From today's NY Observer:

A Boost for D ,Amato Brings Headaches
by Michelangelo Signorile

"We have to admit that very few gays and lesbians in New York know of Senator D ,Amato ,s record," Elizabeth Birch, the executive director of the Washington, D.C.-based Human Rights Campaign, or HRC, the nation ,s largest gay lobby, told The New York Times recently. She was attempting to explain her group ,s controversial endorsement of Alfonse D ,Amato in the New York Senate race. And she was either suggesting that most gay New Yorkers have been lobotomized, or that they ,re just not informed about what happens on Planet Beltway, where she resides.

Though we may be out in the sticks, however, Ms. Birch can rest assured that gays and lesbians in New York are well aware that Mr. D'Amato cosponsored the Employment Nondiscrimination Act in 1996, a Federal bill that would have banned job discrimination against gays and which was voted down in the Senate and never had a chance of passing the House. It's also widely known in New York, thank you, that Mr. D'Amato has spoken favorably a couple of times on gay issues, even creating a spectacle.

We're even quite aware that he chooses these issues with surgical precision and comes aboard only when he cannot be blamed by the right wing of his party for doing anything decisive. That was certainly true of the stalled nomination of gay businessman (and HRC cofounder) James Hormel as Ambassador to Luxembourg, a nomination that Senate majority leader Trent Lott, Republican of Mississippi, would not allow to come to the Senate floor for a vote. Mr. D'Amato put on quite a show on the floor of the Senate, taking on Senator Lott's antigay rhetoric just as the nomination was going down in flames. He, of course, could have quietly gone to Senator Lott early on in the process and brokered a deal to have the nomination voted on.

What many in New York might not in fact be aware of is that even according to HRC itself, Mr. D'Amato's efforts to romance the gay community so as to appear more moderate have been meager at best. While H.R.C.'s rating of Mr. D'Amato's Democratic challenger, Representative Charles Schumer, has averaged 93 percent for his past three sessions of Congress, Mr. D'Amato's score card from HRC has averaged 52 percent.

Mr. D'Amato is an incumbent, however, and HRC, like a lot of PACs, favors incumbents. You have to put the carrot before the stick, Elizabeth Birch will tell you in the parlance of Washington lobbyists, even if you might be feeding a jackal. Sure, you may be helping to create a 60 vote veto-proof majority for a Republican Senate led by the scary gay-basher Senator Lott. But by endorsing Alfonse D'Amato you at least may have a friend there.

That said, the endorsement was a stellar example of bad timing. It came when the Democrats and the White House *with which the HRC had cultivated a strong relationship *are looking for every supporter in the Senate they can get, fearing an impeachment vote. And it came just over a week after the vicious killing of a gay Wyoming student gripped the country and invigorated a complacent gay rights movement, four days after the young man's highly publicized funeral, and one day after a massive vigil in Manhattan for the victim, a vigil that turned violent when more than 4,000 people took the streets and police on horseback trampled marchers.

Gay and lesbian New Yorkers, overwhelmingly Democrats, were never going to swallow the endorsement painlessly. Mr. D'Amato is anathema to many gays in New York State because of his role as architect of a state Republican Party that holds a majority in the State Senate, which has been hostile to gay and lesbian interests. A bill to outlaw discrimination against gays statewide has languished for 20 years in the Senate and has not even been allowed to come to a vote under majority leader Joseph Bruno, who remains at Mr. D'Amato's beck and call.

But in response to local gay activists', lobbying efforts, Mr. D'Amato has claimed that he has little influence in the state party, a laughable excuse.

So on the day the HRC announced its support of Mr. D'Amato, New York members', resignations began flying across the Internet, c.c.'d to journalists and others. Two HRC board members confirm that the board has discussed the possibility that HRC stands to lose as much as $3 million in contributions because of the endorsement, or nearly 25 percent of its $13 million budget. HRC staff members have privately speculated since last spring, when the idea to endorse Mr. D'Amato was first floated inside the organization, that its action would cause a firestorm. Perhaps that is one reason why the group kept putting off the endorsement; it had planned to endorse earlier in the year and then again in mid-October.

Holding off allowed the media to speculate on the endorsement based on leaks, and the stories often worked against HRC. It also allowed angry individuals to whip up letter-writing and e-mail campaigns against the group. This in turn made some board members get cold feet; a new vote had to be taken on the endorsement. Meanwhile, the White House, the national and local Democratic Party and abortion-rights groups (furious that a gay group would back a candidate who is on the Right to Life Party ticket) also took advantage of the extra time to lobby the group further. President Clinton didn't make it any easier for the group to slap him in the face; he was quick to release a statement on the Wyoming student's murder just before the endorsement, renewing a call for swift passage of the Federal Hate Crimes Prevention Act.

One HRC board member, Marylouise Oates, a longtime Democratic Party activist and the wife of Democratic pollster Robert Shrum, resigned immediately after the final 15-7 vote for the endorsement of Mr. D. Amato was announced. Several board members who voted in favor of a single endorsement (as opposed to a dual endorsement) have said privately they did so under pressure from Ms. Birch, who apparently turned it into a confidence vote. In the end, HRC let Mr. D. Amato twist in the wind for quite some time, endorsing late and tepidly, and praising Mr. Schumer, too. Despite Mr. D. Amato's effusive press release about the endorsement, neither side could really have been very happy, and HRC lost a lot of credibility, not to mention donors.

There are a few theories floating around about what got HRC into this mess. Ms. Birch has told several people that all five of the Republicans on her board had threatened to walk, which would have been an embarrassment just when the group is trying to shed its reputation for being in the pocket of the Democratic Party.

Some critics point to conflicts of interest on the board. Tim Boggs, a board member who apparently spearheaded Mr. D. Amato's endorsement, is Time Warner Inc.'s Washington lobbyist, and Mr. D. Amato heads the Senate Banking Committee and is a senior member of the Senate Finance Committee, both of which will certainly have legislation before them that could benefit a corporation as gargantuan as Time Warner. Mr. Boggs, defenders said he has privately given money to Charles Schumer's Senate campaign ($2,000, according to Federal Election Commission reports), to which Time Warner has also made hefty contributions.

The most likely scenario, however, is that a quid pro quo deal was made with Mr. D. Amato a long time ago. Some close to the group have speculated that the endorsement was in exchange for Mr. D. Amato's careful shepherding of the White House's nomination of New York philanthropist Fred Hochberg, a former HRC board co-chair and a major contributor to the group, who was put in the No. 2 post at the Small Business Administration. It would be pathetic if HRC had traded in a difficult endorsement for getting one of its donors a job as a glorified loan officer. Hopefully, the deal that was cut was for something else down the line, if indeed Mr. D. Amato wins. And whatever it is, it had better be worth the hefty price that HRC has paid.

From today's NY Observer:

A Boost for D ,Amato Brings Headaches
by Michelangelo Signorile

"We have to admit that very few gays and lesbians in New York know of Senator D ,Amato ,s record," Elizabeth Birch, the executive director of the Washington, D.C.-based Human Rights Campaign, or HRC, the nation ,s largest gay lobby, told The New York Times recently. She was attempting to explain her group ,s controversial endorsement of Alfonse D ,Amato in the New York Senate race. And she was either suggesting that most gay New Yorkers have been lobotomized, or that they ,re just not informed about what happens on Planet Beltway, where she resides.

Though we may be out in the sticks, however, Ms. Birch can rest assured that gays and lesbians in New York are well aware that Mr. D ,Amato cosponsored

Employment Nondiscrimination Act in 1996, a Federal bill that would have banned job discrimination against gays and which was voted down in the Senate and never had a chance of passing the House. It ,s also widely known in New York, thank you, that Mr. D ,Amato has spoken favorably a couple of times on gay issues, even creating a spectacle.

We ,re even quite aware that he chooses these issues with surgical precision and comes aboard only when he cannot be blamed by the right wing of his party for doing anything decisive. That was certainly true of the stalled nomination of gay businessman (and HRC cofounder) James Hormel as Ambassador to Luxembourg, a nomination that Senate majority leader Trent Lott, Republican of Mississippi, would not allow to come to the Senate floor for a vote. Mr.
D ,Amato put on quite a show on the floor of the Senate, taking on Senator Lott ,s antigay rhetoric just as the nomination was going down in flames.
He,
of course, could have quietly gone to Senator Lott early on in the process and brokered a deal to have the nomination voted on.

What many in New York might not in fact be aware of is that even according to HRC itself, Mr. D ,Amato ,s efforts to romance the gay community so as to appear more moderate have been meager at best. While H.R.C. ,s rating of Mr.
D ,Amato ,s Democratic challenger, Representative Charles Schumer, has averaged 93 percent for his past three sessions of Congress, Mr. D ,Amato ,s score card from HRC has averaged 52 percent.

Mr. D ,Amato is an incumbent, however, and HRC, like a lot of PACs, favors incumbents. You have to put the carrot before the stick, Elizabeth Birch will tell you in the parlance of Washington lobbyists, even if you might be feeding a jackal. Sure, you may be helping to create a 60 vote veto-proof majority for a Republican Senate led by the scary gay-basher Senator Lott. But by endorsing Alfonse D ,Amato you at least may have a friend there.

That said, the endorsement was a stellar example of bad timing. It came when the Democrats and the White House *with which the HRC had cultivated a strong relationship *are looking for every supporter in the Senate they can get, fearing an impeachment vote. And it came just over a week after the vicious killing of a gay Wyoming student gripped the country and invigorated a complacent gay rights movement, four days after the young man's highly publicized funeral, and one day after a massive vigil in Manhattan for the victim, a vigil that turned violent when more than 4,000 people took the streets and police on horseback trampled marchers.

Gay and lesbian New Yorkers, overwhelmingly Democrats, were never going to swallow the endorsement painlessly. Mr. D'Amato is anathema to many gays in New York State because of his role as architect of a state Republican Party that holds a majority in the State Senate, which has been hostile to gay and lesbian interests. A bill to outlaw discrimination against gays statewide has languished for 20 years in the Senate and has not even been allowed to come to a vote under majority leader Joseph Bruno, who remains at Mr. D'Amato's beck and call.

But in response to local gay activists', lobbying efforts, Mr. D'Amato has claimed that he has little influence in the state party, a laughable excuse.

So on the day the HRC announced its support of Mr. D'Amato, New York members', resignations began flying across the Internet, c.c.'ed to journalists and others. Two HRC board members confirm that the board has discussed the possibility that HRC stands to lose as much as $3 million in contributions because of the endorsement, or nearly 25 percent of its $13 million budget. HRC staff members have privately speculated since last spring, when the idea to endorse Mr. D'Amato was first floated inside the organization, that its action would cause a firestorm. Perhaps that is one reason why the group kept putting off the endorsement; it had planned to endorse earlier in the year and then again in mid-October.

Holding off allowed the media to speculate on the endorsement based on leaks, and the stories often worked against HRC. It also allowed angry individuals to whip up letter-writing and e-mail campaigns against the group. This in turn made some board members get cold feet; a new vote had to be taken on the endorsement. Meanwhile, the White House, the national and local Democratic Party and abortion-rights groups (furious that a gay group would back a candidate who is on the Right to Life Party ticket) also took advantage of the extra time to lobby the group further. President Clinton didn't make it any easier for the group to slap him in the face; he was quick to release a statement on the Wyoming student's murder just before the endorsement, renewing a call for swift passage of the Federal Hate Crimes Prevention

Act.

One HRC board member, Marylouise Oates, a longtime Democratic Party activist and the wife of Democratic pollster Robert Shrum, resigned immediately after the final 15-7 vote for the endorsement of Mr. D. Amato was announced. Several board members who voted in favor of a single endorsement (as opposed to a dual endorsement) have said privately they did so under pressure from Ms. Birch, who apparently turned it into a confidence vote. In the end, HRC let Mr. D. Amato twist in the wind for quite some time, endorsing late and tepidly, and praising Mr. Schumer, too. Despite Mr. D. Amato's effusive press release about the endorsement, neither side could really have been very happy, and HRC lost a lot of credibility, not to mention donors.

There are a few theories floating around about what got HRC into this mess. Ms. Birch has told several people that all five of the Republicans on her board had threatened to walk, which would have been an embarrassment just when the group is trying to shed its reputation for being in the pocket of the Democratic Party.

Some critics point to conflicts of interest on the board. Tim Boggs, a board member who apparently spearheaded Mr. D. Amato's endorsement, is Time Warner Inc.'s Washington lobbyist, and Mr. D. Amato heads the Senate Banking Committee and is a senior member of the Senate Finance Committee, both of which will certainly have legislation before them that could benefit a corporation as gargantuan as Time Warner. Mr. Boggs, defenders said he has privately given money to Charles Schumer's Senate campaign ($2,000, according to Federal Election Commission reports), to which Time Warner has also made hefty contributions.

The most likely scenario, however, is that a quid pro quo deal was made with Mr. D. Amato a long time ago. Some close to the group have speculated that the endorsement was in exchange for Mr. D. Amato's careful shepherding of the White House's nomination of New York philanthropist Fred Hochberg, a former HRC board co-chair and a major contributor to the group, who was put in the No. 2 post at the Small Business Administration. It would be pathetic if HRC had traded in a difficult endorsement for getting one of its donors a job as a glorified loan officer. Hopefully, the deal that was cut was for something else down the line, if indeed Mr. D. Amato wins. And whatever it is, it had better be worth the hefty price that HRC has paid.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release November 2, 1998

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

Hillary and I were saddened to learn of the death of General James L. Day, USMC(Ret). Last January, I awarded General Day our nation's highest military honor, the Medal of Honor, for extraordinary heroism during the battle of Okinawa in 1945.

General Day's service did not end at Okinawa. He distinguished himself for courage and leadership in a career of service that spanned more than four decades. From World War II to Korea and Vietnam he served his country with patriotism, dedication and unsurpassed bravery. General Day's lifetime of achievements embodied the words, 'Semper Fidelis'.

We will miss this true hero whose selfless conduct as a Marine and citizen set a shining example for all Americans. We are grateful for all he did to preserve the freedom that is our most sacred gift. Our thoughts and prayers go to his wife, Sally, his son, Jim, and the Day family.

Dear Dem:

Thank you for your efforts in securing passage of the Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act for Fiscal Year 1999.

By standing together, we were able to achieve historic victories for the American people.

Thanks, again, for your dedicated effort in ensuring the passage of this bill. Please accept the enclosed signing pen and red line of the bill as a token of my appreciation.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Dem

Subject: Statement By The President: Securities Litigation Act

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

November 3, 1998

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

Today I am pleased to sign into law S. 1260, the "Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act of 1998," (Uniform Standards Act).

This country is blessed with strong and vibrant markets, and they function best when corporations can raise capital by providing investors with their best, good-faith future projections. This legislation will help stabilize the enforcement scheme of the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 (the Reform Act) by ensuring that parties obtain the benefits of the protections that Federal law provides. The Uniform Standards Act reinforces our national capital markets by promoting uniform national standards for information generated for and used in national capital markets. If firms know that they can rely on the Reform Act's "safe harbor" for forward-looking information, they will provide the public with valuable information about their prospects, thus benefiting investors by enabling them to make wiser decisions.

The Reform Act substantially revised both substantive and procedural law governing private actions under Federal securities laws. It was designed to end litigation abuses and ensure that investors receive the best possible information by reducing the litigation risk to companies that make forward-looking statements. In addition to the safe harbor for forward-looking statements, the Reform Act created, among other things, a stay of discovery pending a defendant's motion to dismiss; limited the exposure of certain defendants by establishing proportionate liability, rather than joint and several liability, for parties not found to have "knowingly" committed violations; and required courts to assess whether all parties complied with Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, prohibiting frivolous legal filings.

Although I supported the Reform Act's goals, I vetoed the Act because I was concerned that it would erect procedural barriers and keep wrongly injured persons from having their day in court. In particular, I objected to certain statements in the 1995 Conference Report's Statement of Managers that created ambiguity with respect to whether the bill was adopting the pleading standard in private securities fraud cases of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit -- the highest pleading standard of any Federal circuit court and a standard that I support. When the bill returned to the House and Senate floors after my veto, the bill's supporters made clear that they did in fact intend to codify the Second Circuit standard. After this important assurance, the bill passed over my veto.

Since passage of the Reform Act, there has been considerable concern that the goals of the Reform Act have not been realized. In particular, there was testimony that firms are not using the Federal safe harbor for forward-looking statements because they fear State court litigation over the same representations that are protected under Federal law. In addition, concerns have been raised that State actions are being used to achieve an "end run" around the Reform Act's stay of discovery.

In signing the Uniform Standards Act, I do so with the understanding, as reflected in the Statement of Managers for this legislation and numerous judicial decisions under the Reform Act adopting the pleading standard of the Second Circuit, that investors with legitimate complaints meeting the Second Circuit pleading standard will have access to our Nation's courts. This point was critical to my veto of the Reform Act in 1995; it was reaffirmed before ultimate passage of the 1995 Act over my veto; and its assurance was a prerequisite to my signing this legislation today, as indicated in the April 28, 1998, letter from my staff to Chairman D'Amato, Senator Gramm, and Senator Dodd. Since the uniform standards provided by this legislation state that class actions generally can be brought only in Federal court, where they will be governed by Federal law, clarity on the Federal law to be applied is particularly important. The Statement of Managers confirms that the Second Circuit pleading standard will be the uniform standard for pleading securities fraud. Thus, the uniform national standards contained in this bill will permit investors to continue to recover losses fairly attributable to reckless misconduct. I am aware of and agree with the expert views on this issue of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), which, along with my staff, worked hard in shaping this legislation.

With these assurances in the Statement of Managers that reckless conduct will continue to be actionable and that complaints meeting the Second Circuit pleading standard will permit investors access to our Nation's courts, I believe that the uniform national standards created by this bill will generate meaningful information for investors and further reduce frivolous litigation without jeopardizing the critically important right of defrauded investors to obtain relief.

I do, however, object to one provision in this bill. Section 203 provides separate authority for job classification and pay of SEC economists. This provision was added to the bill at the last minute without any time for review or comment. There is no justification to treat SEC economists differently from other Federal employees. With that one exception, I am pleased to sign the Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act of 1998 into law.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

Robert "Ben" Johnson has been a vital member of my Administration and a tremendous asset to the White House Office of Public Liaison for the past six years. It is therefore with great pride and pleasure that I congratulate him on his receipt of the honorary Doctorate of Public Service from Morgan State University.

Ben is one of only two African Americans who has served on both my White House staff and President Carter's White House staff. He brings over two decades of nationally recognized leadership skills and experience in management and public policy to his position as deputy assistant to the president and deputy director of the Office of Public Liaison. He has continued to serve his country well by consulting, on behalf of the White House, with members of the African American, Hispanic, Jewish, ethnic and senior communities.

Hillary and I commend Ben on Morgan State's wonderful tribute to his lifetime of commitment, service and leadership. We are grateful for all that he has done on behalf of this Administration and the American people.

Subject: PRD plan/better health protection for veterans -- draft press release

Glyn-- Ann Lewis suggested last week that NSC may want to include a mention of this PRD plan for better health protection for veterans (draft press release, fact sheet, and Q&A attached) in the remarks you're preparing for Veterans Day.

Please let us know. Thanks.

President Clinton Releases Plan for Better Health Protection for Armed Forces; and Establishes Military and Veterans Health Coordinating Board

November XX, 1998

President Clinton today directed the Secretaries of Defense, Health and Human Services, and Veterans Affairs to create a Military and Veterans Health Coordinating Board to improve the health protection and care of our armed forces, veterans, and their families. The President also announced the release of a National Science and Technology Council (NSTC) report, A National Obligation, that lays out an interagency plan for improving the Federal response to the health needs of our military, veterans and their families. President Clinton stated, "We have an enduring and special obligation to protect the health of those servicemen and women who protect our nation, and to care for their service-connected injuries or illnesses for as long as they live."

A National Obligation

Q: What are the broad policy implications of this plan?

A: This plan, along with the President's directive, sets a course for improved cooperation and coordination among Federal agencies in addressing the health needs of our military, our veterans, and their families. Through the release of this report and through the establishment of the Military and Veterans Health Coordinating Board (MVHCB), the President is directing the agencies to work together to achieve program synergy. Using the Persian Gulf Veterans Coordinating Board as a model, we will apply this approach to future deployments. We expect to see better-coordinated research programs, record-keeping initiatives, deployment health efforts, and health risk communications.

Q: What are the plan's major recommendations?

A: The interagency working group (IWG) that developed this plan identified the following essential recommendations:

- There must be ongoing coordination of all agencies involved in maintaining the health of military members (active duty, National Guard, and reservist), veterans, and their families. Therefore, the IWG recommends creation of a Military and Veterans Health Coordinating Board (MVHCB).
- To succeed with many of the goals and objectives laid out in this plan, the government requires ongoing direction and coordination for the Departments' health and personnel information management and record-keeping activities, especially activities associated with deployments. The IWG recommends that DoD and VA, in consultation with DHHS, establish an ongoing interagency task force to coordinate and set standards for information management and technology efforts.

- DoD should complete implementation of recently issued directives on joint medical surveillance and force health protection. DoD should proceed with its contract with the National Academy of Sciences (NAS) for a 3-year program of scientific, technical, and policy analysis activities entitled "Strategies to Protect the Health of Deployed U.S. Forces."
- DoD and DHHS, Food and Drug Administration (FDA) should accelerate their efforts not only to identify regulatory issues associated with the use of investigational products during military exigencies, but also develop strategies to resolve them.
- VA, DoD, and DHHS should develop and implement a coordinated interagency program to communicate health risk information related to current and future deployments, especially combat operations, to military members, veterans, family members, and the public.
- DoD and VA shall maintain a robust, biomedical research, development, testing, and evaluation program emphasizing research priority areas identified in this plan.
- DoD shall ensure that military medical manpower requirements include medical scientists with expertise relevant to the health concerns associated with military deployments.

Q: How does the plan use "lessons learned" from the Gulf War to improve health care, deployment health, surveillance and record keeping, research, and communications for future combat veterans?

A: The interagency work group believes it is crucial that the "lessons learned" from the Gulf War experience be applied to improving protection of troops, responding to veteran's health concerns, and assisting veterans and their families through difficult transitions. To the extent possible, the comprehensive set of interagency plans presented in A National Obligation will minimize or prevent similar post-conflict health concerns in the future.

VA, DoD, and HHS are working closely to improve service personnel's understanding of health risk information, improving delivery of health care services to Gulf War veterans and their families, enhancing government collection of health exposure data, and coordinating agency research programs. These joint efforts will include a DoD/VA Recruit Assessment Program; pre-deployment health screening; medical surveillance of troops during deployments; improved VA/DoD patient health record keeping to help prevent illness and identify and cure those that occur; post-deployment health surveillance; and readjustment counseling. This novel concept of force health protection will serve to safeguard military members and veterans after future conflicts and peacekeeping missions.

For the DoD, significant "lessons learned" that needed to be addressed in future deployments included the need to: perform and document pre-deployment health assessment; improve medical record keeping in theater; improve medical surveillance in theater; improve exposure assessments and record keeping in theater; perform and document health assessment at redeployment; obtain licensed products for BW/CW countermeasures; improve health risk communication efforts; assess the health status of the force post-deployment; and improve VA/DoD coordination before, during, and after deployment.

Q: Will there be any follow up to assure the plan's recommendations are implemented? By whom?

A: The MVHCB will report its annual progress to both the Assistants to the President for Science and Technology and for National Security.

Q: Will this plan change any direction, clarify the questions on unknown illnesses or assist on the treatment of sick veterans?

A: This plan for the first time takes a comprehensive, multi-agency approach to achieving improvements in deployment health, record-keeping, research, and health risk communications. The plan changes the paradigm for force health protection by emphasizing efforts on detection and monitoring of hazards, improved health promotion, and disease prevention. In the past, our efforts tended to focus on casualty care. This plan sets out a whole new way of caring for military service members in order to limit the spectrum of post-war illnesses experienced after the Gulf War and other recent conflicts. The plan outlines new efforts to prevent illness in those who serve during armed conflicts and better understand and treat those illnesses that do occur.

Q: Did veterans (and other target audiences) participate in the study? How?

A: Veteran's service organization representatives served on the Health Risk Communication Work Group and provided invaluable feedback on the relevance of the plan's recommendations.

The Military and Veterans Health Coordinating Board (MVHCB)

Q: What will the MVHCB do that isn't being done now?

A: The Coordinating Board will improve the level of coordination and communication between Federal agencies that have programs and expertise that can be brought to bear on the special needs associated with troop and veteran health. This has gone on in the past, but through the activities of the Board and its working groups, this will become a more focused and effective process. Once established, the MVHCB would ensure coordination among VA, DoD, and DHHS on a broad range of health care and research issues relating to past, present, and future military service in the U.S. Armed Forces. The MVHCB is modeled on the Persian Gulf Veterans Coordinating Board, which is enhancing interagency coordination especially on research and clinical care related to health issues of Gulf War veterans.

Q: What is the relationship between the MVHCB and the PGVCB?

A: The Persian Gulf Veterans Coordinating Board (PGVCB) was established in January 1994, to address the health concerns of Gulf War active duty service members and veterans. The PGVCB, which is chaired by the Secretaries of VA, Defense, and Health and Human Services, coordinates government efforts related to clinical issues, research, benefits and compensation. This ongoing collaboration ensures a federal focus on the highest priority Gulf War illnesses-related issues to ensure quality programs and avoid gaps or unnecessary duplication of efforts and resources.

President Clinton called on the Secretaries of Defense, Health and Human Services, and Veterans Affairs to create a Military and Veterans Health Coordinating Board (MVHCB) to implement the plan's goals and objectives and to continue the interagency dialogue that made the development of this plan possible. The MVHCB will carry out its activities through Deployment Health, Research and Risk Communication Working Groups. The Deployment Health Working Group will make recommendations for interagency programs for pre-deployment, deployment, and post-deployment medical surveillance. This new activity is a logical outgrowth of the successful collaborations, which were established for Gulf War veterans' programs. The MVHCB builds on the accomplishments of the PGVCB and will improve future long-term medical surveillance, health care, risk communication and research activities. The MVHCB will lead the government's continuous efforts to minimize or prevent post-conflict illnesses and promote readjustment after future conflicts.

Q: What is the relationship between the work of the MVHCB and the National Academy of Sciences review on improving deployments in the future?

A: The National Academy of Sciences has undertaken a 3 year project to develop strategies to protect deployed United States forces in the future. DoD requested this study, which is in its first year of the 3-year effort. While the Academy study will draw on information from past deployments, it is future-oriented in its scope. The Coordinating Board will have access to the findings and recommendations of the Academy's work.

Impact of These Actions

Q: What steps are being taken for current and future deployments on force health protection?

A: For recent deployments to the Balkans and to Southwest Asia, the Services and combat commanders have issued policy messages requiring the elements for force health protection including: assessing health threats, applying appropriate countermeasures such as immunizations, informing military members of the threats and countermeasures, assessing and documenting individual medical readiness to deploy, documenting health care encounters, conducting disease and injury surveillance, performing environmental sampling and surveillance, providing mental health services, informing commanders of their units' health status, assessing and documenting health status upon redeployment, and debriefing deployed military members on significant health events in theater. In the near future, the Joint Staff will issue a directive explicitly establishing the requirements for medical readiness criteria for deploying military members, health assessments pre- and post-deployment, and health surveillance and health record keeping during deployments. The Services are preparing a joint instruction to provide Service-specific implementation guidance of all elements of the DoD. The Joint Staff is revising Joint Publication 4-02, "Health Service Support of Joint Operations" to emphasize all the components of force health protection.

Q: What is being done to improve communication with our troops and their families?

A: Communication, especially health risk communication, has become a visible part of our planning for force health protection efforts. Before and after deployments, health threat briefings are required components of any military mission. Military units are placing increased emphasis on family support briefings before, during, and at the end of deployments. Many units maintain family support liaisons, which remain behind to continue communication with families and provide support during the deployment.

On a larger scale, health risk communication planning was integral to DoD's implementation of the Anthrax Vaccine Immunization Program. Communications plans and materials were prepared before the immunization program began. Each military member receives an information sheet and briefing before beginning the immunization program. Commanders and health care providers received briefings to help them better understand the program and answer questions of military members. Commanders in Southwest Asia and Korea have used military newspaper and television services to communicate information about the program. The Department had an active program to communicate information about the program to the civilian media. DoD has established, and plans to enhance, a website to share information on anthrax vaccine and the DoD immunization program.

Q: How are records being changed so that we have better information on future deployments and the health of the deployed troops?

A: Our ability to successfully, continually, and consistently meet the requirements of DoD, Joint Staff, and Service policies and Public Law 105-85 (Sec. 765) depends on medical information solutions that structure, capture, integrate, maintain, and retain the health and health-related data of all military members throughout their military service and wherever they may be. These requirements are being incorporated into the development of current and future medical information management and technology initiatives.

One promising technology being developed is the medical Personal Information Carrier (PIC). The PIC is a small, rugged, device intended to store an individual's medical status and history, vaccination records and other essential information that will interface with other existing medical tracking systems in use in theater. The PIC will be carried by Service members during deployment and updated by medical personnel using portable computers whenever the Service member is examined or treated. PIC information will be transmitted to consolidated databases to ensure that medical information is not lost if the PIC is lost or damaged. The Office of the Secretary of Defense and the Military Services are developing the concept of use and determining the specific information to be contained in the PIC.

Personnel records cannot be changed until the underlying personnel systems have been changed to support the new requirements. The Defense Integrated Military Human Resources System (DIMHRS) is being designed to resolve the information collection and access deficiencies identified in the plan. DIMHRS is a single, all-Component, all-Service, military personnel and pay management system. It will also give DoD the capability to track military and civilian personnel in and around the theater of operations and support the collection of casualty and medical evacuation information that will be integrated with medical management systems. It will also provide data for use by agencies outside of DoD such as the VA, the Red Cross, and various agencies under Health & Human Services (FDA, NIH, CDC).

Q: What is Health Risk Communication and why is it important to military service members, veterans and their families?

A: Health risk communication is a process by which appropriate personnel work closely with their intended audience on issues concerning the health risks and consequences of hazardous exposures. Important aspects of this process include determining the exposure data that is available and how best to convey this information to the intended audience.

This is of importance to military members, veterans and their families because these individuals may be exposed to a wide variety of hazardous agents that may have the potential to cause health problems. The information being presented may be technical and complex therefore it must be presented in a way to avoid misunderstanding and confusion.

Q: Can you give an example of how the lessons learned from the Gulf War and Bosnia are being applied to current deployments?

A: The lessons from the Gulf War and Bosnia have most recently been applied to the ongoing deployments to Southwest Asia. In February 1998, U.S. Central Command (CENTCOM) updated their deployment policy on implementing comprehensive joint medical surveillance measures, as outlined in the August 1997 Department of Defense Instruction 6490.3, Implementation and Application of Joint Medical Surveillance for Deployments. The CENTCOM policy requires completion of pre- and post-deployment health assessment questionnaires; daily and weekly disease and non-battle injury reporting; environmental monitoring of the air, water, soil, and radiation based on assessment of actual and/or potential health threats in deployed locations; oversight of individual and unit preventive medicine measures; and immunization tracking with enhanced focus on the anthrax vaccine. Joint medical surveillance teams deployed to the CENTCOM area of operation closely monitor and report on disease and injury incidence and compliance with force medical protection and surveillance initiatives, including vaccinations administered in theater.

All personnel are assessed and determined to be physically and medically fit before deployment. Requirements that must be met before deployment include: a medical threat briefing; distribution of medical information; DNA sample collected and on file; demonstration that a pre-deployment serum specimen is either on file or has been drawn; HIV test within 12 months prior to deployment; immunizations as required; a physical exam if not current; completion of a pre-deployment health assessment questionnaire (to be filed in the medical record and a copy sent to DoD's Deployment Surveillance Team); and follow-up actions on any non-deployable conditions.

CENTCOM directed that a deployment medical record be prepared per Service policy and either carried by the service member or shipped with the medical element. CENTCOM requires documentation of all medically significant events that occur in theater. Guidance on vaccination programs and other force health protection measures for the theater are explicit regarding the requirement to document, retain, and, if appropriate, archive individual medical information.

Q: How will this announcement affect the quality of care our Military service members and Veterans receive?

A: We have always been committed to providing high quality health care. What the PRD-5 plan does is strengthen interagency coordination to improve the health of military members, veterans, and their families and to improve the quality of the health care that they receive.

The plan addresses quality of care and other force health protection issues throughout the entire deployment continuum. In accordance with the plan, VA and DoD are working cooperatively to:

- Streamline and better coordinate medical service delivery to military service members and veterans.
- Create compatible, computer-based information management/information technology systems to ensure a smooth transfer of records between DoD and VA.
- Develop and publish joint clinical practice guidelines for disease treatment.

- Collaborate on the development of improved baseline health information databases and environmental monitoring during deployments. These activities will improve future medical surveillance, research and compensation efforts, and enhance the quality of healthcare our military service members and veterans receive.
- VA, DoD, and DHHS have collaborated to develop and implement a coordinated interagency program to communicate health risk information related to the Gulf War and future deployments, especially combat operations, to military members, veterans, family members, and the public.
- Sponsor research to identify risk factors for development of post-war illnesses, develop health promotion and disease prevention programs for members of future military deployments and sponsor treatment trials for Gulf War and other era veterans.

Background

Q: How does this relate to the work of the Presidential Advisory Committee for Gulf War Veterans' Illnesses (PAC)?

A: The report, A National Obligation, Planning for Health Preparedness for and Readjustment of the Military Veterans, and Their Families after Future Deployments, was prepared in response to a recommendation by the Presidential Advisory Committee on Gulf War Veterans' Illnesses (PAC). In their December 1996 Final Report, the PAC called for a Presidential Review Directive (PRD) instructing the National Science and Technology Council (NSTC) "to develop an interagency plan to address health preparedness for and readjustment of veterans and families after future conflicts and peacekeeping missions." An NSTC interagency working group (IWG), with representation from DoD, DHHS, VA, NSC, OMB, OSTP, and others, was established in April 1997 to address this recommendation.

Q: What is the National Science and Technology Council (NSTC)?

A: President Clinton established the National Science and Technology Council by Executive Order 12881 in November 1993. The NSTC is a cabinet level council that coordinates R&D policies and activities across the Federal agencies. It consolidates the responsibilities previously carried out by a number of interagency councils. The President chairs the NSTC. Members include the Vice President, Assistant to the President for Science and Technology, cabinet secretaries and agency heads with significant science and technology responsibilities, and senior White House officials. The Secretary of Veterans Affairs has recently joined the NSTC as a member, and VA will have representation on the five major committees and numerous sub structures of the NSTC.

President Clinton Releases Plan for Better Health Protection for Armed Forces; and Establishes Military and Veterans Health Coordinating Board

November XX, 1998

President Clinton today directed the Secretaries of Defense, Health and Human Services, and Veterans Affairs to create a Military and Veterans Health Coordinating Board to improve the health protection and care of our armed forces, our veterans, and their families. The President also announced the release of a National Science and Technology Council (NSTC) report, A National Obligation, that lays out an interagency plan for improving the Federal response to the health needs of our military, veterans and their families. President Clinton stated, "We have an enduring and special obligation to protect the health of those servicemen and women who protect our nation, and to care for their service-connected injuries or illnesses for as long as they live."

The interagency working group (IWG) that developed this plan identified the following essential recommendations:

- There must be ongoing coordination of all agencies involved in maintaining the health of military members (active duty, National Guard, and reservist), veterans, and their families. Therefore, the IWG recommends creation of a Military and Veterans Health Coordinating Board (MVHCB).
- To succeed with many of the goals and objectives laid out in this plan, the government requires ongoing direction and coordination for the Departments' health and personnel information management and record-keeping activities, especially activities associated with deployments. The IWG recommends that DoD and VA, in consultation with DHHS, establish an ongoing interagency task force to coordinate and set standards for information management and technology efforts.
- DoD should complete implementation of recently issued directives on joint medical surveillance and force health protection. DoD should proceed with its contract with the National Academy of Sciences (NAS) for a 3-year program of scientific, technical, and policy analysis activities entitled "Strategies to Protect the Health of Deployed U.S. Forces."
- DoD and DHHS, Food and Drug Administration (FDA) should accelerate their efforts not only to identify regulatory issues associated with the use of investigational products during military exigencies, but also develop strategies to resolve them.
- VA, DoD, and DHHS should develop and implement a coordinated interagency program to communicate health risk information related to current and future deployments, especially combat operations, to military members, veterans, family members, and the public.

- DoD and VA shall maintain a robust, biomedical research, development, testing, and evaluation program emphasizing research priority areas identified in this plan.
- DoD shall ensure that military medical manpower requirements include medical scientists with expertise relevant to the health concerns associated with military deployments.

Establishment of the Military and Veterans Health Coordinating Board

The Coordinating Board will improve the level of coordination and communication between Federal agencies that have programs and expertise that can be brought to bear on the special needs associated with troop and veteran health. This has gone on in the past, but through the activities of the Board and its working groups, this will become a more focused and effective process. Once established, the MVHCB would ensure coordination among VA, DoD, and DHHS on a broad range of health care and research issues relating to past, present, and future military service in the U.S. Armed Forces. The MVHCB is modeled on the Persian Gulf Veterans Coordinating Board, which is enhancing interagency coordination especially on research and clinical care related to health issues of Gulf War veterans.

Better Health Care for Our Military, Veterans, and Their Families

President Clinton today directed the Secretaries of Defense, Health and Human Services, and Veterans Affairs to create a Military and Veterans Health Coordinating Board to improve the health protection of our armed forces, veterans, and their families. President Clinton stated, "We have an enduring and special obligation to protect the health of those servicemen and women who protect our nation, and to care for their service-connected injuries or illnesses for as long as they live."

This Board will oversee the implementation of a new interagency plan requiring better medical record keeping, improved health surveillance, advanced research, and enhanced communications about health risks.

The need for an improved health preparedness plan was first identified in the December 31, 1996 Final Report of the Presidential Advisory Committee on Gulf War Veterans' Illnesses. In light of shortcomings in troop health protection and treatment associated with the Gulf War, the Committee's recommendation to develop an interagency health preparedness plan was endorsed by the President when he issued Presidential Review Directive/NSTC-5 in April 1997.

The plan was prepared by an interagency working group comprised of the National Science and Technology Council representatives of the Departments of Defense, Veterans, and Health and Human Services, the National Security Council, the Office of Science and Technology Policy, and the Office of Management and Budget.

Copies of the report, A National Obligation: Planning for Health Preparedness for and Readjustment of the Military, Veterans, and Their Families after Future Deployments, are available by faxing requests to 202/456-6025 or on the OSTP web page at: <http://www.whitehouse.gov/WH/EOP/OSTP/html/new.html>

The list of Members on the memo to the POTUS is the list I received from Elisa Millsap, who monitored the attendance at the event. Broderick Johnson, who was in charge of the legislation from our end, told me that the POTUS had to run out, but said that we need to get pens to all the Members who attended the signing ceremony. Sen. Dodd and Rep. Romer-Bacelo had intended to be present at the ceremony, but could not attend. Broderick believes that those two Members should receive pens, their names are on the memo that you should have. Therefore, to answer your question, yes the list includes all Members who attended the ceremony plus two.

If you have any questions, let me know.

Subject: Insert on Chicago Lawsuit against Gun Shops/Manufacturers

Per Elena, here is a proposed paragraph to add to tomorrow's speech at the bill signing. The AG's office is fine w/it, but Treasury wanted until tomorrow a.m. to review. Elena was planning to raise this at the senior staff meeting tomorrow.

"The City of Chicago has just filed suit alleging that an undercover investigation it conducted revealed widespread practices by gun dealers of selling guns illegally, counseling purchasers on how to evade firearms regulations, and selling guns to those who have said that they intend to violate the law. If proven, these serious charges would demonstrate that many in the gun industry are helping to promote an illegal market in firearms. Such conduct endangers public safety, and we will be watching the progress of this lawsuit closely."

a footnote: one reason I went off last night was that they were showing up so late with just a simple, place-holder event memo - - worst of both worlds right: a less than helpful memo at a less than helpful time. Melissa told me there'd be nothing else last night; that they'd give the President some handouts at the meeting. Then, at 10:15 or so, Orzsag calls me at home to say that Gene spoke to John and that John said as long as it was before 10:30 they should bring something to the usher; I had him fax it to me; told him to check if Catie was still around; and told him to put a note on it and take it over if she wasn't. fyi.

Subject: Thanksgiving Day

I've just delivered this to the Clerk's office. If possible could we get approval as soon as possible. There is always a great deal of interest in this proclamation from the churches around the country, and we try to get it out to them as far in advance of Thanksgiving as we can. Most read at church services on the Sunday before the big day. Requests are coming in. Thanks.

Sure, we'll get you a pen, letter, and a redline copy of S. 1754.

Now, not to sound like a bureaucrat, but, the president signed 167 bills in the last six weeks; many of them involved requests for redlines, pens, letters, etc. This morning, Phil and I sat down and went through them all so we could make one-shot requests of correspondence and the clerks so we wouldn't be nickel and diming them to death. I'll ask Dan Burkhardt to work with you on the letter, but please give him an appropriate amount of time; he'll have a bunch to worry about. Thanks.
