MESSAGE:

Per our phone conversation. It seems to me that if Commerce is accepting the gift, terms of acceptance should be negotiated always with Commerce "in the loop," i.e., I hope the VP's Office isn't agreeing to things that we don't have authority to do.

August 30, 1994

Honorable Ronald H. Brown
Secretary of Commerce
Department of Commerce
Washington, D.C. 20230

Dear Mr. Secretary:

I have been informed by the Department that the logo which I specifically created for use by the National Telecommunications and Information Administration has been approved as the official logo for the "information superhighway", also known as the National Information Infrastructure (N.I.I.). I understand you are seeking my written permission for the use of this copyrighted material. It is my intention that this letter will serve as my authorization for use of this copyrighted material, and I hereby provide such authorization.

It is my understanding, and permission is hereby granted, that the use of this copyrighted material by the Department of Commerce will be in connection with publications, letterhead, insignia, facsimile reproduction, and other such applications of the logo to materials originating from the Department of Commerce NTIA in respect to its "information superhighway" (N.I.I.) activities. I further note that I am permitted to place a modest signature on my work, and that credit shall be given. Accordingly, it is my expectation that reproductions of this work will include both my copyright caption and signature.

I would appreciate receiving written confirmation acknowledging this understanding as well as confirming that I have been selected as the official artist for the "information superhighway" or National Information Infrastructure.

Respectfully Yours,

Peter Max
