PRESIDENT CLINTON APPLAUDS NATIONAL STONEWALL DEMOCRATS'
ENDORSEMENTS FOR NOVEMBER ELECTIONS

President notes the importance of electing Rep. Charles Schumer to U.S.
Senate

(WASHINGTON) Today, the White House responded to a letter from the National
Stonewall Democratic Federation in which President Clinton expressed support for all the candidates endorsed by the national organization which represents lesbian and gay Democrats.

President Clinton praised the efforts of the National Stonewall Democratic Federation and thanked them specifically for their "hard work in New York for Representative Charles Schumer in his campaign for the United States Senate. When we elect Charles Schumer to this office, gay and lesbian New Yorkers will have a strong advocate and friend in the Senate."

Last week, Daniel McGlinchey, interim executive director of the National Stonewall Democratic Federation, wrote to Clinton to share his disappointment over the Human Rights Campaign's endorsement of Republican Senator Alfonse D'Amato for reelection, "in light of the fact that Rep. Schumer's record on gay and lesbian rights has been excellent for years and has been consistently much better than Senator D'Amato's record."

In his letter, McGlinchey noted that the Human Rights Campaign is "a bipartisan organization that tries to appeal to both Democratic and Republican officials, but we believe it is a grave error when they do that to the detriment of Democrats who are outstanding on our issues."

In response, President Clinton expressed the importance of a Democratic majority in the Senate and stressed that "we cannot allow a Republican majority in the Senate and its leadership to continue to block the Hate Crimes Protection Act, the Employment Non-Discrimination Act, and the nomination of qualified gay and lesbian Americans to serve their country."

A copy of both letters is attached.

LETTER FROM PRESIDENT CLINTON,
TO THE NATIONAL STONEWALL DEMOCRATIC FEDERATION

October 26, 1998

Daniel McGlinchey
Interim Executive Director
National Stonewall Democratic Federation
Post Office Box 77165
Washington, D.C. 20013

Dear Daniel:

Thank you for your letter of October 23, 1998 updating me on Stonewall's efforts to elect Democrats who support equal rights for gay and lesbian Americans.

I applaud those efforts and believe, as you do, that a Democratic majority in Congress will strengthen our efforts to build one America in which prejudice based on sexual orientation no longer exists.

I enthusiastically support the excellent set of Democratic candidates that the National Stonewall Democratic Federation has endorsed this year. They are all exceptional public servants. And I want to thank you especially for your hard work in New York for Representative Charles Schumer in his campaign for the United States Senate. When we elect Charles Schumer to this office, gay and lesbian New Yorkers will have a strong advocate and friend in the Senate.

We cannot allow a Republican majority in the Senate and its leadership to continue to block the Hate Crimes Prevention Act, the Employment Non-Discrimination Act, and the nominations of qualified gay and lesbian Americans to serve their country. Thus I believe, as you do, that it is imperative that all fair-minded Americans get out and vote this year.

I urge all Democrats who believe in basic fairness and equal rights to join with Stonewall in their support of the candidates that you have endorsed -- and all Democrats with similarly good records -- so we can work to erase the prejudice and intolerance that still exist in our country.

Thank you again for your efforts on behalf of the Democratic party.

Sincerely,

BILL CLINTON

LETTER TO PRESIDENT CLINTON,
FROM THE NATIONAL STONEWALL DEMOCRATIC FEDERATION
P.O. BOX 77165
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20013
www.stonewalldemocrats.org

October 23, 1998

President William Clinton
The White House
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. President,

You have been the best president our country has had in the fight to eliminate prejudice against gay men and lesbians, and the National Stonewall Democratic Federation very much applauds your vigorous efforts on this front. We are a national organization representing gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender Democrats, as well as over 45 gay and lesbian Democratic clubs from across the country. We were founded last May with help by Congressman Barney Frank and other gay and lesbian Democratic leaders, on the principle that the Democratic party and its leadership, while not perfect on our issues, are far more supportive of our fight against homophobia than the Republicans.

In the upcoming congressional elections, the National Stonewall Democratic Federation has endorsed and supported 13 first-rate Democrats, including Senator Barbara Boxer and Rep. Charles Schumer. We are very disappointed that the Human Rights Campaign (HRC), the nation's largest bipartisan gay and lesbian organization, has endorsed Senator Alfonse D'Amato in his race, especially in light of the fact that Rep. Schumer's record on gay and lesbian rights has been excellent for years and has been consistently much better than Senator D'Amato's record.

We appreciate that HRC is a bipartisan organization that tries to appeal to both Democratic and Republican officials, but we believe it is a grave error when they do that to the detriment of Democrats who are outstanding on our issues. In fact, we believe HRC's endorsement of D'Amato over Schumer points precisely to the need for a Democratic organization such as ours, which focuses on working through and with the Democratic party, to continue to move it in the direction of fairness for gay, lesbian, and bisexual Americans.

Because you are the leading Democrat in the country and a staunch supporter of gay civil rights, we would very much appreciate your expression of support for our endorsement of Charles Schumer for U.S. Senate, and we also ask that you urge Democrats dedicated to eliminating discrimination to join the National Stonewall Democratic Federation and support our efforts to elect a Democratic majority in Congress.

DANIEL McGLINCHEY
Interim Executive Director, National Stonewall Democratic Federation

HIV/AIDS ANNOUNCEMENT

DATE: October 28, 1998
LOCATION: Room 450 OEOB
BRIEFING TIME: 4:40 pm - 4:55 pm
EVENT: 5:00 pm - 6:00 pm
FROM: Bruce Reed/Minyon Moore/Sandy Thurman

I. PURPOSE

To unveil a $156 million historic new initiative to address the urgent problem of HIV/AIDS in minority communities.

II. BACKGROUND

You will be addressing approximately 150 representatives of the African-American, civil rights, public health, AIDS, and gay and lesbian communities to discuss the urgent problem of HIV/AIDS in racial and ethnic minority communities. In your remarks, you will declare the status of HIV/AIDS in minority communities to be a “severe and ongoing health care crisis.” To address the chronic and overwhelmingly disproportionate burden of HIV/AIDS on minorities, you will announce a $156 million new comprehensive initiative that includes unprecedented efforts to improve the nation’s effectiveness in preventing and treating HIV/AIDS in the African-American and Hispanic communities. This is also an opportunity to highlight other important increases to fight HIV/AIDS in the budget, as well as new funding for your initiative to address racial health disparities for a range of diseases, including HIV/AIDS.

Declare HIV/AIDS in the minority community to be a “severe and ongoing health care crisis.” While overall AIDS deaths have declined for two years in a row, it remains the leading killer of African-Americans age 25-44. African-Americans comprise more than 40 percent of all new HIV/AIDS cases, and African-American women make up 60 percent of female cases. Hispanics represent over 20 percent of new HIV/AIDS cases, though they make up ~~and~~ only about 10 percent of the population.

Unveil historic $130 million increase for HIV/AIDS in the minority community. This new initiative, which has been strongly endorsed by the Congressional Black Caucus, will address the urgent problem of HIV/AIDS among minorities including new prevention efforts, improved access to HIV/AIDS drug treatments, and training for health professionals who treat this disease.

- Crisis response teams. HHS will make available Crisis Response Teams to a number of highly-impacted areas. These teams will include experts in public health and HIV prevention and treatment, doctors, nurses, and epidemiologist from a range of agencies including the CDC, SAMSHA, HRSA. The teams will, over a period of several weeks, help assess existing prevention and treatment services for racial and ethnic minorities and develop new innovative effective strategies that best meet the needs of these communities.*
- Enhanced HIV/AIDS prevention efforts in racial and ethnic minority communities. These funds will be used for important HIV prevention purposes at the Centers for Disease Control. For example, funding will be made available for minority community-based organizations to create innovative outreach approaches in communities heavily impacted by HIV/AIDS, such as working with local health clinics, making testing available, conducting community workshops, and developing HIV and substance abuse prevention programs on the campuses of Historically Black Colleges and Universities. Recognizing that* substance abusers are one of the fastest-growing populations of new HIV/AIDS cases, this investment also will enhance the HIV prevention and treatment component of drug treatment services.

- Reducing disparities in treatment and health outcomes for minorities with HIV/AIDS. Studies show that African-Americans and Hispanics are much less likely to have receive treatments that meet federally-recommended treatment guidelines. This new funding, which supplements the already large increase in the Ryan White program, will help minorities get access to cutting edge HIV/AIDS drug treatments as well as the range of primary health services needed to treat this disease. It also will be used to educate health care providers who treat largely minority populations on treatment guidelines for HIV/AIDS.

Highlight Unprecedented Increases in Effective HIV/AIDS Treatment, Prevention, and Research Programs. This is a good opportunity to highlight the fact that Congress has approved substantial critical increases in a wide range of effective HIV/AIDS programs that were strongly supported by you and the Vice President. These include:

- A historic $250 million increase in the Ryan White Care Act which provides for primary HIV health care services, treatments, and teaching health care professionals HIV treatment guidelines. This investment provides over 60 percent increase for the AIDS drug assistance program, which provides protease inhibitors and other life-saving HIV/AIDS treatments to those who could not afford these treatments, which run as high as $20,000 per year.

- A $275 million increase in SAMHSA's Substance Abuse Block Grant.
Drug treatment is a critical weapon used to prevent the spread of HIV. This 21 percent increase in the Block Grant will dramatically improve the availability of drug treatment services. It also enhances HIV early intervention services to improve the quality of life for substance abusers living with HIV infection, to slow the progression of disease, and to prevent the onset of life threatening illnesses among this target population.
- Ten Percent Increase for HIV/AIDS Research at NIH. In FY 1999, research on HIV/AIDS at the National Institutes of Health (NIH) will total over $1.8 billion, a 10 percent increase. This increase will enhance both basic research to further our understanding of the HIV virus as well as applied research that includes clinical testing of new HIV/AIDS pharmacological therapies.

Reiterate your Commitment to Eliminate Racial Health Disparities.

Minorities suffer from higher rates for a number of critical diseases, including HIV/AIDS. Hispanics are more than four times as likely to get HIV/AIDS than whites, while African-Americans are more than eight times as likely. The Congress has taken a first step in investing in the President's proposal to address racial health disparities by funding over $50 million of this initiative. Congress partially funded the proposed grants for communities to develop new strategies to address these disparities and for increases in other critical public health programs, such as heart disease and diabetes prevention at CDC, that have showed promise in attacking these disparities.

Call on Congress to Pass Unfinished Agenda for People With HIV/AIDS.

You have repeatedly urged the Congress to pass a strong, enforceable patients' bill of rights that contains critical protections for people with HIV/AIDS including: access to specialists, continuity of care so to prevent abrupt changes in critical treatment when an employer changes health plans. Congress also failed to pass the bipartisan Jeffords-Kennedy bill that enables people with disabilities and other disabling conditions, such as HIV/AIDS, to go back to work by expanding options to buy into Medicaid and Medicare, as well as other pro-work initiatives.

PRESIDENT CLINTON DECLARES HIV/AIDS IN RACIAL AND ETHNIC MINORITY COMMUNITIES TO BE A “SEVERE AND ONGOING HEALTH CARE CRISIS” AND UNVEILS
NEW INITIATIVE TO ADDRESS THIS PROBLEM
October 28, 1998

Today, the President declared HIV/AIDS in racial and ethnic minority communities to be a “severe and ongoing health care crisis” and unveiled a series of initiatives that invest $156 million to address this urgent problem. Citing chronic and overwhelmingly disproportionate burden of HIV/AIDS on minorities, the President outlined a new comprehensive initiative that includes unprecedented efforts to improve the nation’s effectiveness in preventing and treating HIV/AIDS in the African-American and Hispanic communities. The President also highlighted other important increases to fight HIV/AIDS in the budget as well as new funding for his initiative to address racial health disparities for a range of diseases, including HIV/AIDS. Today, the President:

- Declared HIV/AIDS in the minority community to be a “severe and ongoing health care crisis.”
While overall AIDS deaths have declined for two years in a row, it remains the leading killer of African American men age 25-44 and the second leading killer of African American women in the same age group. African-Americans comprise more than 40 percent of all new HIV/AIDS cases, and African-American women make up 60 percent of female cases. Hispanics represent over 20 percent of new HIV/AIDS cases and only about 10 percent of the population.
- Unveiled historic initiatives that invest $156 million for HIV/AIDS in the minority community. During the recent budget negotiations and the Clinton Administration and the Congressional Black Caucus fought successfully to secure a major commitment of funds to address the urgent problem of HIV/AIDS among minorities including new prevention efforts, improved access to HIV/AIDS drug treatments, and training health professionals who treat this disease. Over two-thirds of this funding is through new resources appropriated through the Omnibus Appropriations Act and the rest will be dedicated from the HHS budget.
 - Crisis response teams. HHS will make available Crisis Response Teams to a number of highly-impacted areas. These teams of public health and HIV prevention and treatment experts, doctors, nurses, epidemiologists, from a range of agencies including the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, the Health Resources and Services Administration, and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and others will, over a period of several weeks, help assess existing prevention and treatment services for racial and ethnic minorities and develop new innovative effective strategies that best meet the needs of these communities.

- Enhanced HIV/AIDS prevention efforts in racial and ethnic minority communities. These funds will be used for important HIV prevention purposes at the Centers for Disease Control such as: grants for minority community-based organizations to create innovative outreach approaches in communities heavily impacted by HIV/AIDS, such as working with local health clinics, making testing and counseling available, conducting community workshops, and developing HIV and substance abuse prevention programs on the campuses of Historically Black Colleges and Universities. It will also help provide comprehensive substance abuse treatment programs for African-American and Hispanic women with or at risk for HIV/AIDS and their children.*

- Reducing disparities in treatment and health outcomes for minorities with HIV/AIDS. Studies show that African-Americans and Hispanics are much less likely to have receive treatments that meet federally-recommended treatment guidelines. This new funding, which supplements the already large increase in the Ryan White program, will help minorities get access to cutting edge HIV/AIDS drug treatments as well as the range of primary health services needed to treat this disease. It also will be used to educate health care providers who treat largely minority populations on treatment guidelines for HIV/AIDS.*

- Highlighted Unprecedented Increases in Effective HIV/AIDS Treatment, Prevention, and Research Programs. The President also highlighted the fact that Congress has approved substantial critical increases in a wide range of effective HIV/AIDS programs that were strongly advocated by the Vice President. These include:*

- A historic $262 million increase in the Ryan White Care Act which provides for primary HIV health care services, treatments, and teaching health care professionals HIV treatment guidelines. This investment provides an over 60 percent increase for the AIDS drug assistance program, which provides protease inhibitors and other life-saving HIV/AIDS treatments to those who could not afford these treatments, which run as high as $20,000 per year.
- Twelve percent increase for HIV/AIDS research at NIH. In FY 1999, research on HIV/AIDS at the National Institutes of Health (NIH) will total $1.8 billion, a 10 percent increase. This increase will enhance both basic research to further our understanding of the HIV virus as well as applied research that includes clinical testing of new HIV/AIDS pharmacological therapies.
- Reiterated His Commitment to Eliminate Racial Health Disparities. Minorities suffer from higher rates for a number of critical diseases, including HIV/AIDS. Hispanics are more than four times as likely to get HIV/AIDS than whites, while African-Americans are more than eight times as likely. The Congress has taken a first step in investing in the President's proposal to address racial health disparities by funding $65 million of this initiative. Congress partially funded the proposed grants for communities to develop new strategies to address these disparities and for increases in other critical public health programs, such as heart disease and diabetes prevention at CDC, that have shown promise in attacking these disparities.
- Called on Congress to Pass Unfinished Agenda for People With HIV/AIDS.
 - A Patients' Bill of Rights. The President and Vice President have repeatedly urged the Congress to pass a strong, enforceable patients' bill of rights that contains critical protections for people with HIV/AIDS including: access to specialists, continuity of care so to prevent abrupt changes in critical treatment when an employer changes health plan.
 - A Work Incentives Bill for People with Disabilities. Congress also failed to pass the bipartisan Jeffords-Kennedy bill that enables people with disabilities and other disabling conditions, such as HIV/AIDS, to go back to work by expanding options to buy into Medicaid and Medicare, as well as other pro-work initiatives. This bill was on the list of top Administration priorities in the final budget negotiations.

HIV/AIDS ANNOUNCEMENT

DATE: October 28, 1998
LOCATION: Room 450 OEOB
BRIEFING TIME: 4:40 pm - 4:55 pm
EVENT: 5:00 pm - 6:00 pm
FROM: Bruce Reed/Minyon Moore/Sandy Thurman

I. PURPOSE

To declare the status of HIV/AIDS in minority communities to be a “severe and ongoing health care crisis” and to unveil a $156 million historic new initiative to address this urgent problem.

II. BACKGROUND

You will be addressing approximately 150 representatives of the African-American, civil rights, public health, AIDS, and gay and lesbian communities to discuss the urgent problem of HIV/AIDS in racial and ethnic minority communities. In your remarks, you will declare the status of HIV/AIDS in minority communities to be a “severe and ongoing health care crisis.” To address the chronic and overwhelmingly disproportionate burden of HIV/AIDS on minorities, you will announce a $156 million new comprehensive initiative that includes unprecedented efforts to improve the nation’s effectiveness in preventing and treating HIV/AIDS in the African-American and Hispanic communities. This is also an opportunity to highlight other important increases to fight HIV/AIDS in the budget, as well as new funding for your initiative to address racial health disparities for a range of diseases, including HIV/AIDS.

- Declare HIV/AIDS in the minority community to be a “severe and ongoing health care crisis.” While overall AIDS deaths have declined for two years in a row, it remains the leading killer of African American men age 25-44 and the second leading killer of African American women in the same age group. African-Americans comprise more than 40 percent of all new HIV/AIDS cases, and African-American women make up 60 percent of female cases. Hispanics represent over 20 percent of new HIV/AIDS cases and only about 10 percent of the population.

- Unveil historic $130 million increase for HIV/AIDS in the minority community. This new initiative, which the Administration and the Congressional Black Caucus fought for in the budget process, will address the urgent problem of HIV/AIDS among minorities including new prevention efforts, improved access to HIV/AIDS drug treatments, and training for health professionals who treat this disease.
 - Crisis response teams. HHS will make available Crisis Response Teams to a number of highly-impacted areas. These teams will include experts in public health and HIV prevention and treatment, doctors, nurses, and epidemiologist from a range of agencies including the CDC, SAMSHA, HRSA. The teams will, over a period of several weeks, help assess existing prevention and treatment services for racial and ethnic minorities and develop new innovative effective strategies that best meet the needs of these communities.
 - Enhanced HIV/AIDS prevention efforts in racial and ethnic minority communities. These funds will be used for important HIV prevention purposes at the Centers for Disease Control. For example, funding will be made available for minority community-based organizations to create innovative outreach approaches in communities heavily impacted by HIV/AIDS, such as working with local health clinics, making testing available, conducting community workshops, and developing HIV and substance abuse prevention programs on the campuses of Historically Black Colleges and Universities. Recognizing that substance abusers are one of the fastest-growing populations of new HIV/AIDS cases, this investment also will enhance the HIV prevention and treatment component of drug treatment services.

-- Reducing disparities in treatment and health outcomes for minorities with HIV/AIDS. Studies show that African-Americans and Hispanics are much less likely to receive treatments that meet federally-recommended treatment guidelines. This new funding, which supplements the already large increase in the Ryan White program, will help minorities get access to cutting edge HIV/AIDS drug treatments as well as the range of primary health services needed to treat this disease. It also will be used to educate health care providers who treat largely minority populations on treatment guidelines for HIV/AIDS.

- Highlight Unprecedented Increases in Effective HIV/AIDS Treatment, Prevention, and Research Programs. This is a good opportunity to highlight the fact that Congress has approved substantial critical increases in a wide range of effective HIV/AIDS programs that were strongly supported by you and the Vice President. These include:

-- A historic $250 million increase in the Ryan White Care Act which provides for primary HIV health care services, treatments, and teaching health care professionals HIV treatment guidelines. This investment which provides over 60 percent increase for the AIDS drug assistance program, which provides protease inhibitors and other life-saving HIV/AIDS treatments to those who could not afford these treatments, which run as high as $20,000 per year.

- Ten Percent Increase for HIV/AIDS Research at NIH. In FY 1999, research on HIV/AIDS at the National Institutes of Health (NIH) will total over $1.8 billion, a 10 percent increase. This increase will enhance both basic research to further our understanding of the HIV virus as well as applied research that includes clinical testing of new HIV/AIDS pharmacological therapies.
- Reiterate your Commitment to Eliminate Racial Health Disparities. Minorities suffer from higher rates for a number of critical diseases, including HIV/AIDS. Hispanics are more than four times as likely to get HIV/AIDS than whites, while African-Americans are more than eight times as likely. The Congress has taken a first step in investing in the President's proposal to address racial health disparities by funding over $65 million of this initiative. Congress partially funded the proposed grants for communities to develop new strategies to address these disparities and for increases in other critical public health programs, such as heart disease and diabetes prevention at CDC, that have shown promise in attacking these disparities.
- Call on Congress to Pass Unfinished Agenda for People With HIV/AIDS. You have repeatedly urged the Congress to pass a strong, enforceable patients' bill of rights that contains critical protections for people with HIV/AIDS including: access to specialists, continuity of care so to prevent abrupt changes in critical treatment when an employer changes health plans. Congress also failed to pass the bipartisan Jeffords-Kennedy bill that enables people with disabilities and other disabling conditions, such as HIV/AIDS, to go back to work by expanding options to buy into Medicaid and Medicare, as well as other pro-work initiatives.

Everyone:

While I was checking with the Counsel's Office about having Sandy participate on the host committee of the 5th Annual Whitman-Walker Latino Art Exhibit, someone in that office decided that she would be the keynote speaker, but did not tell us. The event is on Thursday - this Thursday!

After talking with the organizers, I think that it is important for her not to back out - but we will need a 5 - 8 minute speech by Thursday evening. Here are the main points:

The more personal and informal the better; the shorter the better. There will be about 300 people attending, it is a lecture style room with podium, the program is about 30 minutes long, introducing Sandy will be a woman from Univision, and the audience will consist of impassioned people who care deeply about the AIDS epidemic in their community but are not big donors (hence, informal).

Two others who will be making remarks are Former Surgeon General Antonio N. and Dr. Bennet from the Pan American Health Association.

Suggested remarks: The stigma of AIDS in the Latino/a community - this event shows the spirit to fight, it is their fifth year, marking the community's dedication to ending the epidemic, trying to break down the barriers, etc. They wanted to stress that this event is not something to be too worried about, and that off-the-cuff remarks are just fine. People are just happy that she is coming and showing her support for their event.

The contact at Whitman-Walker is James Milner at 797-3500. Sandy, Jim Graham will be escorting you through the evening - we can have you in and out within about an hour.

I know that you all have to leave for Dallas, but any help that you could give me in preparing Sandy for this event would be much appreciated.
Thanks!

Subject: [1437] The Hidden Costs of AIDS Obsession

Dear SEA-AIDS subscribers,

One of the leading Indian journalist RUPA CHINAI is questioning the idea of the government of India plunging into the second phase of the AIDS prevention and control programmes without evaluating the result of the first phase of the programme. [the Hidden Costs of AIDS Obsession., The Times of India, wednesday 2 September 1998]. Will the World Bank authorities care to develop evaluation parameters to measure the efficacy of their AIDS related funding in India?.

As Ms. Chinnai is asking certain crucial questions on the policy directions of AIDS prevention in India the following article may be of interest to the SEA-AIDS members.

(forwarded by Joe Thomas for reference. joethomas@hivnet.ch)

The Hidden Costs of AIDS Obsession
By RUPA CHINAI

WITHOUT any evaluation of how its AIDS control and prevention programme has worked in the past decade, India is plunging into the second phase of the programme bent upon repeating the same mistakes. With many questions still remaining unanswered about HIV/AIDS, the disease is being given top ranking status, eclipsing all other killer diseases, and skewing India's health policy.

AIDS is a unique disease because it is linked to a range of opportunistic infections that arise with its onset. It provides a window to look at what is going wrong within the health system, in our patterns of social and economic development. It provides impetus for change.

Three Questions

By pouring money into a narrowly conceived AIDS policy, India is yet again missing the bus. The past decade's experience reveals that an AIDS programme cannot stand in isolation, while general primary health care remains in a state of shambles.

In the first phase of the programme (1992-1999) the AIDS programme received Rs 320 crores; the second phase will see an unprecedented Rs 800 crores assured through World Bank loans. Over the past decade, three questions have consistently been raised by public health experts in India. While donor agencies and the Indian government have spoken of 'projections' and 'estimates' about the AIDS epidemic sweeping India, where is the epidemiological data supporting those claims?

Secondly, AIDS is connected with a range of diseases like TB, diarrhoea, malnutrition or malaria (the presence of these factors depress the immune system leading to the faster onset of AIDS). Why then are we seeing the eclipse of all other disease programmes, and a major portion of the 'AIDS funds' poured into a 'targeted' intervention programme, geared at condom promotion and sex education?

Thirdly, the hysteria and scare tactics being used to create awareness about AIDS is wreaking social havoc. In the past months, reports have poured in from across the country about incidents of lynching and ostracism by entire communities against AIDS patients.

To date, the National AIDS Control Organisation records 5,204 AIDS cases in India, primarily reported from four states. Meanwhile, those testing HIV positive number 75,000. Until 1997, these samples were drawn from 55 'sentinel surveillance sites' -- blood banks, sexually transmitted disease clinics and ante-natal clinics -- that are not uniformly spread across the country. Bihar, for instance, has none, and its one testing centre in Patna reports 29 HIV cases and 3 of AIDS. Meanwhile, Maharashtra reports 46,000 testing HIV positive and 2,518 AIDS cases. Such uneven trends, drawn from selectively chosen groups in a few urban areas, are being extrapolated to the general population across the country.

Despite the absence of epidemiological data, India unquestioningly follows the diktat of donor agencies in pursuit of a vertical AIDS programme. Countries like Thailand have integrated AIDS into a strong primary health system. They are now seeing results in AIDS prevention, and simultaneously in malaria control. India's primary health services remain in shambles. A vertical AIDS programme cannot work when there is no primary health base it can stand upon. Indian health experience offers one key insight: When the community receives a comprehensive package of curative services it needs, only then does it become receptive to the prevention message.

Comprehensive Care

Meanwhile, a fundamental debate rages internationally on whether HIV is the sole cause of AIDS. Is AIDS related to abuse of lifestyle rather than a virus? Do factors such as antibiotic and recreational drug abuse, anal sex, nutrition and stress disorders play any role in immune system suppression? Does AIDS research need to look at drugs that modulate or boost the immune system response? When so many questions remain unanswered about HIV/AIDS, shouldn't our interventions be as broad-based as possible?

There are also questions about whether public policy should encourage HIV testing when there are doubts about the accuracy of the kit and whether the virus itself has been isolated. If HIV exists, but is "constantly mutating", can the HIV test show a false negative result? When the HIV test is conducted on persons suffering from malaria, TB, malnutrition and other common infections, can there be a cross-reaction, leading to false positive results?

After a decade of living with AIDS, maybe this disease seeks to teach us that there is more to it than condoms and sex education. AIDS is about creative responses to social and economic needs, comprehensive health care and education.

Moderator's note: Just a quick note re. the paragraph on whether HIV causes AIDS. On the Healthdev discussion forums we assume that HIV is the cause of AIDS. If you would like to join a debate on whether this assumption is correct or valid write to: Rethinking AIDS - ben@aidsinfobbs.org

Draft 10/27/98 2:50pm

Lowell Weiss

PRESIDENT WILLIAM J. CLINTON

REMARKS ON HIV CRISIS IN MINORITY COMMUNITIES

THE WHITE HOUSE

October 28, 1998

Acknowledge: Sec. Shalala, Surgeon Gen. Satcher, Reps. Waters and Stokes . I also want to thank the Director of our AIDS Policy Office, Sandy Thurman, for her tireless efforts on behalf of those living with HIV. She has spent most of her time these past several months to help achieve the dramatic funding increases we are here to talk about. There is no stronger advocate for policies based on science and for public health without politics.

I also want to thank Denise Stokes for being here. As you will hear in a few moments, Denise has been living with HIV for 15 years and is giving so much of herself to educating others. If we are to bury this cruel disease -- instead of being forced to bury friends and loved ones who have been stricken down in the prime of their lives -- reaching out with candor and compassion to those at risk is an indispensable key.

And if we're going to bury this cruel disease, we must do more to reach out with candor and compassion at the national level as well. So yes, we have every right to feel encouraged that so many HIV-positive men and women are living longer and healthier lives. Yes, we should be proud that we've helped speed development of life-saving therapies and nearly tripled funding to support those with HIV and AIDS.

But let there be no doubt: the AIDS epidemic is not over. It is a particularly severe and ongoing crisis in the African-American community and other communities of color. Like other epidemics before it, AIDS is now hitting hardest in areas where poverty is high and education is scarce. It is picking on the most vulnerable among us. So yes, we must do more to bury this cruel disease.

Today, America is enjoying a time of great prosperity. In fact, some people say we're doing well enough that we can afford to kick back and relax. But I say, now is not the time to rest. Now is the time when we have the greatest opportunity to help those who need it most.

I say we cannot rest until every community reaps the benefits of our nation's economic growth. We cannot rest until every child, in every community, has the benefit of a world-class education, in safe and modern schools. We cannot rest while we have such unacceptable racial and ethnic disparities in infant mortality, heart disease, and certain types of cancer.

And we cannot rest while HIV and AIDS are ravaging entire neighborhoods. The fact is, HIV infection is rapidly becoming one of the most deadly health disparities of all. The AIDS crisis in our communities of color is a national crisis. And that is why we will greatly increase our national response.

Today, I am proud to announce that we are launching an historic $130 million initiative to stem the HIV crisis in minority communities. This initiative represents one of the greatest victories in the balanced budget I just signed. And it never could have happened without the passionate -- and compassionate -- leadership of Maxine Waters, Louis Stokes, the rest of the CBC, and so many others here today.

This initiative will allow thousands of cities, churches, schools, and grassroots organizations to tailor HIV prevention efforts to the specific needs of specific communities -- such as young men, students, and pregnant mothers.

It will allow minority communities to expand treatment for substance abuse -- because the largest group of new HIV cases can be linked directly or indirectly to drug abuse. It will increase access to protease inhibitors and other miraculous new therapies -- because life-saving therapies cannot be a luxury reserved for the rich.

It will increase access to doctors and other health care providers, while giving those providers the most up-to-date information on the best ways to treat HIV disease. And finally, we will assemble teams of top public-health experts from the Centers for Disease Control and other federal agencies to visit communities and provide whatever technical assistance they need.

From the bully pulpit to the church pulpit, from the schools to the streets, we will tap every source of strength to bury this cruel disease. Because we cannot rest when brothers and sisters, parents and children, friends and neighbors are dying. We cannot rest when we have the faith and the power to turn this epidemic around.

Let us recall the Gospel of Luke. Jesus visits a town called Nain, where he sees a funeral procession with a grieving widow about to bury her only son. To Jesus it is an untimely death, an unnecessary death, so he brings the son back to life. Jesus turns that funeral procession around.

Today, I say to you: of course we do not have that same divine touch. But we do have education and outreach, science and medicine, faith and compassion. And with these tools and with these gifts, we can stop the untimely deaths from this cruel disease. Together, we can -- and must -- turn the funeral processions around.

And now, I would like to ask our Surgeon General, Dr. David Satcher, the nation's leading voice for the health of all Americans, to provide you with his perspective on the dimensions of the epidemic we must overcome in our communities of color.

Concluding remarks:

Thank you, again, Denise. You are one of the bravest people I know. I am so proud that the initiative we have announced today will allow us to draw upon the talents of people like you -- people who are willing to speak out and reach out to others.

I want to leave you today with just one more passage from the Bible that sums up precisely why this crisis in our communities is such an important national concern. This one is from the first letter of Paul to the Corinthians: &The body is a unit, though it is made up of many parts; and though all its parts are many, they form one body... If one part suffers, every part suffers with it; if one part is honored, every part rejoices with it. 8 So it is with the body. So it is with our national community. We are all one nation. We must be one America. We must work together in every community -- whether it's black or white, gay or straight, rich or poor -- to bury this cruel disease. Thank you for your tireless efforts and God bless you all.

PRESIDENT WILLIAM J. CLINTON

REMARKS ON HIV CRISIS IN MINORITY COMMUNITIES

THE WHITE HOUSE

Acknowledgments: Sec. Shalala, Surgeon Gen. Satcher, Reps. Waters and Stokes. I also want to thank the Director of our AIDS Policy Office, Sandy Thurman, for her tireless efforts on behalf of those living with HIV. She has spent most of her time these past several months to help achieve the dramatic funding increases we are here to talk about. There is no stronger advocate for policies based on science and for public health without politics.

I also want to thank Denise Stokes for being here. As you will hear in a few moments, Denise has been living with HIV for 15 years and is giving so much of herself to educating others. As she has shown, if we are to bury this cruel disease -- instead of being forced to bury friends and loved ones who have been stricken down in the prime of their lives -- we must reach out with candor and compassion to those at risk.

And if we're going to bury this cruel disease, we must do more to reach out with candor and compassion at the national level as well. So yes, we have every right to feel encouraged that so many HIV-positive men and women are living longer and healthier lives. Yes, we should be proud that we've helped speed development of life-saving therapies and nearly tripled funding to support those with HIV and AIDS.

But let there be no doubt: the AIDS epidemic is not over. It is a particularly severe and ongoing crisis in the African-American community and other communities of color. Like other epidemics before it, AIDS is now hitting hardest in areas where poverty is high and education is scarce. It is picking on the most vulnerable among us. So yes, we must do more to bury this cruel disease.

Today, America is enjoying a time of great prosperity. In fact, some people say we're doing well enough that we can afford to kick back and relax. But I say, now is not the time to rest. Now is the time when we have the greatest opportunity to help those who need it most.

I say we cannot rest until every community reaps the benefits of our nation's economic growth. We cannot rest until every child, in every community, has the benefit of a world-class education, in safe and modern schools. We cannot rest while we have such unacceptable racial and ethnic disparities in infant mortality, heart disease, and certain types of cancer.

And we cannot rest while HIV and AIDS are ravaging entire neighborhoods. The fact is, HIV infection is rapidly becoming one of the most deadly health disparities of all. The AIDS crisis in our communities of color is a national crisis. And that is why we will greatly increase our national response.

Today, I am proud to announce that we are launching an historic $130 million initiative to stem the HIV crisis in minority communities. This initiative represents one of the greatest victories in the balanced budget I just signed. And it never could have happened without the passionate -- and compassionate -- leadership of Maxine Waters, Louis Stokes, the rest of the CBC, and so many others here today.

This initiative will allow thousands of cities, churches, schools, and grassroots organizations to tailor HIV prevention efforts to the specific needs of specific communities -- such as young men, students, and pregnant mothers. It will allow minority communities to expand treatment for substance abuse.

It will increase access to protease inhibitors and other miraculous new therapies -- because life-saving therapies cannot be a luxury reserved for the rich. It will increase access to doctors and other health care providers, while giving those providers the most up-to-date information on the best ways to treat HIV disease. And finally, it will help us assemble teams of public-health experts from the Centers for Disease Control and other federal agencies to visit communities and provide whatever technical assistance they need.

I want to leave you today with a passage from the Bible that sums up precisely why this crisis in our communities is such an important national concern. The passage is from the first letter of Paul to the Corinthians: "The body is a unit, though it is made up of many parts; and though all its parts are many, they form one body... If one part suffers, every part suffers with it; if one part is honored, every part rejoices with it. 8 So it is with the body. So it is with our national community. We are all one nation. We must be one America. We must work together in every community -- whether it is black or white, gay or straight, rich or poor -- to bury this cruel disease. Thank you for your commitment to this righteous cause.

And now, I am pleased to present Dr. David Satcher, America's Surgeon General and the nation's family doctor. His deep commitment to advancing the nation's health is rooted in the 200-year-old guiding principle of the Public Health Service: that you best protect the health of the entire nation when you address the concerns of its most vulnerable people.

Concluding remarks:

Thank you, again, Denise. You are one of the bravest people I know. I am so proud that the initiative we have announced today will allow us to draw upon the talents of people like you -- people who are so effective at speaking out and reaching out to others.

From the bully pulpit to the church pulpit, from the schools to the streets, we will tap every source of strength to bury this cruel disease. Because we cannot rest when brothers and sisters, parents and children, friends and neighbors are dying. We cannot rest when we have the faith and the power to turn this epidemic around. Thank you again for your tireless efforts and God bless you all.

Her present activities include speaking engagements to colleges, community groups, professional organizations, corporations, hospitals and foundations. She has also been presented to many well known entities such as the National Football League and many of its clubs on a team level.

Ms. Stokes has been featured in two national television and radio ads for the America Responds to AIDS Campaig, and has also been featured by CNN Headline News, the Rolonada Show, Joyce Live, Creative Loafing, Atlanta Journal/Constitution and 48 Hours. PRESIDENT CLINTON DECLARES HIV/AIDS IN RACIAL AND ETHNIC MINORITY
NEW INITIATIVE TO ADDRESS THIS PROBLEM

October 28, 1998

Today, the President declared HIV/AIDS in racial and ethnic minority communities to be a “severe and ongoing health care crisis” and unveiled a series of initiatives that invest $156 million to address this urgent problem. Citing chronic and overwhelmingly disproportionate burden of HIV/AIDS on minorities, the President outlined a new comprehensive initiative that includes unprecedented efforts to improve the nation’s effectiveness in preventing and treating HIV/AIDS in the African-American and Hispanic and other minority communities. The President also highlighted other important increases to fight HIV/AIDS in the budget as well as new funding for his initiative to address racial health disparities for a range of diseases, including HIV/AIDS. Today, the President:

- Declared HIV/AIDS in the minority community to be a “severe and ongoing health care crisis.” While overall AIDS deaths have declined for two years in a row, it remains the leading killer of African-American men age 25-44 and the second leading killer of African-American women in the same age group. African-Americans comprise more than 40 percent of all new HIV/AIDS cases, and African-American women make up 60 percent of female cases. Hispanics represent over 20 percent of new HIV/AIDS cases, though they make up only about 10 percent of the population.
- Unveiled historic initiatives that invest $156 million for HIV/AIDS in the minority community. During the recent budget negotiations and the Clinton Administration and the Congressional Black Caucus fought successfully to secure a major commitment of funds to address the urgent problem of HIV/AIDS among minorities including new prevention efforts, improved access to HIV/AIDS drug treatments, and training better for health professionals who treat this disease. Over two-thirds of this funding is through new resources appropriated through the Omnibus Appropriations Act and the rest will be dedicated from the HHS budget.
 - Crisis response teams. HHS will make available Crisis Response Teams to a number of highly-impacted areas. These teams of public health and HIV prevention and treatment experts, doctors, nurses, epidemiologists, from a range of agencies including the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, the Health Resources and Services Administration, and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and others will, over a period of several weeks, help assess existing prevention and treatment services for racial and ethnic minorities and develop innovative new effective strategies to best meet the needs of these communities.

- Enhanced HIV/AIDS prevention efforts in racial and ethnic minority communities. These funds will be used for important HIV prevention purposes at the Centers for Disease Control such as: grants for minority community-based organizations to create innovative outreach approaches in communities heavily impacted by HIV/AIDS, such as working with local health clinics, making testing and counseling available, conducting community workshops, and developing HIV and substance abuse prevention programs on the campuses of Historically Black Colleges and Universities. It will also help provide comprehensive substance abuse treatment programs for African-American and Hispanic women and their children living with or at risk for HIV/AIDS.

- Reducing disparities in treatment and health outcomes for minorities with HIV/AIDS. Studies show that African-Americans and Hispanics are much less likely to have receive care that meet federally-recommended treatment guidelines. This new funding, which supplements the already large increase in the Ryan White program, will help minorities get access to cutting edge HIV/AIDS drug treatments and the range of primary health services needed to treat this disease. It also will be used to educate health care providers serving largely minority populations on treatment guidelines for HIV/AIDS.

- Highlighted Unprecedented Increases in Effective HIV/AIDS Treatment, Prevention, and Research Programs. The President also highlighted the fact that Congress has approved substantial critical increases in a wide range of effective HIV/AIDS programs that were strongly advocated by the Vice President. These include:
 - A historic $262 million increase in the Ryan White Care Act providing for primary HIV health care services, treatments, and training for health care professionals HIV treatment guidelines. This investment provides an over 60 percent increase for the AIDS drug assistance program, which provides protease inhibitors and other life-saving HIV/AIDS treatments to those who could not afford these treatments, which run as high as $20,000 per year.

- Twelve percent increase for HIV/AIDS research at NIH. In FY 1999, research on HIV/AIDS at the National Institutes of Health (NIH) will total $1.8 billion, a 12 percent increase. This increase will enhance both basic research to further our understanding of the HIV virus as well as applied research that includes clinical testing of new HIV/AIDS pharmacological therapies and develop better protective measures for women at risk.
- Reiterated His Commitment to Eliminate Racial Health Disparities. Minorities suffer from higher rates for a number of critical diseases, including HIV/AIDS. Hispanics are more than four times as likely to get HIV/AIDS than whites, while African-Americans are more than eight times as likely. The Congress has taken a first step in investing in the President's proposal to address racial health disparities by funding $65 million of this initiative. Congress partially funded the proposed grants for communities to develop new strategies to address these disparities and for increases in other critical public health programs, such as heart disease and diabetes prevention at CDC, that have shown promise in attacking these disparities.
- Called on Congress to Pass Unfinished Agenda for People With HIV/AIDS.
 - A Patients' Bill of Rights. The President and Vice President have repeatedly urged the Congress to pass a strong, enforceable patients' bill of rights that contains critical protections for people with HIV/AIDS including: access to specialists, continuity of care so to prevent abrupt changes in critical treatment when an employer changes health plan.
 - A Work Incentives Bill for People with Disabilities. Congress also failed to pass the bipartisan Jeffords-Kennedy bill that enables people with disabilities and other disabling conditions, such as HIV/AIDS, to go back to work by expanding options to buy into Medicaid and Medicare, as well as other pro-work initiatives. This bill was on the list of top Administration priorities in the final budget negotiations. The President affirmed his commitment to continue fighting to allow people with disabilities get the health care coverage they need to return to work.

PRESIDENT WILLIAM J. CLINTON
REMARKS ON HIV CRISIS IN MINORITY COMMUNITIES
THE WHITE HOUSE
October 28, 1998

Acknowledge: Sec. Shalala, Surgeon Gen. Satcher, Reps. Waters and Stokes
. I also want to thank the Director of our AIDS Policy Office, Sandy Thurman, for her tireless efforts on behalf of those living with HIV. She has spent most of her time these past several months to help achieve the dramatic funding increases we are here to talk about. There is no stronger advocate for policies based on science and for public health without politics.

I also want to thank Denise Stokes for being here. As you will hear in a few moments, Denise has been living with HIV for 15 years and is giving so much of herself to educating others. If we are to bury this cruel disease
-- instead of being forced to bury friends and loved ones who have been stricken down in the prime of their lives -- reaching out with candor and compassion to those at risk is an indispensable key.

And if we ,re going to bury this cruel disease, we must do more to reach out with candor and compassion at the national level as well. So yes, we have every right to feel encouraged that so many HIV-positive men and women are living longer and healthier lives. Yes, we should be proud that we ,ve helped speed development of life-saving therapies and nearly tripled funding to support those with HIV and AIDS.

But let there be no doubt: the AIDS epidemic is not over. It is a particularly severe and ongoing crisis in the African-American community and other communities of color. Like other epidemics before it, AIDS is now hitting hardest in areas where poverty is high and education is scarce. It is picking on the most vulnerable among us. So yes, we must do more to bury this cruel disease.

Today, America is enjoying a time of great prosperity. In fact, some people say we're doing well enough that we can afford to kick back and relax. But I say, now is not the time to rest. Now is the time when we have the greatest opportunity to help those who need it most.

We cannot rest until every child, in every community, has the benefit of a world-class education, in safe and modern schools. We cannot rest while we have such unacceptable racial and ethnic disparities in infant mortality, heart disease, and certain types of cancer.

And we cannot rest while HIV and AIDS are ravaging entire neighborhoods. The fact is, HIV infection is rapidly becoming one of the most deadly health disparities of all. The AIDS crisis in our communities of color is a national crisis. And that is why we will greatly increase our national response.

Today, I am proud to announce that we are launching an historic $130 million initiative to stem the HIV crisis in minority communities. This initiative represents one of the greatest victories in the balanced budget I just signed. And it never could have happened without the passionate -- and compassionate -- leadership of Maxine Waters, Louis Stokes, the rest of the CBC, and so many others here today.

This initiative will allow thousands of cities, churches, schools, and grassroots organizations to tailor HIV prevention efforts to the specific needs of specific communities -- such as young men, students, and pregnant mothers.

It will allow minority communities to expand treatment for substance abuse -- because the largest group of new HIV cases can be linked directly or indirectly to drug abuse. It will increase access to protease inhibitors and other miraculous new therapies -- because life-saving therapies cannot be a luxury reserved for the rich.

It will increase access to doctors and other health care providers, while giving those providers the most up-to-date information on the best ways to treat HIV disease. And finally, we will assemble teams of top public-health experts from the Centers for Disease Control and other federal agencies to visit communities and provide whatever technical assistance they need.

From the bully pulpit to the church pulpit, from the schools to the streets, we will tap every source of strength to bury this cruel disease. Because we cannot rest when brothers and sisters, parents and children, friends and neighbors are dying. We cannot rest when we have the faith and the power to turn this epidemic around.

Let us recall the Gospel of Luke. Jesus visits a town called Nain, where he sees a funeral procession with a grieving widow about to bury her only son. To Jesus it is an untimely death, an unnecessary death, so he brings the son back to life. Jesus turns that funeral procession around.

Today, I say to you: of course we do not have that same divine touch. But we do have education and outreach, science and medicine, faith and compassion. And with these tools and with these gifts, we can stop the untimely deaths from this cruel disease. Together, we can -- and must -- turn the funeral processions around.

And now, I would like to ask our Surgeon General, Dr. David Satcher, the nation's leading voice for the health of all Americans, to provide you with his perspective on the dimensions of the epidemic we must overcome in our communities of color.

Concluding remarks:

Thank you, again, Denise. You are one of the bravest people I know. I am so proud that the initiative we have announced today will allow us to draw upon the talents of people like you -- people who are willing to speak out and reach out to others.

I want to leave you today with just one more passage from the Bible that sums up precisely why this crisis in our communities is such an important national concern. This one is from the first letter of Paul to the Corinthians: &The body is a unit, though it is made up of many parts; and though all its parts are many, they form one body... If one part suffers, every part suffers with it; if one part is honored, every part rejoices with it. 8 So it is with the body. So it is with our national community. We are all one nation. We must be one America. We must work together in every community -- whether it's black or white, gay or straight, rich or poor -- to bury this cruel disease. Thank you for your tireless efforts and God bless you all.

Biographical Sketch

Denise A. Stokes

DENISE STOKES is a community activists dedicated to education, awareness and prevention. She has been involved in AIDS education for over eight years. Beginning as a volunteer and quickly assuming a leadership role in community outreach efforts, she specialized in deducation, support group facilitation, hospital visitation, substance abuse counseling and training other peer counselors. She is now a free-lance AIDS Educational Consultant and Motivational Speaker.

Infected with HIV sixteen years ago and diagnosed with AIDS twelve years ago, Ms. Stoke was one of the youngest members of the AIDS community to become active in the struggle for prevention and awareness. Among other accomplishments, Denise was instrumental in gaining access to African American churches in the early 1990's and in being one of the first people to put a face on heterosexual HIV infection. Her present activities include speaking engagements to colleges, community groups, professional organizations, corporations, hospitals and foundations. She has also been presented to many well known entities such as the National Football League and many of its clubs on a team level.

Ms. Stokes has been featured in two national television and radio ads for the America Responds to AIDS Campaig, and has also been featured by CNN Headline News, the Rolonada Show, Joyce Live, Creative Loafing, Atlanta Journal/Constitution and 48 Hours. Some of her other media credits include Glamour, Esteem, Straight Talk, Direct Wire, and Emerge magazines.

Ms. Stokes now serves as a member of the Presidential Advisory Council on HIV/AIDS.

Denise Stokes is also an emerging writer. She held her debut for a packed house in July 1997 in Atlanta, contributed a work to New York director James Alder's prestigious Memento mori: An AIDS Requiem, and was honored with the request of presenting her poetry to Atlanta Mayor Bill Campbell. Ms. Stokes is now in the process of writing a book based on her life experiences.

HIV/AIDS ANNOUNCEMENT

DATE: October 28, 1998
LOCATION: Room 450 OEOB
BRIEFING TIME: 4:40 pm - 4:55 pm
EVENT: 5:00 pm - 6:00 pm
FROM: Bruce Reed/Minyon Moore/Sandy Thurman

I. PURPOSE

To unveil a $156 million historic new initiative to address the urgent problem of HIV/AIDS in minority communities.

II. BACKGROUND

You will be addressing approximately 150 representatives of the african american, civil rights, public health, AIDS, and gay and lesbian communities to discuss the urgent problem of HIV/AIDS in racial and ethnic minority communities. In your remarks, you will declare the status of HIV/AIDS in minority communities to be a “severe and ongoing health care crisis.” To address the chronic and overwhelmingly disproportionate burden of HIV/AIDS on minorities, you will announce a $156 million new comprehensive initiative that includes unprecedented efforts to improve the nation’s effectiveness in preventing and treating HIV/AIDS in the African-American and Hispanic communities. This is also an opportunity to highlight other important increases to fight HIV/AIDS in the budget, as well as new funding for your initiative to address racial health disparities for a range of diseases, including HIV/AIDS.

- Declare HIV/AIDS in the minority community to be a “severe and ongoing health care crisis.” While overall AIDS deaths have declined for two years in a row, it remains the leading killer of African American men age 25-44 and the second leading killer of African American women in the same age group. African-Americans comprise more than 40 percent of all new HIV/AIDS cases, and African-American women make up 60 percent of female cases. Hispanics represent over 20 percent of new HIV/AIDS cases and only about 10 percent of the population.

- Unveil historic $130 million increase for HIV/AIDS in the minority community. This new initiative, which has been strongly endorsed by the Congressional Black Caucus, will address the urgent problem of HIV/AIDS among minorities including new prevention efforts, improved access to HIV/AIDS drug treatments, and training for health professionals who treat this disease.
 - Crisis response teams. HHS will make available Crisis Response Teams to a number of highly-impacted areas. These teams will include experts in public health and HIV prevention and treatment, doctors, nurses, and epidemiologist from a range of agencies including the CDC, SAMSHA, HRSA. The teams will, over a period of several weeks, help assess existing prevention and treatment services for racial and ethnic minorities and develop new innovative effective strategies that best meet the needs of these communities.
 - Enhanced HIV/AIDS prevention efforts in racial and ethnic minority communities. These funds will be used for important HIV prevention purposes at the Centers for Disease Control. For example, funding will be made available for minority community-based organizations to create innovative outreach approaches in communities heavily impacted by HIV/AIDS, such as working with local health clinics, making testing available, conducting community workshops, and developing HIV and substance abuse prevention programs on the campuses of Historically Black Colleges and Universities. Recognizing that substance abusers are one of the fastest-growing populations of new HIV/AIDS cases, this investment also will enhance the HIV prevention and treatment component of drug treatment services.

-- Reducing disparities in treatment and health outcomes for minorities with HIV/AIDS. Studies show that African-Americans and Hispanics are much less likely to have receive treatments that meet federally-recommended treatment guidelines. This new funding, which supplements the already large increase in the Ryan White program, will help minorities get access to cutting edge HIV/AIDS drug treatments as well as the range of primary health services needed to treat this disease. It also will be used to educate health care providers who treat largely minority populations on treatment guidelines for HIV/AIDS.

- Highlight Unprecedented Increases in Effective HIV/AIDS Treatment, Prevention, and Research Programs. This is a good opportunity to highlight the fact that Congress has approved substantial critical increases in a wide range of effective HIV/AIDS programs that were strongly supported by you and the Vice President. These include:

-- A historic $250 million increase in the Ryan White Care Act which provides for primary HIV health care services, treatments, and teaching health care professionals HIV treatment guidelines. This investment provides over 60 percent increase for the AIDS drug assistance program, which provides protease inhibitors and other life-saving HIV/AIDS treatments to those who could not afford these treatments, which run as high as $20,000 per year.

-- A $275 million increase in SAMHSA's Substance Abuse Block Grant.

Drug treatment is a critical weapon used to prevent the spread of HIV. This 21 percent increase in the Block Grant will dramatically improve the availability of drug treatment services. It also enhances HIV early intervention services to improve the quality of life for substance abusers living with HIV infection, to slow the progression of disease, and to prevent the onset of life threatening illnesses among this target population.

-- Ten Percent Increase for HIV/AIDS Research at NIH. In FY 1999, research on HIV/AIDS at the National Institutes of Health (NIH) will total over $1.8 billion, a 10 percent increase. This increase will enhance both basic research to further our understanding of the HIV virus as well as applied research that includes clinical testing of new HIV/AIDS pharmacological therapies.

- Reiterate your Commitment to Eliminate Racial Health Disparities. Minorities suffer from higher rates for a number of critical diseases, including HIV/AIDS. Hispanics are more than four times as likely to get HIV/AIDS than whites, while African-Americans are more than eight times as likely. The Congress has taken a first step in investing in the President's proposal to address racial health disparities by funding over $50 million of this initiative. Congress partially funded the proposed grants for communities to develop new strategies to address these disparities and for increases in other critical public health programs, such as heart disease and diabetes prevention at CDC, that have showed promise in attacking these disparities.
- Call on Congress to Pass Unfinished Agenda for People With HIV/AIDS. You have repeatedly urged the Congress to pass a strong, enforceable patients' bill of rights that contains critical protections for people with HIV/AIDS including: access to specialists, continuity of care so to prevent abrupt changes in critical treatment when an employer changes health plans. Congress also failed to pass the bipartisan Jeffords-Kennedy bill that enables people with disabilities and other disabling conditions, such as HIV/AIDS, to go back to work by expanding options to buy into Medicaid and Medicare, as well as other pro-work initiatives.

Subject: [1437] The Hidden Costs of AIDS Obsession

Dear SEA-AIDS subscribers,

One of the leading Indian journalist RUPA CHINAI is questioning the idea of the government of India plunging into the second phase of the AIDS prevention and control programmes without evaluating the result of the first phase of the programme. [the Hidden Costs of AIDS Obsession., The Times of India, wednesday 2 September 1998]. Will the World Bank authorities care to develop evaluation parameters to measure the efficacy of their AIDS related funding in India?.

As Ms. Chinnai is asking certain crucial questions on the policy directions of AIDS prevention in India the following article may be of interest to the SEA-AIDS members.

(forwarded by Joe Thomas for reference. joethomas@hivnet.ch)

The Hidden Costs of AIDS Obsession
By RUPA CHINAI

WITHOUT any evaluation of how its AIDS control and prevention programme has worked in the past decade, India is plunging into the second phase of the programme bent upon repeating the same mistakes. With many questions still remaining unanswered about HIV/AIDS, the disease is being given top ranking status, eclipsing all other killer diseases, and skewing India's health policy.

AIDS is a unique disease because it is linked to a range of opportunistic infections that arise with its onset. It provides a window to look at what is going wrong within the health system, in our patterns of social and economic development. It provides impetus for change.

Three Questions

By pouring money into a narrowly conceived AIDS policy, India is yet again missing the bus. The past decade's experience reveals that an AIDS programme cannot stand in isolation, while general primary health care remains in a state of shambles.

In the first phase of the programme (1992-1999) the AIDS programme received Rs 320 crores; the second phase will see an unprecedented Rs 800 crores assured through World Bank loans. Over the past decade, three questions have consistently been raised by public health experts in India. While donor agencies and the Indian government have spoken of 'projections' and 'estimates' about the AIDS epidemic sweeping India, where is the epidemiological data supporting those claims?

Secondly, AIDS is connected with a range of diseases like TB, diarrhoea, malnutrition or malaria (the presence of these factors depress the immune system leading to the faster onset of AIDS). Why then are we seeing the eclipse of all other disease programmes, and a major portion of the 'AIDS funds' poured into a 'targeted' intervention programme, geared at condom promotion and sex education?

Thirdly, the hysteria and scare tactics being used to create awareness about AIDS is wreaking social havoc. In the past months, reports have poured in from across the country about incidents of lynching and ostracism by entire communities against AIDS patients.

To date, the National AIDS Control Organisation records 5,204 AIDS cases in India, primarily reported from four states. Meanwhile, those testing HIV positive number 75,000. Until 1997, these samples were drawn from 55 'sentinel surveillance sites' -- blood banks, sexually transmitted disease clinics and ante-natal clinics -- that are not uniformly spread across the country. Bihar, for instance, has none, and its one testing centre in Patna reports 29 HIV cases and 3 of AIDS. Meanwhile, Maharashtra reports 46,000 testing HIV positive and 2,518 AIDS cases. Such uneven trends, drawn from selectively chosen groups in a few urban areas, are being extrapolated to the general population across the country.

Despite the absence of epidemiological data, India unquestioningly follows the diktat of donor agencies in pursuit of a vertical AIDS programme. Countries like Thailand have integrated AIDS into a strong primary health system. They are now seeing results in AIDS prevention, and simultaneously in malaria control. India's primary health services remain in shambles. A vertical AIDS programme cannot work when there is no primary health base it can stand upon. Indian health experience offers one key insight: When the community receives a comprehensive package of curative services it needs, only then does it become receptive to the prevention message.

Comprehensive Care

Meanwhile, a fundamental debate rages internationally on whether HIV is the sole cause of AIDS. Is AIDS related to abuse of lifestyle rather than a virus? Do factors such as antibiotic and recreational drug abuse, anal sex, nutrition and stress disorders play any role in immune system suppression? Does AIDS research need to look at drugs that modulate or boost the immune system response? When so many questions remain unanswered about HIV/AIDS, shouldn't our interventions be as broad-based as possible?

There are also questions about whether public policy should encourage HIV testing when there are doubts about the accuracy of the kit and whether the virus itself has been isolated. If HIV exists, but is "constantly mutating", can the HIV test show a false negative result? When the HIV test is conducted on persons suffering from malaria, TB, malnutrition and other common infections, can there be a cross-reaction, leading to false positive results?

After a decade of living with AIDS, maybe this disease seeks to teach us that there is more to it than condoms and sex education. AIDS is about creative responses to social and economic needs, comprehensive health care and education.

Moderator's note: Just a quick note re. the paragraph on whether HIV causes AIDS. On the Healthdev discussion forums we assume that HIV is the cause of AIDS. If you would like to join a debate on whether this assumption is correct or valid write to: Rethinking AIDS - ben@aidsinfobbs.org

Lowell and Sarah,

Sarah and I just made changes to the press paper, addressing the issue of Native Americans and Asian Americans. May I suggest that she forward that language to you for use in the speech. I am afraid that adding those two groups to the list of "disproportionately impacted" groups is inaccurate - I am pretty sure the rate of AIDS cases per 100,000 is higher for whites than it is for Native Americans or Asian Americans (I have a call in to CDC, which is checking its studies).

Draft 10/28/98 1:30pm

Lowell Weiss

PRESIDENT WILLIAM J. CLINTON

REMARKS ON HIV CRISIS IN MINORITY COMMUNITIES

THE WHITE HOUSE

Acknowledgments: VP Gore, who wanted to but couldn't be here today, for his leadership on this issue; Sec. Shalala, Surgeon Gen. Satcher, Reps. Waters and Stokes; civil rights and AIDS policy leaders. I also want to thank the Director of our AIDS Policy Office, Sandy Thurman, who has spent months sounding the alarm about the growing crisis in communities of color and working to help achieve the dramatic funding increases we will discuss in a moment. There is no stronger or more effective advocate for all people living with HIV than Sandy.

I also want to thank Denise Stokes for being here. As you will hear in a few moments, Denise has been living with HIV for 15 years and has been giving so much of herself to educate others. If we are to stop this cruel disease, we need brave people just like Denise to reach out with candor and compassion to those at risk.

And if we're going to stop this cruel disease, we must do more to reach out with candor and compassion at the national level as well. Yes, we have every right to feel encouraged that so many HIV-positive men and women are living longer and healthier lives. Yes, we should be proud that we've helped speed development of life-saving therapies and nearly tripled funding to support those with HIV and AIDS.

But the AIDS epidemic is far from over in any community in America. Today, we are here to send out the word loud and clear: AIDS is a particularly severe and ongoing crisis in the African-American and Hispanic communities and other communities of color. African-Americans represent only 13% of the U.S. population but account for almost half the new AIDS cases reported last year. Hispanics, who represent 10% of the population, account for more than 20% of new AIDS cases. And AIDS is becoming a critical concern in some Native American and Asian American communities as well. Like other epidemics before it, AIDS is now hitting hardest in areas where knowledge about the disease is scarce and poverty is high. It is picking on the most vulnerable among us.

The fact is, HIV infection is one of the most deadly health disparities between African-Americans, Hispanics, and white Americans. And just as we have committed to help build One America by ending the racial and ethnic disparities in infant mortality, cancer, and other diseases, we will use all our power to end the growing disparities in AIDS. The AIDS crisis in our communities of color is a national crisis. And that is why we must greatly increase our national response.

Today, I am proud to announce that we are launching an unprecedented $156 million initiative to stem the AIDS crisis in African-American and other minority communities. This initiative represents one of the greatest victories in the balanced budget I just signed. And it never could have happened without the passionate -- and com passionate -- leadership of Maxine Waters, Louis Stokes, the rest of the CBC, and so many others here today.

This historic initiative will allow thousands of cities, churches, schools, and grassroots organizations to expand HIV prevention efforts and target them to the specific needs of specific minority communities -- such as young men, students, and pregnant mothers. It will allow minority communities to expand treatment for substance abuse. It will increase access to protease inhibitors and other new therapies -- because life-saving therapies cannot be a luxury reserved for the rich. It will increase access to skilled doctors and other health care providers. And finally, it will help us assemble teams of public-health experts from the Centers for Disease Control and other federal agencies to visit individual communities and provide whatever technical assistance they need.

I am pleased that this new initiative will build on other historic increases in HIV/AIDS funding we won in our new balanced budget, which Sec. Shalala will talk about in greater detail. I am also pleased that it will build on my race and health initiative. Congress has taken a first step to fund this initiative, but we must do more. We are not One America when some of our communities are lagging far behind in health.

Of course this room looks nothing like a house of worship, but I want to end my remarks today with a very appropriate passage from the Bible. It is from the first letter of Paul to the Corinthians, and it sums up precisely why this crisis in our communities is such an important national concern. &The body is a unit, though it is made up of many parts; and though all its parts are many, they form one body... If one part suffers, every part suffers with it; if one part is honored, every part rejoices with it. 8

So it is with the body. So it is with a nation that strives to be One America. Make no mistake: Every one of our communities is inextricably linked, in suffering and rejoicing, in sickness and in health. And that is why we must work together in every community -- whether it is black or white, gay or straight, rich or poor -- to stop this cruel disease. Thank you for your commitment to this righteous cause.

And now, I am pleased to present Dr. David Satcher, America's Surgeon General and the nation's family doctor. His deep commitment to advancing the nation's health is rooted in the 200-year-old guiding principle of the Public Health Service: that you best protect the health of the entire nation when you address the concerns of its most vulnerable people.

Concluding remarks:

Thank you, again, Denise. You are one of the bravest people I know. I am so proud that the initiative we have announced today will allow us to draw upon the talents of people like you -- people who are so effective at speaking out and reaching out to others.

From the bully pulpit to the church pulpit, from the schools to the streets, we will tap every source of strength to end this cruel disease. Because we cannot rest when brothers and sisters, parents and children, friends and neighbors are at risk. We cannot rest when we have the faith and the power to turn this epidemic around. Thank you again for your tireless efforts and God bless you all.

Draft 10/28/98 1:30pm
Lowell Weiss
PRESIDENT WILLIAM J. CLINTON
REMARKS ON HIV CRISIS IN MINORITY COMMUNITIES
THE WHITE HOUSE

Acknowledgments: VP Gore, who wanted to but couldn't be here today, for his leadership on this issue; Sec. Shalala, Surgeon Gen. Satcher, Reps. Waters and Stokes; civil rights and AIDS policy leaders. I also want to thank the Director of our AIDS Policy Office, Sandy Thurman, who has spent months sounding the alarm about the growing crisis in communities of color and working to help achieve the dramatic funding increases we will discuss in a moment. There is no stronger or more effective advocate for all people living with HIV than Sandy.

I also want to thank Denise Stokes for being here. As you will hear in a few moments, Denise has been living with HIV for 15 years and has been giving so much of herself to educate others. If we are to stop this cruel disease, we need brave people just like Denise to reach out with candor and compassion to those at risk.

And if we're going to stop this cruel disease, we must do more to reach out with candor and compassion at the national level as well. Yes, we have every right to feel encouraged that so many HIV-positive men and women are living longer and healthier lives. Yes, we should be proud that we've helped speed development of life-saving therapies and nearly tripled funding to support those with HIV and AIDS.

But the AIDS epidemic is far from over in any community in America. Today, we are here to send out the word loud and clear: AIDS is a particularly severe and ongoing crisis in the African-American and Hispanic communities and other communities of color. African-Americans represent only 13% of the U.S. population but account for almost half the new AIDS cases reported last year. Hispanics, who represent 10% of the population, account for more than 20% of new AIDS cases. And AIDS is becoming a critical concern in some Native American and Asian American communities as well. Like other epidemics before it, AIDS is now hitting hardest in areas where knowledge about the disease is scarce and poverty is high. It is picking on the most vulnerable among us.

The fact is, HIV infection is one of the most deadly health disparities between African-Americans, Hispanics, and white Americans. And just as we have committed to help build One America by ending the racial and ethnic disparities in infant mortality, cancer, and other diseases, we will use all our power to end the growing disparities in AIDS. The AIDS crisis in our communities of color is a national crisis. And that is why we must greatly increase our national response.

Today, I am proud to announce that we are launching an unprecedented $156 million initiative to stem the AIDS crisis in African-American and other minority communities. This initiative represents one of the greatest victories in the balanced budget I just signed. And it never could have happened without the passionate -- and compassionate -- leadership of Maxine Waters, Louis Stokes, the rest of the CBC, and so many others here today.

This historic initiative will allow thousands of cities, churches, schools, and grassroots organizations to expand HIV prevention efforts and target them to the specific needs of specific minority communities -- such as young men, students, and pregnant mothers. It will allow minority communities to expand treatment for substance abuse. It will increase access to protease inhibitors and other new therapies -- because life-saving therapies cannot be a luxury reserved for the rich. It will increase access to skilled doctors and other health care providers. And finally, it will help us assemble teams of public-health experts from the Centers for Disease Control and other federal agencies to visit individual communities and provide whatever technical assistance they need.

I am pleased that this new initiative will build on other historic increases in HIV/AIDS funding we won in our new balanced budget, which Sec. Shalala will talk about in greater detail. I am also pleased that it will build on my race and health initiative. Congress has taken a first step to fund this initiative, but we must do more. We are not One America when some of our communities are lagging far behind in health.

Of course this room looks nothing like a house of worship, but I want to end my remarks today with a very appropriate passage from the Bible. It is from the first letter of Paul to the Corinthians, and it sums up precisely why this crisis in our communities is such an important national concern. &The body is a unit, though it is made up of many parts; and though all its parts are many, they form one body... If one part suffers, every part suffers with it; if one part is honored, every part rejoices with it. 8

So it is with the body. So it is with a nation that strives to be One America. Make no mistake: Every one of our communities is inextricably linked, in suffering and rejoicing, in sickness and in health. And that is why we must work together in every community -- whether it is black or white, gay or straight, rich or poor -- to stop this cruel disease. Thank you for your commitment to this righteous cause.

And now, I am pleased to present Dr. David Satcher, America's Surgeon General and the nation's family doctor. His deep commitment to advancing the nation's health is rooted in the 200-year-old guiding principle of the Public Health Service: that you best protect the health of the entire nation when you address the concerns of its most vulnerable people.

Concluding remarks:

Thank you, again, Denise. You are one of the bravest people I know. I am so proud that the initiative we have announced today will allow us to draw upon the talents of people like you -- people who are so effective at speaking out and reaching out to others.

From the bully pulpit to the church pulpit, from the schools to the streets, we will tap every source of strength to end this cruel disease. Because we cannot rest when brothers and sisters, parents and children, friends and neighbors are at risk. We cannot rest when we have the faith and the power to turn this epidemic around. Thank you again for your tireless efforts and God bless you all.

Subject: re: Presidential Announcement of New HIV/AIDS Initiative

Congratulations!!!

Sarah H. informed me that Sandy is likely to attend the next UNAIDS Programme Coordinating Board meeting scheduled for December 8-11 in New Delhi. Please keep us up to date if this changes. We also will need to know fairly soon whether she wants to go to any of the field sites (Bombay, Calcutta or Madras) on the day December 8) before the official meeting starts.

Thanks!!

TO: Todd A. Summers (CN=Todd A. Summers/OU=OPD/O=EOP@EOP [OPD])

TEXT:

Can I assume that you had no objection to S. 1754, the Health Professions Education Partnerships Act of 1998?

Also, HR 1023, the Ricky Ray Hemophilia Relief Fund Act of 1998, which authorizes appropriations of $750 million for compensatory payments to certain individuals with blood-clotting disorders who contracted HIV through blood or blood products in the 1980s, is currently awaiting Presidential action. Are you interested in doing a letter providing a recommendation to the President regarding action or simply tell me informally what your position is on the legislation. NOTE: this bill does not create an entitlement, nor were funds appropriated to fund the program -- as passed, the bill is just an authorization. Please advise. thanks.

PRESIDENT CLINTON:
PROTECTING AMERICA'S HEALTH, INCREASING FUNDING FOR HIV/AIDS

October 28, 1998

"The AIDS epidemic is not over. It is a particularly severe and ongoing crisis in the African-American community and other communities of color. Like other epidemics before it, AIDS is hitting hardest in areas where poverty is high and education is scarce. It is picking on the most vulnerable among us. We must do more to bury this cruel disease."

President Bill Clinton
October 28, 1998

Today, President Clinton holds a White House event, where he will declare HIV/AIDS to be a severe and ongoing health crisis in racial and ethnic minority communities and announce a comprehensive new initiative that invests an unprecedented $156 million to improve the nation's effectiveness in preventing and treating HIV/AIDS in the African-American, Hispanic, and other minority communities. The President will also highlight other important investments in the fight against HIV/AIDS, and new funding for his initiative to address racial health disparities for a range of diseases, including HIV/AIDS.

THE NEED FOR INCREASED EFFORTS TO FIGHT HIV/AIDS IN MINORITY COMMUNITIES. While overall AIDS deaths have declined for two years in a row, it remains the leading killer of African-American men age 25-44 and the second leading killer of African-American women in the same age group. African-Americans comprise more than 40 percent of all new HIV/AIDS cases, and African-American women make up 60 percent of female cases. Hispanics represent over 20 percent of new HIV/AIDS cases, though they make up only 10 percent of the population. During the budget negotiations, President Clinton fought for and won $156 million to address the urgent problem of HIV/AIDS among minorities:

- A Crisis Response Team: The Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) will make available Crisis Response Teams to a number of highly-impacted areas. These teams of public health and HIV prevention and treatment experts, doctors, nurses, and epidemiologists, will, over the period of several weeks, help assess existing prevention and treatment services for racial and ethnic minorities and develop innovative new strategies to best meet the needs of the community;
- Enhanced HIV/AIDS Prevention Efforts In Racial And Ethnic Minority Communities: Funding will be used for important HIV prevention purposes at the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), and to substance abuse treatment programs for African-American and Hispanic women and their children living with or at risk for HIV/AIDS;
- Reducing Disparities In Treatment And Health Outcomes For Minorities With HIV/AIDS: Studies show that African-Americans and Hispanics are much less likely to receive care that meets federally-recommended treatment guidelines. This new funding will help minorities get access to cutting edge HIV/AIDS drug treatments and the range of primary health services needed to treat this disease. Funding will also be used to educate health care providers serving largely minority populations on treatment guidelines for HIV/AIDS.

THE PRESIDENT FOUGHT FOR AND WON INCREASES IN EFFECTIVE HIV/AIDS TREATMENT, PREVENTION, AND RESEARCH PROGRAMS. The President fought for and won substantial increases in a wide range of effective HIV/AIDS programs:

- A Historic $262 Million Increase In The Ryan White Care Act providing for primary HIV health services, treatments, and training for health care professionals HIV treatment guidelines;
- A 12 percent Increase For HIV/AIDS Research At NIH to enhance both basic research to further our understanding of the HIV virus, applied research that includes clinical testing of new HIV/AIDS pharmacological therapies, and better protective measures for women at risk.

A PRESIDENTIAL COMMITMENT TO ELIMINATE RACIAL HEALTH DISPARITIES. Minorities suffer from higher rates for a number of critical diseases, including HIV/AIDS. Congress has taken a first step in investing in the President's proposal to address racial health disparities, but only partially funded the President's proposed grants for communities to develop new strategies to address these disparities and for increases in other critical public health programs.

CALLING ON CONGRESS TO PASS THE UNFINISHED AGENDA FOR PEOPLE WITH HIV/AIDS. In addition, Congress failed to pass:

- A Patients' Bill Of Rights that contains critical protections for people with HIV/AIDS, including, access to specialists, and continuity of care to prevent abrupt changes in treatment when an employer changes health plans;
- A Work Incentive Bill For People With Disabilities that enables people with disabilities and other disabling conditions, such as HIV/AIDS, to go back to work by expanding options to buy into Medicaid and Medicare, as well as other pro-work initiatives. The President will keep fighting to allow people with disabilities to get the health coverage the need to return to work.

Comments by Denise Stokes

When we talk about AIDS, we talk a lot about numbers. Numbers that can be overwhelming or intimidating. But we need to look more closely at the numbers ... until we begin to see the real lives they represent.

Today, I'd like to share a few personal numbers with you. The first numbers are 13 and 16. I was infected with HIV at 13 and diagnosed at 16. While my peers were planning their futures, I was being harshly that I would not live to see 21. That was the year I realized some children die before they having a chance live.

The next number is 3. That's how many years it took for me to get the information I needed to combat my disease. I didn't learn that HIV was a sexually transmitted disease until I was almost 20. No one in my community was willing to talk to someone else's child about sex - or about AIDS. I suffered greatly with a severe case of unanswered questions.

Many youth today are being tragically diagnosed in the prime of their lives because we are too timid to talk candidly about AIDS. We are too afraid to keep our children alive long enough to make healthier choices.

13. That's how many pills I take each day to help sustain my health. Pills that are not easy to take and that leave me feeling nauseated and tired. But they are all I have right now - and they keep me alive, I am happy to have them. But they are pills that are not easy to come by. Many of my peers have no access to the latest medicines. Therefore, they have no access to the hope experienced by many - with each new improvement. They sit by and watch people live longer, healthier lives while they still suffer with preventable infections.

5. That's how many hours I sat on a hospital curb in my own urine while trying to get treatment for an allergy to an AIDS medicine. 5 hours of suffering when I was only a hundred feet from the source that could alleviate the fierce itching and burning was ravaging my swollen body. But no one had the time to help me. It wasn't in anyone's job description to escort a patient to the pharmacy. Especially an undesirable looking patient like I was that day. I experienced the same indifference that many people in my community experience when seeking care. We are not able to walk into hospitals waving insurance cards or cash. We are not able access the good, quality healthcare that all human beings deserve. While we muster the strength and courage to take an active role in our care, we are being stripped of our dignity by the system that's supposed to help us.

- Look into the eyes of one person being diagnosed with HIV for the 1st time.
- Tell a homeless young man with HIV that he has to wait one more year to get housing because the resources are not yet available.
- Tell one young woman that you can't fill her prescription for the medicine that will give her life - because she has no money.
- Tell one child this his mother won't be coming home anymore because she died today of AIDS related complications.

Do any one of these things and you will understand what this 156 million dollars means to black and other minority communities. This initiative is important because the moneys allocated and the commitments made here today will positively impact communities in dire need of support services. And just maybe, not one more of these travesties will occur on my home-front.

The last number I want to share with you today is Zero. I demand that we be liable until there are no new infections. That we do what's necessary to save lives and not what's popular. Until there are no more people desperately seeking care only to find the doors closed. Until there are no more people suffering with AIDS, we have to stay committed. Just as committed as the President, The Vice President and The Congressional Black Caucus. Just as committed as Sandra Thurman, Secretary Shalala, Dr. Satcher, The Advisory Council on AIDS and many others who worked tirelessly on this important issue.

Zero is our goal. Because no more can we sit idly by and watch AIDS consume minority communities. We must maintain the momentum that we have gained today - because HIV is maintaining its momentum.

No more addicts needlessly infected with one disease simply because they have another one. Addicts should have the services AND the tools they need for effective prevention.

No more lives thrown carelessly aside

No more memorial services

No more screaming mothers

No more broken spirits ... or broken hearts.

No more disparity in minority communities.

No - more - AIDS.
