President William Jefferson Clinton
Departure Statement on Camp David Summit
July 11, 2000

In a few moments I will leave for Camp David to join Prime Minister Barak and Chairman Arafat in their effort to reach agreement on the core issues that have divided Israelis and Palestinians for half a century. The two leaders face the most profound and wrenching questions, and there can be no success without principled compromise. The road to peace is a two-way street.

Both leaders feel the weight of history; but both, I believe, recognize this moment in history. We have an opportunity to bring about a just and enduring end to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, which is the key to lasting peace in the Middle East.

While there is no guarantee of success, not to try is to guarantee failure. And the path ahead is no more steep than the journey already taken. From the first Camp David summit, to Madrid and Oslo, to the first handshake on this lawn between Prime Minister Rabin and Chairman Arafat to the peace between Israel and Jordan and the Wye Accords, the parties have proven that peace is possible when they are determined to make it.

In the process, they have passed the point of no return. The only way forward now -- is forward.

Both sides must find a way to resolve competing claims and give their children the gift of peace. It will take patience. It will take creativity. It will take courage. But Prime Minister Barak and Chairman Arafat have those qualities, or they would not have come this far. And they will have the unstinting and unequivocal support of the United States.

I will work as hard as I can over the coming days to see that the promise of this moment is fulfilled.

we had asked for a half-hour meeting. Scheduling had indicated time would be blocked off, but we did not have a specific time before things were set back to square one by today's announcement on Middle East.

particularly in the wake of what is likely to be an ugly week of confrontations in N. Ireland over marching, a meeting next week with Trimble and Mallon might send a helpful antidote of pictures demonstrating that the peace process remains on track.

first visit as First Minister and Deputy First Minister in the new Executive. They're basically here to introduce the new N. Ireland power-sharing government to our own executive branch and to the Hill. They have not travelled in tandem like this before, and are NOT wearing their party political (UUP and SDLP) hats. Great opportunity to recognize a tangible achievement (if not the prime achievement) of the Good Friday Accord thus far.

the annoucement of the arafat-barak long the summit will last, but the president is clearing his schedule from the 11th until his departure for ottawa. i think you have to say that because of the summit the president has cleared his calendar of almot everything else, and while we cannot predict how long the summit will take, it is very likely the president will not be available.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release July 11, 2000REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
UPON LEAVING FOR CAMP DAVID TO OPEN THE MIDDLE EAST PEACE SUMMIT

South Portico

10:38 A.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Good morning. As all of you know, I am now leaving Camp

David to join Prime Minister Barak and Chairman Arafat in their effort to reach an agreement on the core issues that have divided Israelis and Palestinians for a century now.

The two leaders face profound and wrenching questions, and there can be no success without principled compromise. The road to peace, as always, is a two-way street. Both leaders feel the weight of history, but both, I believe, recognize this is a moment in history which they can seize. We have an opportunity to bring about a just and enduring end to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. That is the key to lasting peace in the entire Middle East. Of course, there is no guarantee of success, but not to try is to guarantee failure.

The path ahead builds on the journey already taken from the first Camp David Summit to Madrid to Oslo; to the first handshake on the lawn between Prime Minister Rabin and Chairman Arafat; to the peace between Israel and Jordan.

The agreement at Wye River. The parties have proven that peace is possible.

Now, they are determined to make it.

In the process, they have passed the point of no return. The only way forward now is forward. Both sides must find a way to resolve competing claims and give their children the gift of peace. It will take patience and creativity and courage. But Prime Minister Barak and Chairman Arafat have those qualities that they would not have come this far.

They will also have the unstinting and unequivocal support of the United States. I'll do everything I can over the coming days to see that this moment of history is fulfilled. And I hope that those leaders will have the thoughts and prayers of the American people.

and support of all Americans.

Thank you very much.

Q Mr. President, having barely survived the no confidence vote, does Prime Minister Barak come here with a handicap? Can he negotiate with the full weight of the Knesset and the Israeli people behind him?

THE PRESIDENT: First of all, I'll say what I said yesterday -- the polls in Israel, that well over half the people support his coming here and believe ought to work for peace. Secondly, he has promised to put whatever agreement is reached here, if an agreement is reached, to a vote of the people.

So they have nothing to lose. They'll have final say anyway. There ought to be 100 percent support for his coming here, because the people will be the deciders on the question. So I think that that is fine. And, yes, he had an eight-vote margin yesterday; I would remind you that on most of the days Yitzhak Rabin came here, he had a one-vote margin in the Knesset.

So I think we're in as good a shape as we're ever going to get, and we must well just go to work. Thank you very much.

it's probably best that these be held until after the Summit. Since not think we should be passing the letters. She'll mention to Beth Hello Cathy!

Bob

thought perhaps you could get an answer from Mary Haines -- or would have the answer yourself. The WH mailroom has called asking about delivery of mail addressed to PM Barak and Chairman Arafat. At this point they have received four items -- three for Barak and one for Arafat -- addressed to them care of the President or c/o The White House - Camp David group.

Thanks!
