Neuroscientists and Experts on Brain Research Applications

Below is a brief list of highly respected neuroscientists and experts on the application of brain research to practice and policy. More complete lists have been submitted to the White House by Ellen Galinsky (Families and Work Institute) and Duane Alexander (NICHD).

Harry Chugani, M.D.	Professor of Pediatric Neurology and Radiology, Wayne State University School of Medicine, expert on new brain scanning technologies, could provide overview on brain research
Donald Cohen, M.D.	Professor and Director of Yale Child Study Center, expert on a range of early intervention programs and the sensible application of new knowledge.
Geraldine Dawson	Professor of Psychology, University of Washington. Highly respected expert, superb communicator on brain research, focuses on interplay between biology and environment among children of depressed mothers
Felton Earls, M.D.	Professor of Human Behavior, Harvard School of Public Health. Best known for research on children at risk and impact of stress on brain chemistry
Megan Gunnar	Professor of Psychology, University of Minnesota. Highly respected expert and superb communicator on the impact of caregiver-child relations on healthy development and brain chemistry
Bruce Perry, M.D.	Baylor College of Medicine. Superb communicator on the critical periods of brain growth and development and their implications for policy and practice
Carla Shatz	Professor of Neuroscience, University of California, Berkeley. Perhaps the field's leading young researcher, expert on brain development and a balanced spokesperson on the promise and limits of current brain research

Brain development; impact of caregiving relationships
Research on how the brain gets structured during early development, with particular emphasis on how we protect the developing brain from the deleterious impact of stress hormones by providing high quality caregiving that blocks or buffers stress systems. Failure to provide these safe, responsive contexts for development may result in the physiology of stress adversely affecting the development of brain areas involved in learning and memory, attention regulation, and negative emotionality.

Carla Shatz, Ph.D.
Neurobiologist
University of California, Berkeley
phone: 510-643-5762
fax: 643-5624

cellular biology of the brain
Ongoing studies of how the orderly sets of connections present in the adult brain are wired up during development. Her work addresses questions of how nerve cells know where to grow their connections and to what extent vision is necessary for the visual system to develop normally. Dr. Shatz has found that some of the answers reinforce the concept that prenatal and perinatal mammals require certain sensory stimuli and non-inhibiting environments for proper brain development.

Impact of specific caregiving patterns on young children's cognitive and emotional development; clinical and community-wide intervention strategies

African-American professor of social work known especially for her Infant Development Project, a longitudinal ethnographic research project studying the interaction and communication between children and their caregivers in low-income, inner-city Chicago neighborhoods. Her findings point to specific patterns of caregiving -- for example, helping young children develop a sense of time and using language to question, teach, and foster imagination -- that prepare young children to benefit from preschool and school experiences.

MEMO FOR: Nicole Ravner

FROM: Matthew Melmed, Carol Berman

DATE: January 24, 1997

RE: Preliminary Ideas

We were so pleased to have had the opportunity to meet with you on Tuesday and are greatly encouraged by the First Lady's interest in convening experts to focus on the earliest years of development. We couldn't agree more that having a "hook" such as brain development is essential. Among the facts that help people recognize the need to pay attention to brain development are:

- the brain is the most undeveloped organ of a newborn;
- 80 percent of a child's brain develops by age 1;
- a child's earliest experiences can increase or decrease the number of cell connections in the brain by 25% or more.

We find it is helpful to stress that the first few years of life -- especially as they relate to brain growth -- can be perhaps the greatest opportunity of a child's lifetime -- or the greatest missed opportunity.

The following are some preliminary thoughts on topic ideas. We are presenting them in outline form, beginning with the theme of brain development. We would be happy to take any number of these areas and develop them further; first, by writing a short summary of the area which frames the issue and then suggesting potential panelists and successful programs. We have enclosed some of our publications which identify some specific resources and topic ideas within broader themes. We would be happy to provide you with additional background reading materials and assist the First Lady in preparing questions or ideas. We look forward to working with you.

Topic Ideas Regarding Brain Development

- The science: the latest research. (Research shows how young children's brains are "wired," and that capabilities we are born with (nature) are influenced by what is actually experienced/learned after birth (nurture). Our parent focus groups show that this is a confusing area for parents--they are unclear about the depth of their influence child's emotional and cognitive development. The theme should not pit nature against nurture, but rather, show the interrelationship.)

- Neural Plasticity: how the brain actually changes with experience and how that experience helps to "build the brain." (This area of neuroscience reveals fascinating evidence that the "blueprint" for a developing brain is not solely contained in the genetic code.
- Language and Memory: What has been learned about early language development and memory. (This theme strikes a responsive chord in parents. Few realize that auditory discrimination occurs prenatally.)
- The important connection between brain development and nutrition.
- The price of neglect, abuse and stress on brain development. (For example, one study demonstrates that children who are rarely touched or spoken to, or who had little opportunity to explore and experiment with toys, had brains that were 20-30% smaller than children in the same age group.)

In addition to brain development as a central theme around which the "convening," could be organized, future events might center around these two major themes: (1) What parents and other caregivers do really makes a difference and (2) It takes a village -- giving families the tools and supports they need.

Parents and Caregivers - Making a Difference

- School readiness: How young children learn and the emotional foundations needed for success in school and life. (See Heart Start report, attached. Also, Emotional Intelligence by Daniel Goleman which became a best seller, gives currency to social and emotional development, rather than overemphasis on IQ.)
- Fathers' unique roles in their child's development. (For example, studies show that when fathers --regardless of their professions-- are involved in the care-giving of their daughters before age one, they do better in math.)
- The Development of Pro-Social Behavior: The basis for violence prevention and the creation of caring citizens (See, for example, the April 1992 issue of Zero to Three for articles about empathy, development of self-esteem, etc.)
- Relationships: The key to parenting and care giving. (see back issues of Zero to Three for sub-themes such as Grandparents (Feb/Mar 1993), working cross-culturally (Oct/Nov 1994), working with employers (Oct/Nov 1995), partners in parenting education (Aug/Sept 1996).
- Reading Your Baby: How children communicate. (One theme might be how children communicate through movement -There is fascinating research on movement patterns and symmetry. See Zero to Three Aug/Sept 1994).
- Reading to your Baby: It's not the content - its the relationship. (The Reach Out and Read project is an excellent illustration. See September 1991 issue of Zero to Three.)

It Takes a Village -- Giving Families the Tools and Support They Need

- Community Supports: Many Layers. See Issues of Zero to Three, e.g. Parenting groups (June/July 1996); the Legal System (December 1992); Rural families (Apr/May 1995).
- Expanding the Boundaries of Pediatric Care (Aug/Sept 1995).
- Working Cross-Culturally (Oct/Nov 1994)
- Working with the Written-Off (Oct/Nov 1996)

Heidi Als has pioneered the study of premature, low birthweight babies who have intracranial hemorrhages. Her research has led to entirely new procedures in neonatal intensive care nurseries. Dr. Als has found that by reducing the amount of light, noise, and disruptions to which preemies are subjected, they spend less time in the hospital, have better sensory integration, and tend to have better overall outcomes than do preemies who receive traditional intensive care nursery handling. In 1995, Dr. Als received the Decade of the Brain Research Award from the Chicago Institute for Neurosurgery and Neuroresearch. She also has received the Award of Excellence from the Boston Institute for the Development of Infants and Parents. She is an expressive and captivating speaker.

Dr. Phillips is known for her research related to the effects of caregiving adults' racial attitudes on the development of young children. She has served as a consultant to Head Start, the National Center for Clinical Infant Programs, and the National Association for the Education of Young Children on projects related to multicultural and bilingual issues. She is an excellent speaker.

Ron Lally has extensive research experience in these areas: 1) the social emotional development in infancy; 2) the impact of early intervention on later adult functioning; 3) the effects of family support on the development of young children; and 4) the training of adults who provide care for infants and toddlers. He is currently part of a consortium funded to provide training and technical assistance to the 68 new Early Head Start sites across the country. His video-based training techniques are highly regarded by child care providers and parent educators. Dr. Lally also directs two early intervention initiatives in northern California. One is for pregnant adolescents and provides support from pregnancy through the children's eighth birthdays. The second is a 25-year study of the impact of family support and quality child care on poor families served for five continuous years from birth until school entry.

Glenn Gabbard is a native American Samoan. Twelve years ago his daughter was born prematurely, and her need for on-going, specialized medical care brought the family to Boston. Glenn has a masters in linguistics and has served as the director of the office for non-English speaking students at a Boston community college. He currently is pursuing a doctorate in post secondary education. He is eloquent in relating his family's experiences with his daughter, particularly during her infancy: The pediatrician in Hawaii told the family not to bother to save the baby because of her disabilities. Despite his daughter's severe, multiple, physical disabilities, she attends classes in her neighborhood middle school with her non-disabled peers and does very well in school. Glenn is a visionary who gives moving presentations about the value of ALL children.

Dr. Chavez is known for her publications and work related to bilingual education and the involvement of low income parents in preschool education programs. She currently directs the Family Development Program at the University of New Mexico. This program provides comprehensive services to low income families and children from 0-12 years of age. It focuses on building positive relationships between parents and schools in order to help families recognize their strengths, set their own agendas, and make constructive changes in their lives. She served on the New Mexico State School Board for eight years and currently serves on the national board of Zero to Three.

Dr. Johnson-Powell is the first African American woman in the history of the Harvard Medical School to serve as a tenured professor of child psychiatry. She also is director of the Ambulatory Care Center at Judge Baker Children's Center in Boston. She has developed a home-based services program for inner city children and families in Boston called "Partnerships in Prevention: Building Rainbows." This program uses a mobile unit to bring primary mental health care services door-to-door to children and families in need in 12 Boston housing projects and six Head Start programs. Dr. Johnson-Powell and her daughter are writing a book, "The House on Elbert Street: The Psycho-History of the Welfare System and a Welfare Mother." The welfare mother is her own mother who raised her and her siblings on Aid to Dependent Children in Boston.

Evelyn Moore has a background in early childhood education, but now is one of the strongest voices to speak about the challenges facing African American children of all ages. She does not tiptoe around issues and calls things as she sees them. She needs to be at the table when policy issues are discussed, but she is not always included because she speaks out when she disagrees. Politically, it is wise to invite her.

Subject: Re: Early Childhood Event

Sounds like good advice from Marti. My only addition at the moment is not to focus totally on govt policy and what govt supports can be in place, but to focus on the role of parents and families .. and what government policies can be/do to support those roles.

Bill Purcell from TN would be a great person to bring in if audience will be primarily legislatures, given his role as state legislature and chair of TN Commission on Children, Youth and Families. National Conference of State LEgislatures would be a good partner, too. Also the Governors, of course.

Hi Paula, nice to meet you over the information superhighway.

Bev, I'm also sending this to you in case Pauline doesn't get it to you so you can fax it to her. Pauline is a member of the First Lady's policy staff. Pauline, Bev is one of our senior people in the National Performance Review. She's at 632-0347.

What follows are suggestions for the early childhood conference/summit/event:

I have discussed this at length with Dr Marti Erickson of the University of Minnesota, who is one of the country's foremost authorities on early childhood development and attachment theory. She is a wonderful friend of the administration, has co-sponsored the Family Re-Union conference for 4 years and is an entertaining and lively speaker. She has made some good suggestions. We were thinking that the audience might be a bi-partisan group of legislators and other policy makers...so that there could be a heavy emphasis on changing policy.

You might present the material in 3 parts which could be interwoven and some of the same people could present more than one area:

I.The Case for Early Childhood Supports

a) Attachment: the psychological component building a strong sense of self and healthy motivation and relationships

DR. MARTHA FARRELL ERICKSON, Director of the Children, Youth& Family Consortium, University of Minnesota

b) The new brain research: psysiological development

DR. MEGAN (pronounced Meegan) GUNNAR, also U of Minn

c) Language development, early intelligence stimulation, etc

DR CRAIG RAMEY...not sure where...one of the Carolinas?

...after the basic case is made, we need to discuss

2. Implications for Practice

What do we know? What do we need to learn? What can we do? What has to change?

3. Calling the Community to Action

None of the necessary elements of peri-natal and early childhood nuturing are possible without involving elements of health care, child care, churches and places of worship, etc. We must discuss strategies for family support at critical stages like the birth of a child. (effective home visiting),

I wanted to get Marti's suggestions of Megan Gunnar and Craig Ramey and my suggestion of Marti...to you quickly. I will be back from this trip next Saturday and we can talk more about the strucutre of the event.

BRAIN DEVELOPMENT IN YOUNG CHILDREN: NEW FRONTIERS FOR RESEARCH, POLICY AND PRACTICE

An Invitational Conference

June 13-14, 1996
The University of Chicago Graduate School of Business
The Conference Center
450 North Cityfront Plaza Drive
Chicago, Illinois 60611-4316
(312) 464-8787 • Fax (312) 464-8781

Endorsed by the American Academy of Pediatrics
Co-Sponsored by the Irving B. Harris School of Public Policy at the University of Chicago and the School of Social Service Administration at the University of Chicago

AGENDA

Thursday, June 13, 1996

7:00 AM
REGISTRATION AND BREAKFAST

8:00 - 8:45 AM
WELCOME AND OPENING KEYNOTE

Moderator:
Ellen Galinsky, MS, Families and Work Institute

Speakers:
Marie M. Bristol, PhD, Health Scientist Administrator, NICHD/NIH
Irving B. Harris, Chairman, The Harris Foundation
Opening Keynote: Gaston Caperton, Governor of West Virginia

8:45 - 9:45 AM
OPENING OVERVIEW: THE LOGISTICS OF BRAIN DEVELOPMENT

This session will set the stage by reviewing what we know about the neurology of brain development and the impact of the environment on brain development. It will address the question of why practitioners should care about this research and the potential for its application. This session will also address the question of how to look at the research on early brain development.

Moderator:

Donald Cohen, MD, Irving B. Harris Professor of Child Psychiatry, Pediatrics, and Psychology, Yale University Medical School

Speaker:

Pasko Rakic, MD, ScD, Dorys McDonnell Duberg Professor of Neuroscience/Chair, Section on Neurobiology, Yale University School of Medicine

9:45 - 10:15 AM
BREAK

10:15 AM - 12:15 PM
CRITICAL STAGES OF BRAIN DEVELOPMENT

This session will take a life-span perspective, and discuss the notion of critical stages.

Moderator:

Edward L. Schor, MD, Division of Family and Community Health, Iowa Department of Public Health

Prenatal and Early Years

Speaker:

Myron A. Hofer, MD, Professor of Psychiatry, Director, Division of Developmental Psychobiology, Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons

From Four to Adolescence

Speaker:

Harry Chugani, MD, PET Center, Children's Hospital, Detroit; Wayne State University

Respondent

Respondents will comment on the findings of critical stages of brain development in terms of research and practice.

Stanley Greenspan, MD, Clinical Professor of Psychiatry and Pediatrics, George Washington University Medical School

Audience Discussion

12:15 - 1:15 PM
LUNCH

1:15 - 3:15 PM
LINKING BRAIN, COGNITIVE, AND EMOTIONAL DEVELOPMENT

This session will share recent studies that have linked brain research to cognitive and emotional development.

Moderator:
Bettye Caldwell, PhD, Professor of Pediatrics, Pediatrics/CARE,
Arkansas Children's Hospital (invited)

Speaker:
Geraldine Dawson, PhD, Professor of Psychology, University of Washington

Respondent Panel

Respondents will comment on the findings of linking brain, cognitive, and emotional development in terms of research and practice.

Barbara Bowman, MA, President, Erikson Institute
Kyle Pruett, MD, Clinical Professor of Child Psychiatry, Yale University Child Study Center

Audience Discussion

3:15 - 3:30 PM
BREAK

3:30 - 4:15 PM
KEYNOTE
Moderator:
Nick Goodban, Vice President of Philanthropy,
Robert R. McCormick Tribune Foundation

Speaker:
Ronald Kotulak, Science Writer, Chicago Tribune

4:15 - 5:00 PM
EARLY EXPERIENCE AND THE DEVELOPING BRAIN

Part One: Social and Physical Deprivation

This section of the program will begin a discussion of the impact of stress, neglect, and abuse on brain development.

Moderator:
Emily Fenichel, MSW, Associate Director, ZERO TO THREE

Speaker:
Felton Earls, MD, Professor of Human Behavior and Development,
Harvard School of Public Health

Respondent Panel
Judith Musick, PhD, Author
Bernice Weissbourd, MA, President, Family Focus

5:00 - 7:00 PM
RECEPTION

7:00 PM
DINNER

Friday, June 14, 1996

7:00 AM
BREAKFAST

8:00 - 10:00 AM

Part One: Social and Physical Deprivation (Continued)

This section of the program will continue the discussion of the impact of stress, neglect, and abuse on brain development.

Moderator:
Jeffrey Jacobs, Founder, Civitas Initiative; President, Harpo Entertainment Group

Speakers:
Bruce D. Perry, MD, PhD, Thomas S. Trammwell Research Professor of Child Psychiatry, Baylor College of Medicine
Linda Mayes, MD, Arnold Gesell Associate Professor of Child Development, Pediatrics and Psychology, Yale University Child Study Center

Respondent Panel

Respondents will comment on the findings of the session on social and physical deprivation in terms of research and practice.

James Garbarino, PhD, Director, Family Life Development Center, Cornell University
Bennett Leventhal, MD, Department of Psychiatry, University of Chicago

Audience Discussion

10:00 - 10:15 AM
BREAK

Part Two: Protective and Growth Promoting Factors

10:15 AM -11:15 AM
1) The Importance of Early Support and Nurturing

Moderator:
P. Lindsay Chase-Lansdale, PhD, Associate Professor, The Irving B. Harris Graduate School of Public Policy, The University of Chicago

Speaker:
L. Alan Sroufe, PhD, William Harris Professor of Child Psychology, Institute of Child Development, University of Minnesota

Respondent
Maria D. Chavez, PhD, Senior Program Director, Family Development Program University of New Mexico

11:15 AM - 12:00 PM
2) Enriched Perinatal/Preventive Health

Moderator:
Harriet Meyer, MA, Executive Director, Ounce of Prevention Fund

Speakers:
Linda Gilkerson, PhD, Director, Irving B. Harris Infant Studies Program, Erikson Institute
Alicia Lieberman, PhD, Infant-Parent Program, San Francisco General Hospital

LUNCH
12:00 - 1:00 PM

Remarks:
Murray Gell-Mann, PhD, Trustee, John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation

1:00 - 3:00 PM

3) Enriched Learning Environments for Children

Moderator:

Michael H. Levine, PhD, Program Officer, Carnegie Corporation of New York

Speakers:

Craig Ramey, PhD, Co-Director of the Civitan Center, University of Alabama
April Ann Benasich, PhD, Director of Infancy Studies, Center for Molecular and Behavioral Neuroscience, Rutgers University

Respondent Panel

Respondents will comment on the findings of the session on protective and growth promoting factors in terms of research and practice.

J. Ronald Lally, EdD, Director, Center for Child and Family Studies, FarWest Laboratories for Educational Research and Development
Roger Weissberg, PhD, Department of Psychology, University of Illinois, Chicago
Edward Zigler, PhD, Sterling Professor of Psychology, Bush Center for Child Development and Social Policy, Yale University

Audience Discussion

3:00 - 4:00 PM

CONCLUDING SESSION: A FRAMEWORK FOR ACTION

Moderator: Rachel Jones, Knight-Ridder, Inc.

Speakers: Irving B. Harris, Chairman, The Harris Foundation
Reverend Kenneth Smith, Chicago Theological Seminary
Margaret M. Mahoney, President, MEM Associates, Inc.
Woodie Kessel, MD, Director, Division of Science, Education and Analysis, Maternal and Child Health Bureau, Department of Health and Human Services

NOTE TO JEANINE SMARTT

As you requested, I am sending names of outstanding scientists in several fields as potential participants in a White House Summit on early brain development in children. These selections are based not only on their scientific knowledge, achievements, and reputations, but on their ability to make a high quality presentation understandable by a lay audience and interact with other colleagues in a panel format before a television camera. They are in rough priority order, but all are first-rate.

Neuroscientists in Early Brain Development

B Patricia Goldman-Rakic - Yale - "it all working in structured environments are older"
A- Pat Kuhl - University of Washington - language dev. OK can in studies - infants can dif - sound/world
A Carla Schatz - University of California/Berkeley - wiring - connections/synapses - art/good - was head of Dana Alliance
Corey Goodman - University of California/Berkeley
Elizabeth Bates - University of California/San Diego

Early Developmental Psychologists

B Jerome Kagan - Harvard (may not be up to it. kennington type - what do babies really need.

Neuroscientists and Experts on Brain Research Applications

Below is a brief list of highly respected neuroscientists and experts on the application of brain research to practice and policy. More complete lists have been submitted to the White House by Ellen Galinsky (Families and Work Institute) and Duane Alexander (NICHD).

Harry Chugani, M.D.	Professor of Pediatric Neurology and Radiology, Wayne State University School of Medicine, expert on new brain scanning technologies, could provide overview on brain research
Donald Cohen, M.D.	Professor and Director of Yale Child Study Center, expert on a range of early intervention programs and the sensible application of new knowledge
Geraldine Dawson	Professor of Psychology, University of Washington. Highly respected expert, superb communicator on brain research, focuses on interplay between biology and environment among children of depressed mothers
Megan Gunnar	Professor of Psychology, University of Minnesota. Highly respected expert and superb communicator on the impact of caregiver-child relations on healthy development and brain chemistry
Bruce Perry, M.D.	Baylor College of Medicine. Superb communicator on the critical periods of brain growth and development and their implications for policy and practice
Carla Shatz	Professor of Neuroscience, University of California, Berkeley. Perhaps the field's leading young researcher, expert on brain development and a balanced spokesperson on the promise and limits of current brain research

Subject: White House Conference Invitees and Written Preview

Invitations to participate in the White House conference should be extended to Sharon Darling, Director, National Center for Family Literacy, Mildred Winters, Director, Parents As Teachers and Charles Walgren, Director, High/Scope Foundation. Their addresses are attached. In the Department of Interior, invitations should come to me and to Ms. Lana Shaughnessy, Coordinator of our Family and Child Education (FACE) Program. The written preview of the FACE program follows.

The FACE program is a one-of-a-kind partnership between the National Center for Family Literacy, Parents As Teachers, High/Scope Foundation and the U. S. Department of the Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs. The FACE program provides services to American Indian families which support the parent as being the child's first and most influential teacher. The FACE program is implemented in two settings: home and school. Parents As Teachers provide training for FACE parent educators who visit with parents of children ages 0-3 in the home. These parent educators assess the developmental level of the child and provide learning experiences for the parent to engage in with the child. Screening and referral services are also provided. Early detection of a developmental delay can be addressed long before a child enters school and thereby better support a child's readiness for school. The National Center for Family Literacy provides training for FACE early childhood teachers, assistants, and adult educators who work with children ages 4 through 5 and their parents in a school setting. The participating school provides an early childhood classroom and an adult education classroom. The early childhood teacher and assistant implement the High/Scope active learning curriculum. The adult educators assist parents in meeting their educational goals as well as parenting skills. Both the adult educator and the early childhood teacher and assistant work together during parent and child time to provide opportunities for parents to engage with their child in developmentally appropriate activities. The High/Scope Foundation provides training to teachers and their assistants in grades K-3 in the implementation of the High/Scope active learning curriculum which is child centered, hands-on, active learning in a classroom which is language rich and involves multiple mediums. The High/Scope curriculum provides a transition and extends the active learning provided in the early childhood classroom into the elementary grades.

The FACE program addresses several of the national educational goals such as readiness for school, literacy, high school completion, and parental involvement. It is currently implemented in 22 communities and serves 1,650 families. Over the past six years of implementation, FACE has had 9300 participants. 350 adults have completed their GED's or earned a high school diploma. 700 adults have gained employment through participating in FACE. FACE has instituted literacy, improved parenting at home, and parental involvement in the classroom, all of which is provided in an environment that is culturally appropriate and supportive of the families it serves. For every child in FACE there is a parent or primary caregiver enrolled in FACE.

This is a very unique and successful partnership aiding rural, isolated reservation populations. In addition to the training provided by Parents As Teachers, the National Center for Family Literacy and the High/Scope Foundation to all FACE staff in a group setting at three scheduled times a year, they also provide on-site technical assistance for each FACE staff at pre-arranged times throughout the year. The Department of Interior's proposal would be to expand this quality model to more than 22 sites. A copy of the booklet describing the FACE program which could be distributed was provided at our first planning meeting.

Dear Melanne:

I just had a call from Rob Reiner who is in a constructive, creative frenzy of activity. He just had an excellent briefing from RAND about the cost-effectiveness study of preventive interventions in the first few years of life. Evidently the results are highly encouraging. He strongly urges that the principal investigator Peter Greenwood be invited to the conference on April 17. Indeed, he believes that it would be valuable for Greenwood to make a brief presentation because it shows policy makers the value of these interventions in practical terms.

He is also extremely eager to have two key governors, George Voinovich of Ohio and Bob Miller of Nevada. They are co-chairs of the National Governors' Association's effort in this field and have been very helpful in Rob's work. In addition, he suggested the following people: Governors Howard Dean of Vermont and Lawton Chiles of Florida, Senators Chris Dodd, Jim Jeffords, Tom Daschle and Orrin Hatch. From the House, Bill Goodling, Susan Molinari, and Dick Gephardt. They are all people who are significantly interested in 0 - 3 issues and likely to be helpful. All of these people that Rob suggests seem perfectly reasonable to me.

In the same vein, Michael Levine of our staff submitted a list that he went over with Vivien Stewart and me. It is a very good list in my judgment. At the same time, I am aware of space limitations in the East Room. I know you have a lot of balls to juggle.

Incidentally, I am assuming that Rob Reiner will be on the invitation list. It is remarkable how much he is accomplishing.

The very best of luck on your trip to Africa! I look forward with great pleasure to learning from your experience when you get back.

With every good wish,

As always,

Dave
