INFORMATION

MEMORANDUM FOR MAGGIE WILLIAMS

FROM: ANDREW D. SENS ^{NS}

SUBJECT: The First Lady's Trip to Latin America

The First Lady expressed interest in a trip to several Latin American countries this Fall in conjunction with the hemispheric Association of First Ladies meeting in Asuncion, Paraguay. Such a trip could contribute significantly to advancing the Administration's ambitious agenda in the region. Specifically, in each country the First Lady could:

- Advance implementation of the Summit of the Americas' initiatives regarding health, education and women's rights, especially as they pertain to youth;
- Promote the three-point agenda derived from the Summit's Symposium on Children of the Americas as outlined in your joint letter with Mrs. Wasmosy to the other First Ladies: eradication of measles, reduction of maternal mortality and girls' and women's education;
- Visit a wide range of official and non-governmental projects and individuals, who are working in related areas, to increase their visibility and legitimacy.

The First Lady mentioned that the most appropriate countries for her to visit in South America in addition to Paraguay would be Brazil, Chile, Bolivia and Argentina. The NSC staff and State Department agree. Based on our initial planning, the trip would last one week, allowing one day for each country with two days for Brazil and one-day equivalent for travel. If the First Lady's schedule permits, she might also consider a stop in Central America and in the English-speaking Caribbean.

Each of the four proposed countries is immersed in an exciting period of democratic consolidation, "reinventing government" and grassroots activism. This activism has renewed attention in social issues, and the First Lady will find several issues under debate with which she is familiar -- health care and educational reform. She will undoubtedly uncover many opportunities to strengthen ties between the U.S. and Latin America working in these areas, as well as to forge new linkages for collective action.

In each country, we recommend the First Lady meet with public officials in charge of Summit follow up as well as the three Symposium agenda items. Attached at Tab A is a memo listing illustrative people and projects relevant to the themes of health, education and youth and women. These ideas were proposed by State, USAID, the Inter-American Foundation and several U.S. foundations and NGOs. This is only a first cut and is intended to give Mrs. Clinton a sense of the richness of the Latin American experience in these fields and the tremendous impact that her visit could have in promoting valuable local efforts. Once the First Lady so directs us, we will work with State to develop a more complete and refined agenda for her.

FIRST LADY'S TRIP TO LATIN-AMERICA
Notional Visits

During a one-week trip to Latin America, the First Lady could visit with the public officials in charge of follow-up for the Summit of the Americas in the areas of health, education and women's rights as well as the related agenda derived from the Summit's Symposium on Children of the Americas (eradication of measles, reduction of maternal mortality, and girls' and women's education). This memo contains initial ideas for visits with particularly successful or innovative people and projects relevant to these themes. These notional ideas were proposed by State, USAID, the Inter-American Foundation, the Inter-American Development Bank and several U.S. foundations and other non-governmental organizations. The countries covered include Brazil, Chile, Argentina and Bolivia.

Brasilia

- President Cardoso has made educational reform a priority. The Minister of Education, Paulo Renato de Souza, is a professional educator and strong minister, formerly Vice-president for Administration at Inter-American Development Bank.
- Dr. Ruth Cardoso, wife of the President, is a professor of urban anthropology who has long had a commitment to the substance of social policy and is an advocate of many issues relating to women and children. Currently director of "Council on Community Solidarity."
- The national headquarters of the National Street Children's Movement would be a natural place to visit.

Rio de Janeiro

People to Meet:

- Jacqueline Pintanguay, one of the most articulate of Brazil's women leaders; fluent in English. She has served on many panels related to social issues in the U.S. and was first director of the Women's Council in Brazil. She leads CEPIA, an NGO based in Rio favelas, which focuses on women's and children's health issues and reproductive health issues.
- Herbert de Souza (Betinho), who began the Anti-Hunger Campaign in Brazil and is helping change the entire cultural climate in support of grassroots community activity. (See below)

- Eva Blay, Sao Paulo social activist and long-time women's advocate. She took over Fernando Henrique Cardoso's Senate seat for a period.
- Congresswoman Benedita da Silva, an Afro-Brazilian elected from the slums of Rio de Janeiro, supports major initiatives to improve the education and health of poor women and children. (see below)

Health:

- One of Mrs. Pitanguay's projects in Rio favelas. One possibility is a health or reproductive health project. Second option is a visit to the government (police) program, started when Mrs. Pitanguay was in government, to shelter women victims of violence and combat domestic violence.

Children:

- The Inter-American Development Bank has two excellent programs in Rio and Salvador focusing on favelas. NGOs are developing and running major day care programs, focusing especially on street children.

Sao Paulo

- The Archbishop of Sao Paulo, Dom Paulo Evaristo Arns, has worked in health and social issues for many years.
- GELEDEZ, a women's Afro-Brazilian group in Sao Paulo, focuses on Afro-Brazilian issues and has just won a struggle with a major television corporation to portray blacks more realistically. This program works with women's health issues and is supported by the MacArthur Foundation and Ford Foundation.

Salvador

Meetings with Women and NGO leaders:

- The mayor of Salvador, Mrs. Lidice da Matta, could be invited to accompany Mrs. Clinton. She knows Project Axe well (See Below).
- Evaldo Brito, President of the Binational Center in Salvador is a leading Afro-Brazilian politician who has previously served as mayor and as the state's Secretary of Education, Health and Welfare. Mrs. Clinton could meet with him and tour classrooms and the library.

Education:

- Project Axe is a highly successful project that reaches thousands of street children, many of them abandoned, focusing on education, job training and family reintegration.
- Visit CECUP, the Centro de Educacao e Cultural Popular, an innovative program that has supported a large network of 65 "alternative schools" for 10,000 low income children and youth. With no access to primary education, parents began organizing their own schools in the 1970s. (In Salvador, it is estimated that 220,000 school-age children do not attend school.) CECUP works with neighborhood associations, community public schools and teachers associations. The schools are built with materials and labor donated by the community. They recruit teachers from the community. The state government is now turning to CECUP for educational ideas.

Other:

- A visit to Pelourinho, the recently restored historic center and former slave market of Salvador. UNESCO has designated it as part of the world's cultural heritage, and it is a source of cultural pride to the racially mixed population. (Brazil imported more slaves from Africa than the rest of the New World combined, primarily to work in sugar cane plantations in the northeast.) AID might be able to arrange a concert and discussion with the Black empowerment/musical group "Olodum." Its director is a 1995 USIS international visitor's program recipient.
- Environmental possibilities. Sea Turtle Protection Project: Visit Project Tamar, a protected turtle nesting beach about one hour's drive from Salvador on Praia da Forte. Conservation of the Mata Atlantica Forest: Located about 500 miles south of Salvador, this AID supported project focuses on conserving the remnants of the Mata Atlantica Forest, including a number of endangered species.

CHILE

Meetings with Women Leaders and NGO leaders:

- Chile has been a leader in educational reform and is considered, even by other Latin American countries, as something of a laboratory for innovative social reform by government and NGO groups. It has a strong commitment to advancing women's issues with a specific Ministry of Women (Ministerio de la Mujer).
- Mrs. Frei, wife of the President, works with INTEGRA, a group that supports children's and poverty alleviation programs through Chile. There are many possibilities for meetings and visits here.
- Monica Jimenez and Laura Novoa Vasquez, President and Chair of PARTICIPA, a Chilean NGO, which has organized Chilean voter registration drives and public education campaigns focusing particularly on women and youth since the 1988 plebiscite. PARTICIPA also provides guidance to other NGOs around the world. It is currently supported by AID and could organize a meeting of NGO women civic and political leaders.
- Two Ministers are women, both considered strong and competent leaders: the Minister for Women and the Minister for Patrimonial Nacional.
- Maria Elena Ovalle leads FINAM (Finanzas de la Mujer), a Chilean NGO affiliated with the Woman's World Bank. It provides micro-enterprise loans and technical support to Chilean women entrepreneurs and could organized a meeting with Chilean women enterprise leaders. Formerly funded by AID.
- The Ministry of Justice and NGOs are beginning to highlight the problems of family violence. New legislation and training are being piloted. A meeting with Chilean NGOs and government could be arranged.
- Maria Elena Valenzuela, an NGO leader who designed SERNAM's program for poor women heads of households and single mothers (see below).

Education:

- The Chilean government has two very innovative education projects. The first, MECE, is run by Sergio Molina through the Ministry of Education and is a major reform to improve primary school throughout the country. The project coordinator is Cristian Cox. The second is the "900 schools" project from the Ministry, which seeks to strengthen the 900 poorest schools in the country through a series of innovative programs.

- CIDE is an excellent NGO working exclusively in the area of education, whose President is Patricio Cariola, a Jesuit. He could best identify the specific CIDE projects appropriate to visit. AID suggests visiting a particular CIDE project which it funded: an innovative pilot high school in Santiago. Students, parents and faculty can demonstrate the impact that competency-based education (based on the U.S. model) is having in Chile.

Health and Welfare:

- Visit the reproductive health clinic in Huechuraba, Santiago, under the direction of Soledad Diaz (ICMER). The clinic provides integrated family planning and MCH services to poor women.
- Visit SERNAM's program for poor women heads of households and single mothers. Meet with Maria Elena Valenzuela, who designed the program, and plan a visit to a program in one of the provincial cities.
- The Ministry of Health has opened over 50 24-hour a day primary clinics in poor parts of the country, supported by an AID grant. A visit to one in the outskirts of Santiago could be arranged.
- Visit the adolescent pregnancy/reproductive health program of Dr. Ramiro Molina at the School of Medicine, University of Chile.

Women's Organizations:

- PARTICIPA focuses on the development of women as leaders. It originated in a voter education project during the plebiscite movement to defeat General Pinochet. Its head, Monica Jimenez, was Dean of Social Work at the Catholic University and was part of the Bishops' conference on social policy. She can identify an appropriate site visit.

Other:

- Access to Justice. The government's Corporacion de Asistencia Judicial provides one-stop social and legal services to the poor. AID, through a Chilean NGO, CPU, supports this effort. A meeting in downtown Santiago could be arranged.

- Environmental NGO led by Ximena Abogabir, CASA DE LA PAZ, fosters public participation, particularly of women and youth, in environmental issues. It provides educational materials, organizational training and technical orientation. LA CASA could organize a meeting of environmental NGOs.

BOLIVIA

Women and NGO Leaders:

- Lidia Catari de Cardenas, wife of the Vice-President, is a respected, indigenous woman with strong links to educational programs, particularly focusing on female education and bilingual education. She is a former teacher and education specialist and heads Organizacion de Mujeres.
- Sonia Montano, Under Secretary for Gender in the Department of Human Development, is an excellent source of information and expertise on women's issues.

Education:

- Innovative bilingual education program (see above).

Health and Welfare:

- Child Care: visit the World Bank-financed government child care project that provides employment to women child care takers in Bolivian cities.
- In Inquisivi Province, visit the Save the Children's project that provides MCH services and credit to very poor women (the WARMI WCI project). Inquisivo is one of the poorest provinces in the Bolivian highlands, among a spectacular landscape.

Other:

- An excellent credit program to visit is Prodem, a credit NGO, and the Banco sul, a commercial bank which provides very small loans for about 75,000 micro-entrepreneurs, most of them women.

ARGENTINA

Meetings with Women and NGO Leadership:

- Meeting with women legislators, including Ana de Kessler, Marcela Durriu and Christina Flamarique. By law, one third of Congressional candidates must be women.

- Marta Oyhanarate: president of Citizen Power, an NGO working on democracy and human rights issues.
- The Ministry of Education has a new commitment to educational reform. Two highly competent women have high positions in the Ministry, Ines Aguerondo and Cecilia Braslawsky. Both come out of the NGO community and are involved in reform issues.

Health and Welfare:

- FOC (Fundacion de Organizacion Comunitaria, 1989), was founded by volunteer health promoters in 22 poor neighborhoods in the municipal district of Lomas de Zamora; it now works with 250 women community health volunteers. Projects include, among others, vaccination programs, child care for working mothers and recreational opportunities for teenagers.
- SUM-CNA (Servicio Universitario Mundial-Comite Nacional Argentino) began in 1988 to work with neighborhood organizations in Buenos Aires to develop community health care, skills training, etc., with international assistance from many European groups. The Inter-American Foundation is now helping support day care services.

Other:

- The Inter-American Foundation (IAF) recommended two of its projects in Cordoba. One is a highly successful coalition of low-income urban community organizations representing over 12,000 families, working in a variety of community development organizations (land acquisition, basic services), the Union de Organizaciones de Base por los Derechos Sociales (UOBDS). The second, Servicio en Promocion Humana (SERVIPROH), also works in community organization and development and now has an IAF grant to work with poor families in the area.
