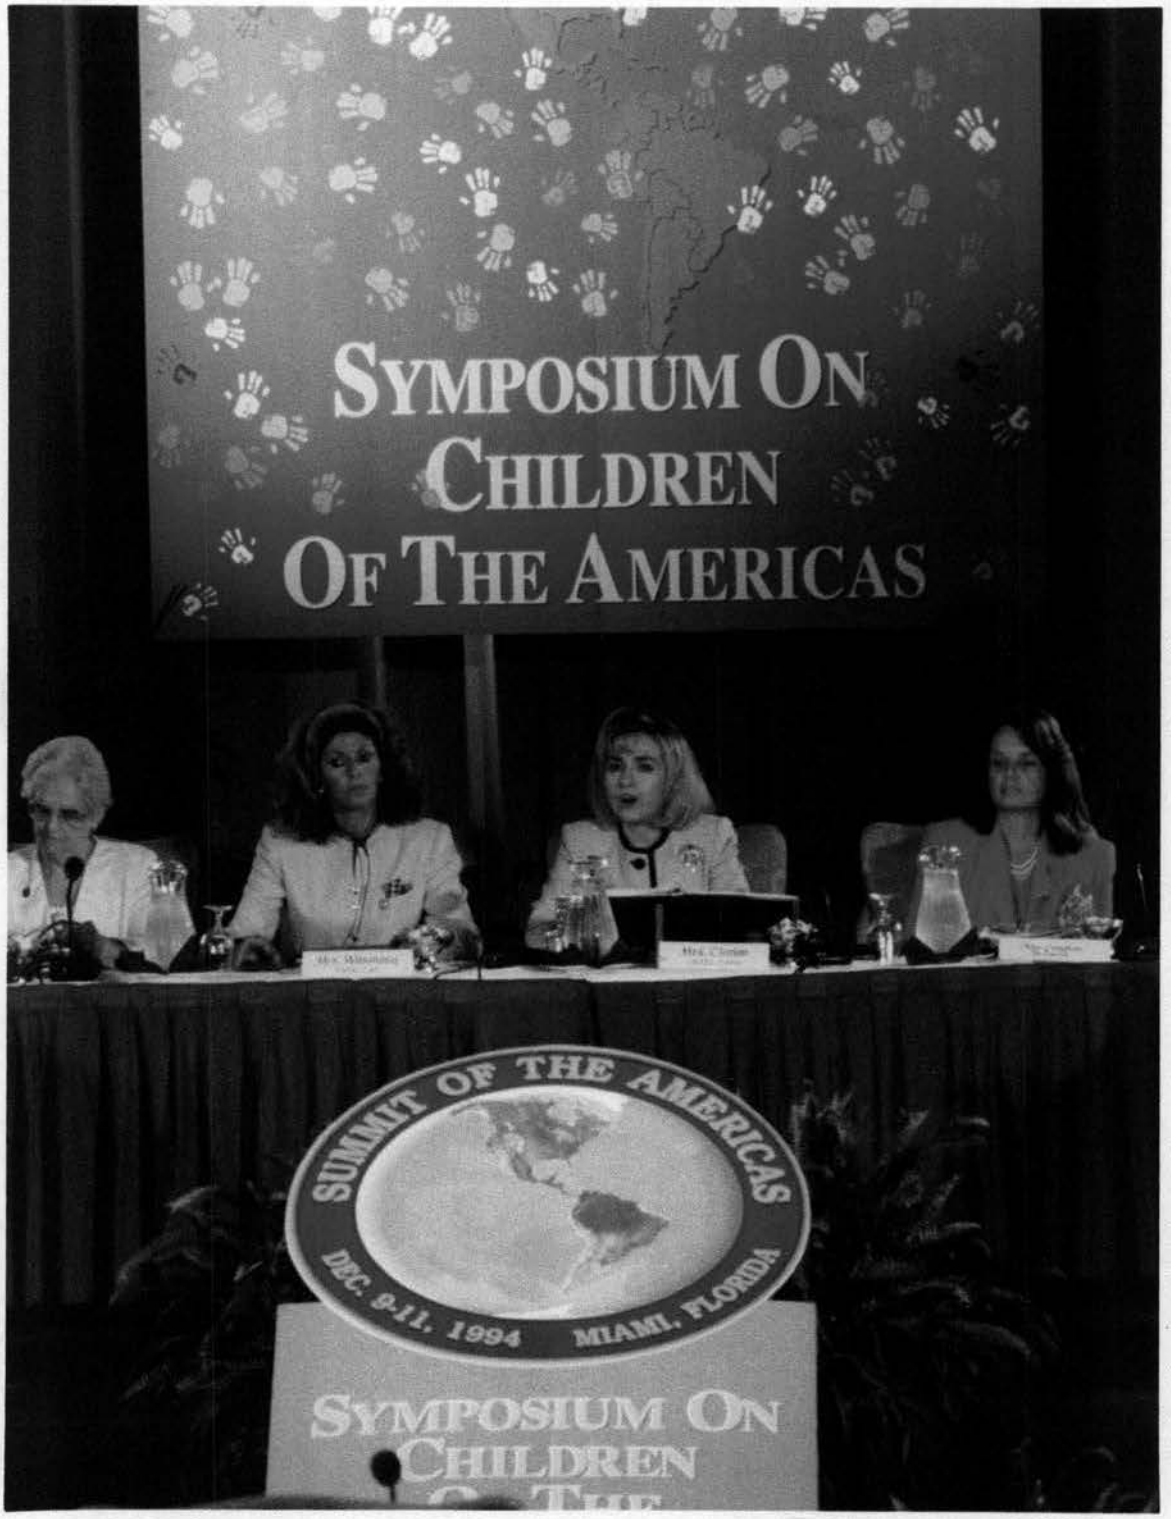
PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION



PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION



PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

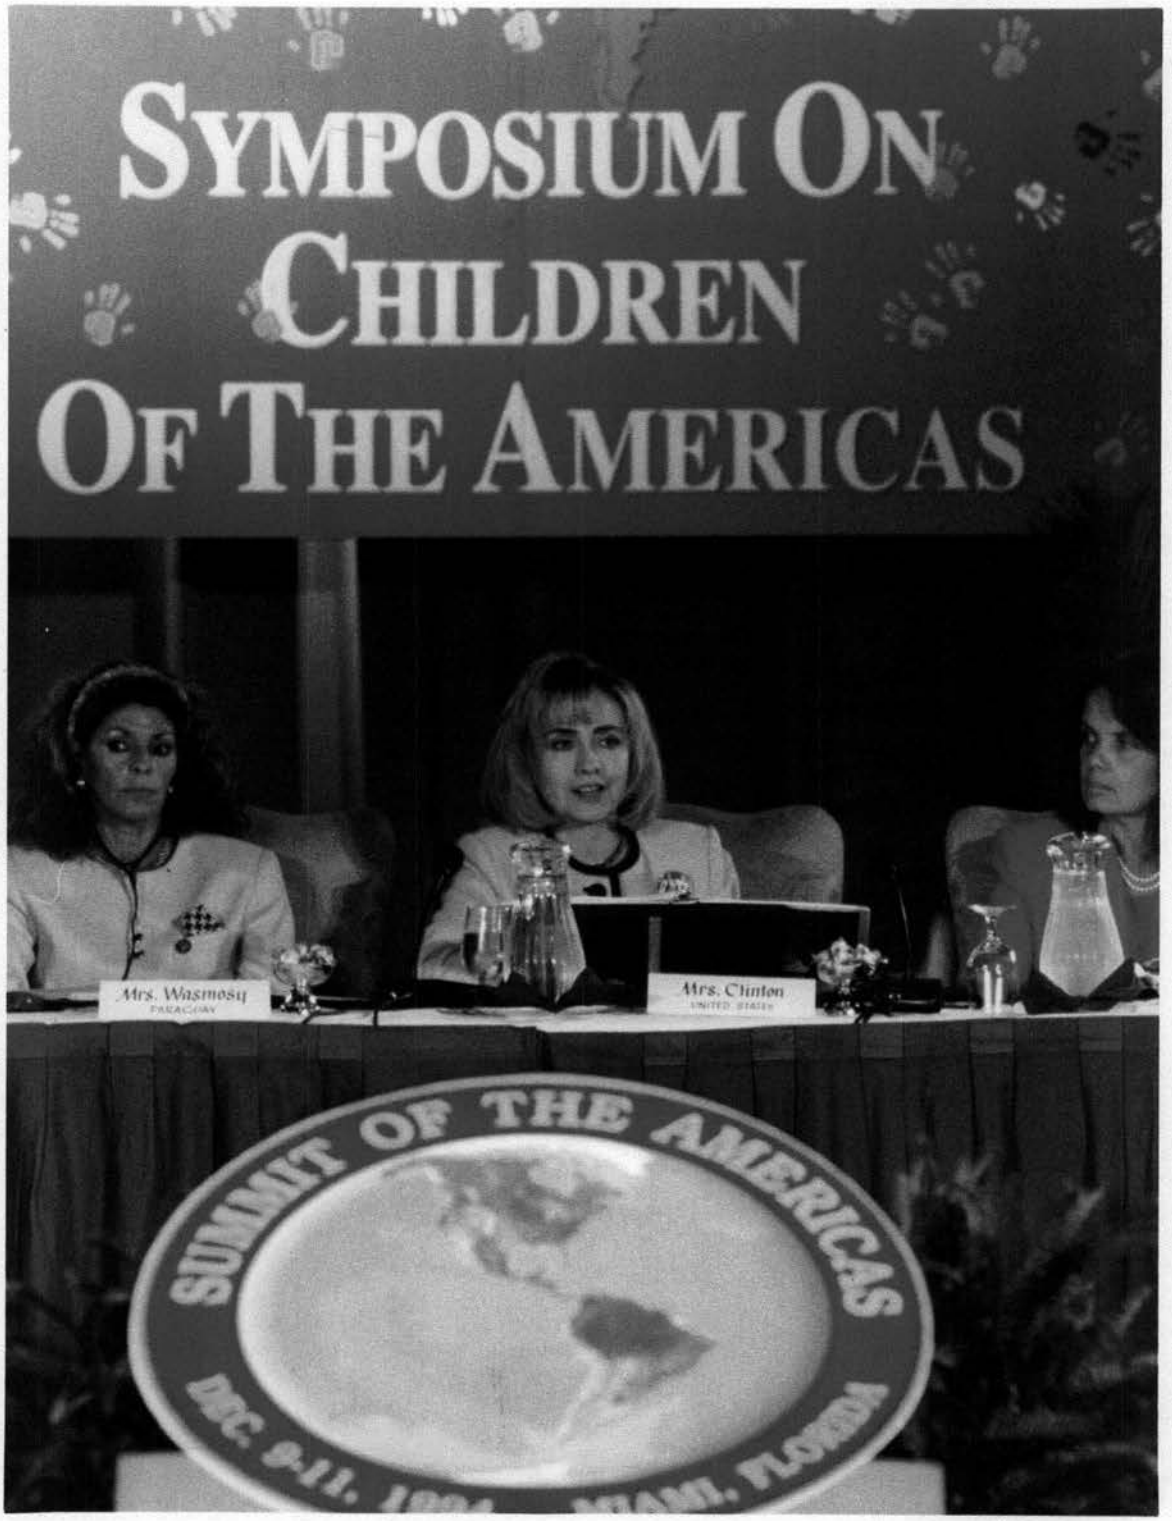
PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

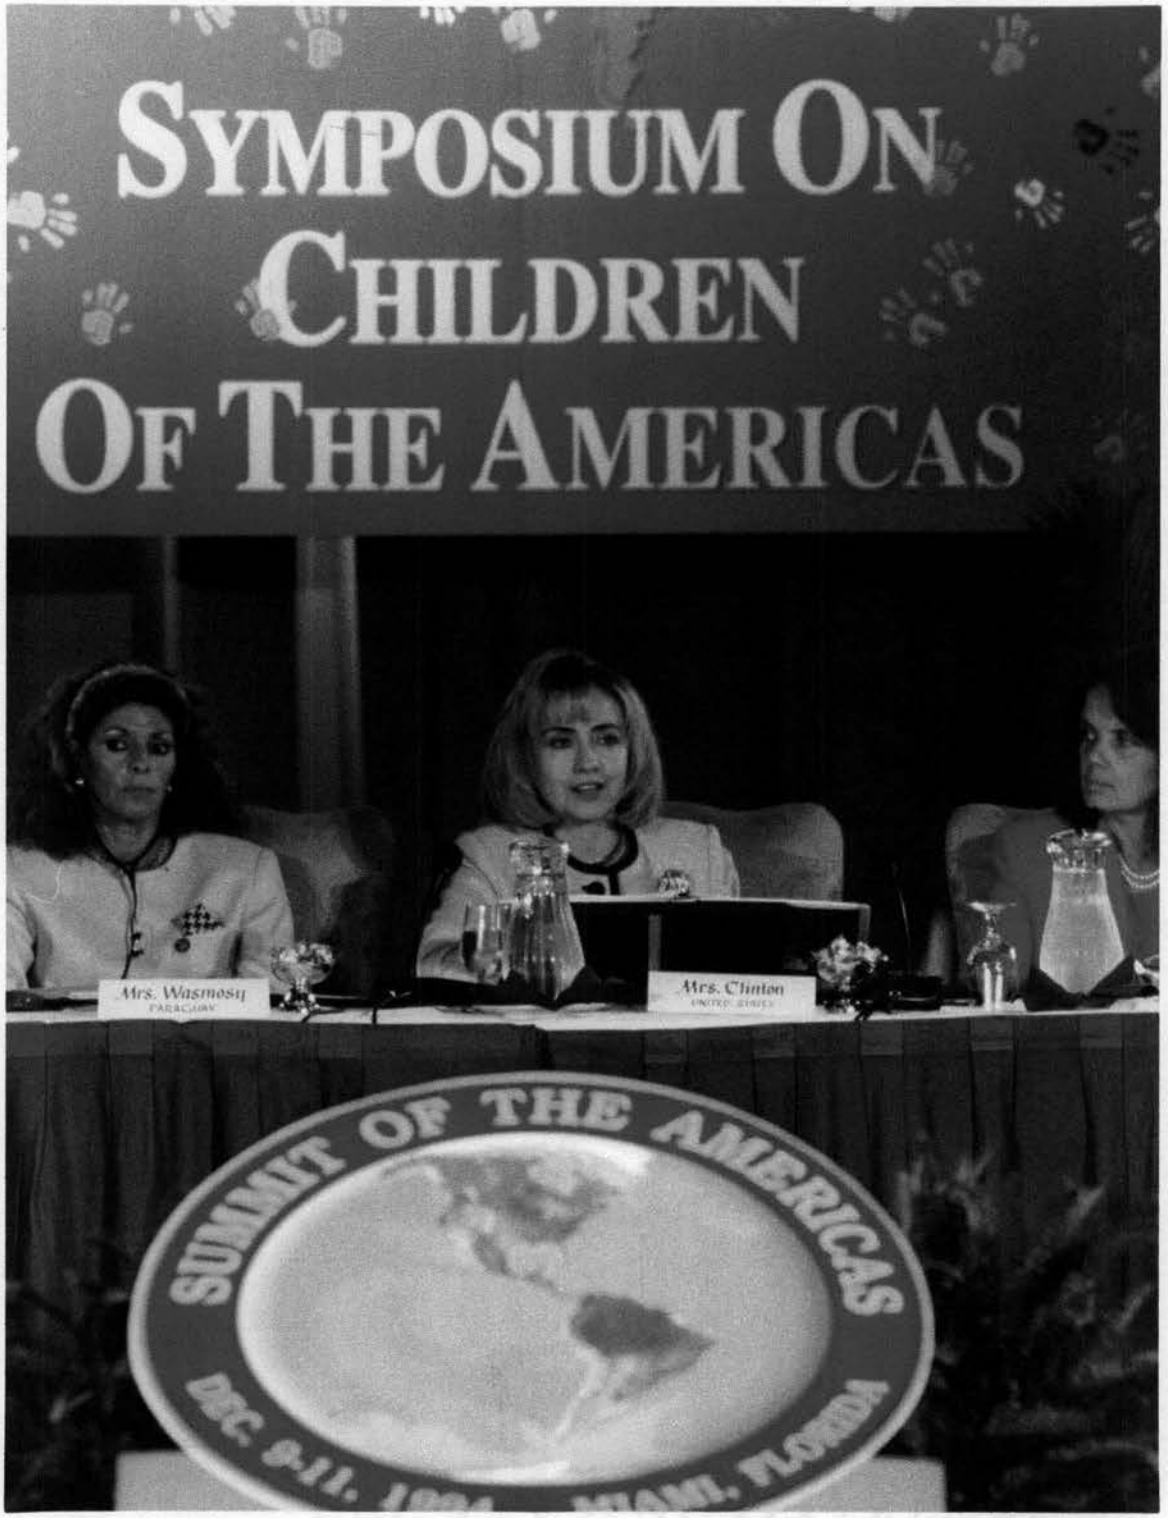
PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION



PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION



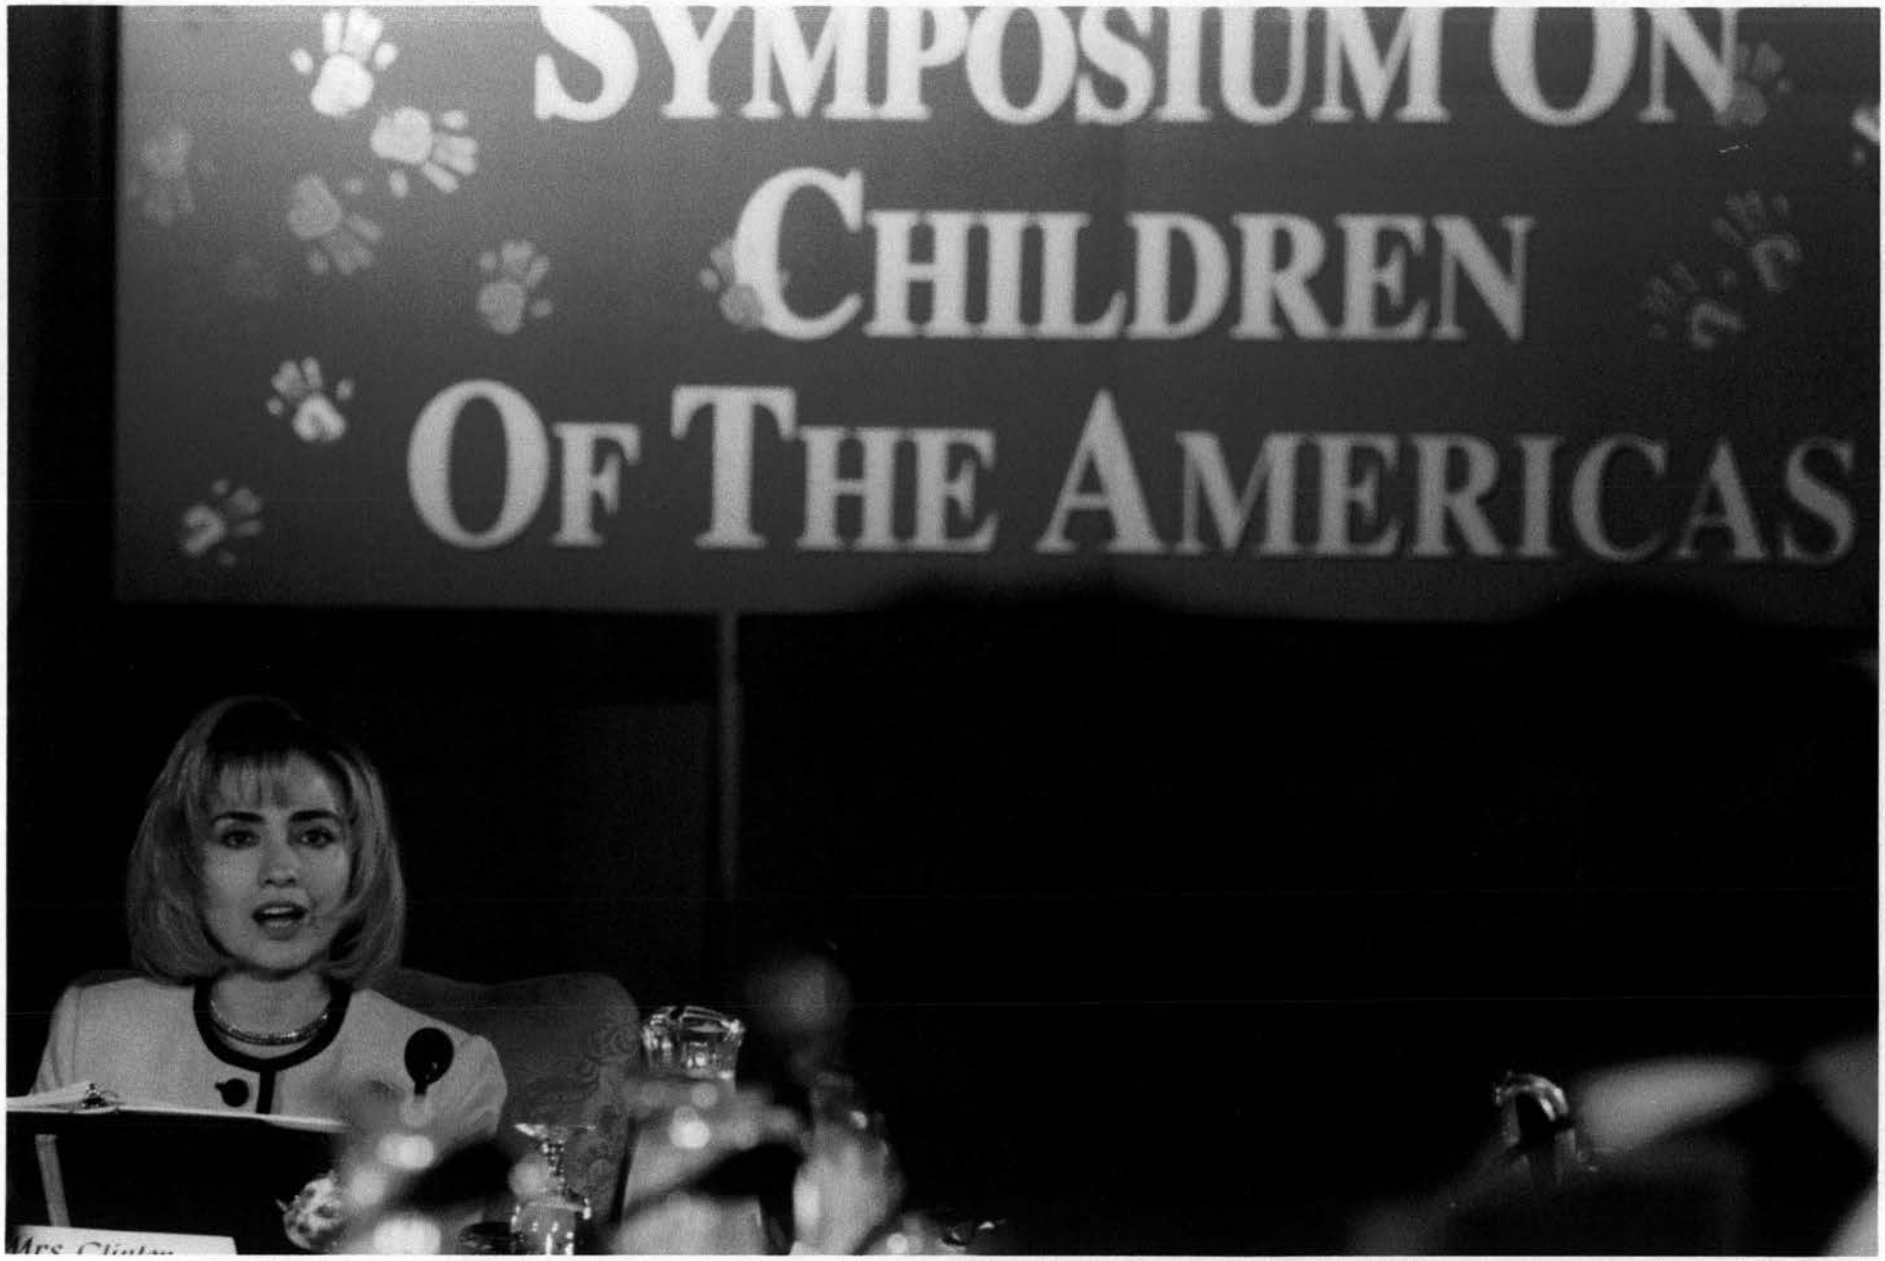
PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION



PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

PHOTOCOPY
PRESERVATION

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Alicia Pietri Caldera
Venezuela

Dear Mrs. Caldera,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

As you know, this past December many of the Wives of Heads of State and Government met during the Summit of the Americas to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing children on our Hemisphere. We were sorry you could not join us. Through the contibutions of so many present, we identified three areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Patricia Bird
Antigua and Barbuda

Dear Mrs. Bird,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

As you know, this past December many of the Wives of Heads of State and Government met during the Summit of the Americas to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing children on our Hemisphere. We were sorry you could not join us. Through the contibutions of so many present, we identified three areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Jean Brizen
Grenada

Dear Mrs. Brizen,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

As you know, this past December many of the Wives of Heads of State and Government met during the Summit of the Americas to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing children on our Hemisphere. We were sorry you could not join us. Through the contibutions of so many present, we identified three areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Liesbeth Venetiaan-Vanenburg
Suriname

Dear Mrs. Venetiaan-Vanenburg,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

As you know, this past December many of the Wives of Heads of State and Government met during the Summit of the Americas to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing children on our Hemisphere. We were sorry you could not join us. Through the contibutions of so many present, we identified three areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Ruth Cardoso
Brazil

Dear Mrs. Cardoso,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

As you know, this past December many of the Wives of Heads of State and Government met during the Summit of the Americas to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing children on our Hemisphere. We were sorry you could not join us. Through the contibutions of so many present, we identified three areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Maarta Canessa de Sanguinetti
Uruguay

Dear Mrs. Sanguinetti,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

As you know, this past December many of the Wives of Heads of State and Government met during the Summit of the Americas to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing children on our Hemisphere. We were sorry you could not join us. Through the contibutions of so many present, we identified three areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Mary Kennedy
St. Kitts and Nevis

Dear Mrs. Kennedy,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

As you know, this past December many of the Wives of Heads of State and Government met during the Summit of the Americas to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing children on our Hemisphere. We were sorry you could not join us. Through the contibutions of so many present, we identified three areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Luisa Alba de Morales
Dominican Republic

Dear Mrs. Morales,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Aline Chrétien
Canada

Dear Mrs. Chrétien,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Janet Jagan
Guyana

Dear Mrs. Jagan,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Delores Ingraham
The Bahamas

Dear Mrs. Ingraham,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Beverly Arthur
Barbardos

Dear Mrs. Arthur,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Kathleen Levy Esquivel
Belize

Dear Mrs. Esquivel,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Ximena Sánchez de Lozada
Bolivia

Dear Mrs. Sánchez de Lozada,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Lucia Flecha de Lima
Embassy of Brazil
Washington, DC 20008

Dear Mrs. Flecha de Lima,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Marta Larraechea de Frei
Chile

Dear Mrs. Frei,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Jacquin Samper
Colombia

Dear Mrs. Samper,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Josette Figueres
Costa Rica

Dear Mrs. Figueres,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Josefina Villalobos de Durán Ballén
Ecuador

Dear Mrs. Durán Ballén,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Elizabeth Calderón Sol
El Salvador

Dear Mrs. Calderón Sol,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. María Eugenia de Léon
Guatemala

Dear Mrs. Léon,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Bessie Reina
Honduras

Dear Mrs. Reina,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Nilda Patricia Zedillo
Mexico

Dear Mrs. Zedillo,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Ms. Cristiana Chamorro
Nicaragua

Dear Ms. Chamorro,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in follcwing up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Dora Pérez Balladares
Panama

Dear Mrs. Balladares,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami ar.d reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Ms. Keiko Sofia Fujimori Higuchi
Peru

Dear Ms. Higuchi,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Barbara Janice Compton
St. Lucia

Dear Mrs. Compton,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. Hazel Manning
Trinidad and Tobago

Dear Mrs. Manning,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 24, 1995

Mrs. María Julia Pou Lacalle
Uruguay

Dear Mrs. Lacalle,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Melanne -

This is the note from Leila.

- KT

Liliana
647-0102

To: Liliana Ayalde
From: Katy Bolton

To: Melanne Verveer, Deputy Chief of Staff to Mrs. Clinton

Fax #: (202) 456-6244

From: Leila Rachid, Technical Advisor to Mrs. Wasmosy

Date: March 23, 1995

By means of this fax, Mrs. Maria Teresa Carrasco de Wasmosy, First Lady of the Republic of Paraguay, informs the Office of the First Lady of the United States of America, Mrs. Hillary Rodham Clinton, that she is in agreement with the draft of the letter regarding the follow-up of the Symposium in Miami that would be sent by Mrs. Clinton to the First Ladies of the Americas.

It would be important, however, that in the letter Mrs. Clinton mention the proposed projects being defined with international organizations of cooperation in the areas of health and education. She could inform on the first initiative of the Measles Elimination and Immunizations in the Americas Campaign (A Call for Action), as well as on the project she presented at the Summit in Copenhagen, regarding the education of girls.

In addition, please note that on April 7, Mrs. Wasmosy will also be participating in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign in Paraguay.

Sincerely yours,

SUMMIT OF THE AMERICAS 1994

SUMMIT COORDINATING OFFICE
Room 3248
Department of State
Washington, D.C. 20520

SUMMIT COORDINATING OFFICE
FAX TRANSMISSION COVER SHEET

Tel: 202- 736-7533
Fax: 202 -736-7618

Date: APRIL 3, 1995

To: MS. KATY BUTTON

Fax: 202-456-6244

Subject: LIST OF FIRST LADIES (NON-ATTENDEE'S)

Sender: Kelly Cohen

YOU SHOULD RECEIVE 2 PAGE(S), INCLUDING THIS COVER SHEET. IF YOU DO NOT RECEIVE ALL THE PAGES, PLEASE CALL 202-736-7533

Comments:

SESCO 2415

Per your fax under 'No Representatives attending' please see below for listing of first ladies, where applicable.

- Antigua and Barbuda: Patricia Bird 362-5122 fax # 809-462-3225

Argentina: Pres. is separated from his wife and the one fulfilling those duties are the daughter. It should be addressed as follows: Zulemita Menem (daughter)

- Grenada: Prime Minister's wife, Jean Brizen 265-2561 — fax # 1-809-440-4116

Haiti:

Jamaica: No first lady, Prime Minister (PM) unmarried;

- St. Kitts and Nevis: Mrs. Evelyn Arrindell 686-2636 — wife of governor general

St. Lucia: Mrs. Janice Compton

St. Vincent and the Grenadines: No first lady, PM unmarried

- Suriname: Liesbeth Venetiaan-Vanenburg 244-7488 fax # 597-4752-66

- Venezuela: Alicia Pietri Caldera 342-2214 — fax # (285-18-71)/(285-23-71) ~~phone #~~

745-2700
fax # -

Uruguay - Maarta Canessa de Sanguinetti - embassy - 202/331-1313
fax # - 5982-8075-61

- Mary Kennedy
PM's fax # 809-465-1001
- St. Kitts + Nevis

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs Maarta Caressa DeSanguinetti

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # ~~[illegible]~~ 5982-8075-61

PHONE # _____

OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Urgent.

SENT

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Ximena Sanchez de Lozada

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 011-591-2-~~783593~~ 35-69-73

PHONE # 011-591-2-786359

 # OF PAGES (including cover) _____

COMMENTS ¡URGENTE!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Hazel Manning

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 809-624-~~6783~~ 4285

PHONE # 809-624-6783

 # OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS URGENT

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Dora Boyd de Perez Balladares

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 011-507-27-4640 or 507-28-1061

PHONE # 011-507-27-4176

 # OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS ¡Urgente!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Jacquin Samper

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 011-571-284-8399

PHONE # 011-571-233-4781

 # OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS I UR GENTE!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Bessy Watson de Reina

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 011-504-393-156

PHONE # 011-504-391-017

 # OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS ¡URGENTE!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Marta Larraechea de Frei

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 011-562-698-4084

PHONE # 011-562-696-0629

 # OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS ¡URGENTE!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Nilda Patricia Zedillo

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 011-525-782-4109

PHONE # 011-525-782-4105

 # OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS ¡URGENTE!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Delores Ingraham

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 809-327-5806

PHONE # 809-327-5826

OF PAGES (including cover) _____

COMMENTS _____

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Josette Figueres

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 011-506-224-0863

PHONE # 011-506-253-7525

 # OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS ¡UR GENTE!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Beverly Arthur

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 809-436-5811

PHONE # 809-429-5171

 # OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Elizabeth Aguirre de Calderon Sol

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 011-503-298-2003

PHONE #

OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS ¡Urgente!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Maria Eugenia de Leon

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 011-502-2-51-56-67

PHONE # 011-502-239-3339

 # OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS ¡Urgente!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Janet Jagan

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 011-5922-69969

PHONE # 011-5922-71574

 # OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS ¡Urgente!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Aline Chrétien

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 613-995-0101

PHONE # 613-992-4211

 # OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Luisa Alba de Morales

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 202-265-8057

PHONE # 202-332-6280

 # OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Please deliver to Mrs. Morales by FAX Monday morning. If you have any questions, call Katy Button at 456-6266.

Thank you.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Lucia Flecha de Lima

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 202-745-2827

PHONE # 202-745-2700

 # OF PAGES (including cover) _____

COMMENTS Please deliver to Mrs. de Lima by FAX Monday morning. If you have any questions, call Katy Button at 456-6266.

Thank you.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Ms. Keiko Sofia Fujimori Higuchi

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 202-659-8124

PHONE # 202-833-9860

 # OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Please deliver to Ms. Higuchi by FAX Monday morning. If you have any questions, call Katy Button at 456-6266.

Thank you.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Barbara Janice Compton

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 809-453-7352

PHONE #

OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Urgent!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Kathleen Levy Esquivel

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 011-501-8233-23

PHONE #

OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Urgent!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Ms. Cristiana Chamorro

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 5052-28-7911

PHONE #

OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Urgent!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Josefina Villalobos de Durán Ballén

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 011 - 5932 - 580 - [redacted] 735

PHONE #

OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Urgent!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs Alicia Pietri Caldera

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # ~~[illegible]~~ 5561-226-9177

PHONE # _____

OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Urgent!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs Patricia Bird

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 809-462-3225

PHONE #

OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Urgent!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs Joan Brizen

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 1-809-440-4116

PHONE #

OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Urgent!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs. Liesbeth Venetiaan-Vanenburg

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 597-4752-66

PHONE #

OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Urgent!

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs Ruth Cardoso

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 5561-226-9177

PHONE # 5561-211-1055 (1056).

OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Urgent

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Mrs Mary Kennedy

FROM Hillary Rodham Clinton

FAX # 809-465-1001

PHONE #

OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Urgent.

FIRST LADY CONTACT LIST

Antigua and Barbuda
Patricia Bird — Prime Minister's Office 809-462-4956
Joyce Edwards
Chief of Protocol 809-462-3962
Mrs. Ina Thomas

Argentina
Zulema Menem(daughter)

Bahamas
Delores Ingraham — Prime Minister's office
809-327-5826
FAX- 809-327-5806

Barbados
Beverly Arthur — At the Residence 809-429-5171
12\5 spoke sith Mrs. Arthur , she is going to nyc tomorrow and on to Miami on Thurs. she will attend the Children's hosp tour
FAX 809-436-5811

Belize
Kathleen Levy Esquivel — P.M.'s Office 011-501-822346
her work # 011-501-244880

Bolivia
Ximena Sanchez de Lozada
011-591-2-786359
011-591-2-782535
FAX 011-591-2-783593

Canada
Aline Chretien — PM's office 613-992-4211
Chaviva Hosek
FAX- 613-995-0101

Chile
Marta Larrachea de Frei
Chief of Staff 011-562-696-0629
Veronica Barahona

Columbia
Jacquin Samper
Maria Leticia Ortega
011-571-233-4781
-281-2826
FAX -11-571-284-8399
contact at DC embassy: Andrea Ruiz 797-3917(fax)

Costa Rica
Josette Altman de Figueres — 011-506-253-7525

Dominican Republic
Luisa Alba de Morales
Wife of the Sec'y of State for foreign affairs 809-533-4121

Ecuador
Josefina Duran-Ballen — 011-5932-580-083

Presidency

El Salvador
Elizabeth Aguirre de Calderon Sol
011-503-298-2003
-0121
The Residence

Grenada
Mrs. Pansy Brathwaite 011-809-440-2404

Guatemala
Maria Eugenia de Leon 011-502-239-3339
Presidential House
FAX 011-502-51-56-67

Guyana
Janet Jagan
President's office
011-5922-71574
*75267
*57010
*77860
*Presidential Residence
FAX 011-5922 69969

Honduras
Bessy Watson de Reina
Protocol Asst. 011-504-343401
Mrs. Ligia Mayr 011-504-391017
-391011
FAX -393156

Mexico
Nilda Patricia Velasco de Zedillo sec'y of the Pres.
Libano Saenz
011 525-515-3717
-0528
Cellular 504-2285

Nicaragua
Cristiana Chamorro (daughter of the Pres.)
011-505-2-287519
284190

Panama
Dora Boyd de Perez Balladares 011-507-27-4176 - FAX 27-4340 28-1061
011-507-27-0683
Presidential Palace-OFL

Paraguay
Mrs Maria Teresa de Wasmosy 011-595-21-290753
-290757
Office of the First Lady

Peru
Keiko Fujimori (daughter of Pres.) Maricarmen will callback

St. Kitts and Nevis
Mary Simmonds 809-465-2103
-2521
Pres. Personal Asst.

Phone Calls

Paraguay

no one in Mrs. Wasmosy's office spoke English,Call on Monday
011-595-21-290753 FAX 011595-21-291631
12\5 spoke with Lisa DeRosa, she'll call if they have any Q's

Trinidad and Tobago

spoke with Mrs. Manning, discussed the Sat. program and said we would fax agenda 809-624-6783
809-627-4285 FAX

Chile

Mrs. Frei
Call Veronica Barahona (Chief of staff) on Monday
011-562-696-0629
FAX -698-4084

Mexico

Mrs. Zedillo
spoke with Andrian Berruga (Mrs. Z's advisor) 525-782-4105
FAX 525-782-4109
he thought Mrs. Z. had to report to the Summit leaders, I cleared that up please Fax him the list of Education countries when it's ready

Costa Rica

Mrs. Figueres spoke with Rolando Quiros, advisor to the First Lady Questions:
Overhaead projector Audience size order of speakers Trinidad
Bolivia
Costa Rica
Where--Biltmore Hotel
8 am resource table for her presentation
FAX 506-224-0863
011-506-253-7525

Guyana

Spoke with Mrs. Janet Jagan and her husband, she is comfortable with her role and will wait for our agenda 011-5922-65875 Mrs. Jagan's direct line
011-5922-62471 (switchboard)

Bolivia

Mrs. Lozada didn't speak to her because our contact is Beatrice Bedaga at the DC Embassy 483-4410
FAX 328-3712
she needs agenda when it's ready

Colombia

Please fax agenda to Andrea Ruiz at DC embassy 797-3917

St. Lucia
Janice Compton — 809-452-6519 personal asst. to the PM

Suriname
Liesbeth Anita Maria Venetiaan — 011-597-47-2841
Cabinet of the President

Trinidad and Tobago
Hazel Manning — 809-624-6783 residence
FAX 627-4285

Uruguay
Maria Julia Pou de Lacalle — 011-59-82-472-110
FAX-

Venezuela
Alicia Pietri de Caldera — 011-58-2-284-6322
FAX -285-1871

Not a participant

Summit of the Americas
First Ladies Working Groups

	WORKING GROUP
BAHAMAS
Mrs. Delores Ingraham	Education
BARBADOS
Mrs. Beverley Arthur	Youth
BELIZE
Mrs. Kathleen Levy Esquivel	Education
BOLIVIA
Mrs. Ximena Sánchez de Lozada	Education
BRAZIL
Mrs. Lucia Flecha de Lima	Youth
CANADA
Mrs. Aline Chrétien	Youth
CHILE
Mrs. Marta Larraechea de Frei	Youth (chair)
COLOMBIA
Mrs. Jacquin Samper	Youth
COSTA RICA
Mrs. Josette Figueres	Education
DOMINICAN REBUBLIC
Mrs. Luisa Alba de Morales	Health
ECUADOR
Mrs. Josefina Villalobos de Durán Ballén	Health
EL SALVADOR
Mrs. Elizabeth Calderón Sol	Health
GUATEMELA
Mrs. María Eugenia De Léon	Health
GUYANA
Mrs. Janet Jagan	Health (chair)
HONDURAS
Mrs. Bessie Reina	Youth
MEXICO
Mrs. Nilda Patricia Zedillo	Education (chair)
NICARAGUA
Mrs. Christiana Chamorro	Youth
PANAMA
Mrs. Dora Pérez Balladares	Youth
PARAGUAY
Mrs. María Teresa de Wasmosy	Health
PERU
Ms. Keiko Sofia Fujimori Higuchi	Education

Letter to Wives of Heads of State and Government of the Americas:

Dear _____,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December, and discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

or (for First Ladies who did not attend)

As you know, this past December, many of the Wives of Heads of State and Government met during the Summit of the Americas to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. We were sorry you could not join us. Through the contributions of so many present, we identified three areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

each continues..

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we as First Ladies of the Hemisphere engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, Mrs. Clinton will be participating in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will be leading a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmition of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what has been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education (which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th UN World Conference on Women in Beijing). The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a committment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Liliana Ayalde

FROM Katy Button

FAX # 647-0102

PHONE #

OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Liliana - Here is a sample letter. We really need to get these out today, so let me know ASAP if they are okay.

Thanks -
Katy

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY

phone 202-456-6266
fax 202-456-6244

TO Terry Miller

FROM Katy Button

FAX # 736- ~~7108~~ 7618

PHONE # 647- 0746

OF PAGES (including cover) 3

COMMENTS Terry - Here is a sample of the latest version.

-Katy

SUMMIT
OF THE AMERICAS
SUMMIT
OF THE AMERICAS

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON
March 24, 1995

(copy of text of letter)

Mrs. Aline Chrétien
Canada

Dear Mrs. Chrétien,

Mrs. Wasmosy joins me in sending this letter.

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you during the Summit of the Americas in December and to discuss some of the most critical challenges facing our children in the hemisphere. Your contributions and those of the other participants at the "Symposium on Children of the Americas" clearly identified areas of critical need which are of common concern and enormous importance for the well being of our children.

The First Ladies' Symposium agreed that investment in the human capital of the Americas is vital to the broader goal of eradicating poverty and discrimination. In order to follow up on the important health and education issues that were raised, we would like to propose that we, as First Ladies of the Hemisphere, engage the citizens of our nations in an active three-point agenda to advance the goals in health and education adopted by the leaders at the Summit of the Americas.

The first initiative we propose for follow-up is the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas by the year 2000. To start this effort, I will participate in the launching of the Measles Elimination Campaign at the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) headquarters in Washington, D.C. on April 7. Mrs. Wasmosy will lead a parallel effort in Asunción. We understand that local PAHO representatives have been in contact with you and the other First Ladies to encourage you to sponsor similar events in your countries. Our participation in this important initiative will provide the campaign with higher visibility, both at the national and the regional level. To attack this problem, PAHO has formulated a regional project for the elimination of the transmission of measles in the Americas for the years 1995-2000. Strong partnerships with all sectors of society can garner the political and financial support needed to eliminate this killer disease.

The second critical initiative is the reduction of maternal mortality in the Americas. Every year, 20,000 women die in the hemisphere and at least 3 million are hospitalized from complications relating to childbirth -- many of which are preventable. We all agree that we need to promote the implementation across the region of comprehensive health care policies focused on women and the prevention of maternal mortality and morbidity.

During the XXIII Pan American Sanitary Conference in 1990, the Hemispheric Ministers of Health of the countries of the region approved a Regional Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality in the Americas. Progress has been slow. Involving ourselves in this initiative can help save lives of countless women in all of our countries. We propose to include the issue of maternal mortality and morbidity as an item for discussion at the meeting of the Association of First Ladies that will be hosted by Mrs. Wasmosy in Paraguay in October 1995. We are convinced that we can generate renewed interest in an issue that concerns the health and lives of women across the Americas. The meeting in Paraguay will give us each an opportunity to review the national plans, to learn what have been the most successful strategies and projects to reduce maternal mortality and to learn from each other.

The third area of interest is girls' and women's education, which is also likely to be underscored at the 4th United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing. The rate of girls' enrollment varies from country to country. We do know, however, through extensive research in the field, that investments in the education of girls yield a higher return than any other investment in a country's development. As you know, when countries focus their resources on the education of girls, they achieve a wide range of benefits, including significant improvements in health, domestic, agricultural and industrial productivity, democratic participation and family wellbeing. We propose to seek ways as First Ladies to be engaged in this issue and increase the awareness in our nations of the importance of girls' education. I was pleased to announce earlier this month at the UN Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen that the United States has made a commitment to financially support efforts to enhance educational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of poor girls and women around the world.

We hope that the above three areas and the suggested initiatives adequately reflect the consensus reached at the Summit Symposium in Miami and reflect the issues you believe are most important for us in following up on that meeting. Mrs. Wasmosy is also preparing additional items for the agenda to reflect follow up to the First Ladies Meeting in St. Lucia.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton