PRESIDENT CLINTON'S STATE OF THE UNION: AMERICA'S CHALLENGE

The American people should have a sense of realistic optimism about the progress America is making. We are moving in the right direction; we have more to do; and if we come together as a nation, we can meet our challenges.

The President will deliver the State of the Union next Tuesday, January 23, 1996 at 9:00 pm in the Capitol. He will challenge the American people to come together as a nation and face the future together. The President will talk about the big concerns facing our people, and show in concrete ways how Americans working together can meet our challenges.

Everyone must do their part. If we are going to seize the promise of our times, we must all work together. Not government alone. Not individuals alone. The President will talk about what we as a nation can accomplish together. He will call on every one of us: as parents and children, as employers and employees, teachers and students, community leaders and community members, as government and as citizens. We can only meet the challenges of this new time together.

The President will address a number of challenges we must meet together, including:

Balancing the budget. As the President prepares the State of the Union, he is working hard on the first of these challenges: a seven-year balanced budget that upholds our values. It is within our grasp. With his plan, certified by Congress' own economists, Democrats and Republicans have already agreed on enough cuts to balance the budget in seven years and give working families a modest tax cut.

Crime. Our progress: The crime rate is declining. Murders are down 12%, robberies are down 10% and car theft is down 5%. Over 45,000 fugitives and felons have been blocked from buying handguns because of the Brady Bill. The assault weapons ban outlawed 19 of the deadliest assault weapons. America's challenge: To keep all our citizens safe from crime, violence, and drugs.

Children and education. Our progress: More of our students are going to college and fewer students are dropping out of high school. America's challenge: To renew our schools so every American child has the chance to get the best possible education for the 21st century. At the same time, we must protect our children from violent and harmful influences.

Economy. Our progress: The lowest combined rate of unemployment and inflation since 1968. 7.7 million new jobs in the last three years. Revitalized auto and construction industries: 700,000 new construction jobs after losing 800,000 jobs in the four years before President Clinton. America's challenge: To make sure hard work still pays, and all Americans have the tools to be winners of economic change.

The World. Our progress: From Haiti to Northern Ireland, from the Middle East to Bosnia, America is leading the world towards peace and freedom. America's challenge: To keep America the strongest force for peace in the world.

Community. America's challenge: To live up to the duty we owe one another. To come together around our values; to help our communities, our neighbors, and our country.

Fact Sheet:

The President's Most Recent Offer to Balance the Budget

January 18, 1996

- In the last negotiating session with congressional leaders, the President made an offer that balances the budget in seven years; protects Medicare, Medicaid, education, and the environment; and provides for a modest tax cut for middle-income Americans.

- The President believes Congress should reach agreement with him on enough spending cuts to balance the budget, and set aside the significant policy differences for debate during the next campaign.

- In their negotiations, the President and congressional leaders have agreed to over $700 billion in savings -- enough to not only balance the budget, but provide a modest tax cut for middle-income Americans.

- The Republican tax cut, however, is too large; paying for it would require much deeper, and unwise, cuts in Medicare, Medicaid, discretionary spending, welfare programs, and the Earned Income Tax Credit.

- Specifically, the President's offer:

- balances the budget in 7 years with a responsible deficit path.

- is a fair, balanced approach to cutting spending, with about $300 billion from discretionary programs and $300 billion from mandatory programs.

- protects Medicare.

The offer rejects Republican proposals to radically change Medicare through the use of Medical Savings Accounts and balanced billing. The President expands choice for senior citizens, but without undercutting the traditional Medicare system for others. He achieves savings by cracking down on fraud. And he does not raise premiums on beneficiaries.

-- protects Medicaid.

The offer rejects Republican proposals to convert Medicaid into a block grant, with no guarantee of coverage. The President retains the guarantee for those Americans who now depend on it, including senior citizens in nursing homes, the poor (including children), and the disabled. He maintains an adequate federal payment to states to ensure that covered populations get adequate care.

-- does not raise taxes on working families.

The offer rejects Republican proposals that would raise taxes on working families by cutting deeply into the Earned Income Tax Credit.

-- reforms welfare the right way.

The offer rejects Republican proposals to punish poor children and others. Instead, it offers incentives for work by providing adequate funding for training and child care, and it retains the guarantee of coverage under Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

-- trims corporate subsidies.

The offer cuts back on unwarranted subsidies that go to special interests, rather than the public at large.

-- makes room for a modest tax cut for middle-income Americans.

The offer provides tax incentives to help middle-income Americans raise their children, pay for postsecondary education, and save for the future. It also provides incentives for small business.
