Dear President Bill,

I pray that this letter reaches you.

First of all, you were marvelous at the last press affair. I am happy now that you are finally are able to laugh at the many things that you had to and still have to endure. I know that your loyal friends, the Thomasons must have aided, and it was fantastic.

Dear Mr. President:

I would like to invite you to be my guest at the Warren Buffett Omaha Classic golf tournament which takes place in Omaha on Tuesday, September 12, 2000. This event is a fun filled, wonderful event and all proceeds go to a local charity, the Boys and Girls Clubs of Omaha.

For your scheduling purposes, the tournament starts on the 12th with breakfast and warm-up at the driving range, lunch at the Omaha Country Club followed by golf and dinner with Warren Buffett. After dinner, Warren Buffett opens the floor to a question and answer session with guests. The dinner and Q&A usually ends at about 9:30 p.m.

Please let me know if you can make it. Also, this will be a good time to visit Nebraska, a state you have not visited.

Best regards,

My Dearest President,

Sitting at my computer once again to rely on it's many abilities my thoughts drift.

If my letters are an annoyance to you perhaps I'm getting through. If only it were so easy.

I had the most unique experience in my little hovel of the world today.

It was so bizarre that I attribute it to my unstable mind-set. None the less it made me rethink some of my focus.

I'm not sure that this is in line with "protocol" but I know the letter reader that gets this beauty will surely nix it from your files of "important documents." But at least when I get that extra big "response envelope" I can pretend to be connected with you.

This is not the letter I have written with the intention of "Your Eyes Only" but I would do just about anything to have a private audience with you.

5 minutes is all of your precious time I would ask for. I wouldn't walk away if you were inclined to speak with me further however.

Our bipartisan issue is extremely clear. I'll play naive & ask, "Why is it so difficult to find even ground, especially with those who are supposed to be in cooperation?"

At this point I know your assistant has thrown this ramble into the "round file" but on the outside chance I may have caught an eye I dare to ramble for only a bit before getting to the meat of the matter which I continue to write to you about.

Adam, Gail, Don, Naomi, Ron.....to name a few.

So many people have died during your administration. I suppose that's the way it is with being President, you experience life in such a grander scope. I do not envy your position. Although I could never wish to rise to such vision I salute you & the other brilliant, dedicated, selfless souls who grasp the moment in time that helps mold our universe.

Adam was also one of the few true leaders that lived long enough for his niece to know only of his sweetness, not his greatness. However I am determined to keep his presence awake in our souls.

Kylie stood up & spoke of her own initiative in memory of Adam at the family service on April 2nd, the initial unveiling of the memorial dedicated to the Baltic Peace Mission in the Hall of Commerce.

I imagine you were probably informed that was taking place.

Of course I was wishing upon stars that you would be joining us, knowing all the while your schedule has too many important matters to be available for the acknowledgment of one incident so very long ago.

4 years ago. 4, very life changing, years ago.

It doesn't seem that long since Adam first introduced us to the idea that you were "The Man."

Though I expect the arrogance of the DOD, yours is much more difficult to swallow.

If this matter is left unresolved past your administration I will find it an even harder pill to swallow than the fact that you deceived yourself regarding a matter that should have been resolved without incident.

I speak of your infidelity.

It doesn't seem to alter your governing abilities, in fact it probably stabilizes you. It's not illegal, & morals are a matter of opinion.

In all of your greatness I am insulted by the smallness you demonstrated in handling this most personal area.

I do not pass judgment but rather words of support & encouragement.

I would vote you in for a 3rd term if it were an option. I believe you have served our country well & I look for Gore to continue this trend. Though your charisma will be greatly missed, I am confident Gore will bring many strengths to the office.

Wishing you & yours the most enlightened of all holidays: Happy Easter. Rejoice in The Resurrection.

As always,

Dear Mr. President,

As the UN Commission on Human Rights winds down, I write to thank you for helping to make this one of the most successful Commissions ever. In the past few weeks, thanks in large part to American leadership, the Commission has drawn attention to some of the world's worst human rights violations and moved proactively to find solutions to core human rights concerns.

In its first session of the new millennium, the U.N. Commission on Human Rights drew attention to the world's worst human rights violations; created a fact-finding mechanism to report on the situation of human rights defenders worldwide; recognized for the first time that honor killings are a serious violation of women's human rights; and reinforced the link between democracy and human rights. Throughout the Commission's six weeks, the United States spoke out on a variety of issues ranging from human rights violations in specific countries to the protection of vulnerable groups, including gays and lesbians, children at risk, and the mentally disabled.

The U.S.-sponsored resolution, on human rights in the former Yugoslavia, passed by an overwhelming margin (44-1-8), with only Russia opposing. The resolution highlighted abuses in Serbia and the human rights successes of the new government in the republic of Croatia. A vast majority of Commission members agreed with our assessment that the regime of Slobodan Milosevic is the number one human rights problem in the former Yugoslavia.

Another notable success was the resolution on human rights abuses in Cuba, which passed by 21-18-14. Sponsored by the Czech and Polish Governments and co-sponsored by the U.S. and more than twenty other countries, the resolution drew the world's attention to the courageous human rights defenders and independent journalists who risk their freedom to speak out for a democratic Cuba. The vote also reflects the Czech and Polish experience that sustained Commission examination can promote a dictatorial government's peaceful transition to democracy.

The Commission's decision to pass a resolution on the human rights situation in Chechnya (25-7-19) reflects worldwide concern about the situation there. As Secretary Albright noted in her March 24th speech to the Commission, "We cannot ignore the fact that thousands of Chechen civilians have died and more than 200,000 have been driven from their homes." Although we take no satisfaction in the need for such a measure, the U.S. co-sponsored this resolution because we remain gravely concerned by the human rights situation in Chechnya. We have urged Russia promptly to facilitate and implement the Commission's recommendations.

The Commission's also passed a Romanian-sponsored resolution on the right to democracy. The Commission reaffirmed for the second consecutive year the indissoluble link between democracy and human rights. The resolution reaffirms that member states can best protect human rights by working together to consolidate democracy. The resolution also confirms that democracy is not a regional value nested in any particular social, cultural or religious tradition, but rather a universal value rooted in the rich and diverse nature of the community of democracies.

By the narrowest margin since 1995, the Commission passed a procedural motion by China not to take action on a resolution on human rights abuses in China (22-28-12). The vote demonstrated that increasingly, member countries believe that China should not escape Commission scrutiny. The United States was proud to sponsor the resolution as part of our principled, purposeful policy of engagement with China. By so doing, we spoke up for the Chinese people and drew attention to the marked deterioration in the human rights situation in China during the past year.

The Commission also passed U.S.-supported country-specific actions on Afghanistan, Burma, Iran, Iraq, and Sierra Leone, among others, as well as a number of important thematic resolutions. Of particular note, the Commission recommended the adoption of two protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child. The first bans and criminalizes child prostitution and child pornography, while the second establishes an international standard banning the use of child soldiers under the age of 18. These new measures will, in conjunction with the Convention banning the Most Exploitative Forms of Child Labor, mark a sea change in the way that the world seeks to address human rights violations against the world's most vulnerable.

My deep gratitude for appointing me to serve in this capacity...and for the generosity of spirit in the tape you prepared on mental health. I am honored to be able to serve this administration and to promote and protect the rights of people everywhere to control their own destinies.

Warm regards,

Nancy Rubin

U.S. Ambassador to the UN Commission on Human Rights

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

I am deeply grateful to all the people of the Delta and to the Federal agencies taking part in the Mississippi Delta: Beyond 2000 Initiative. You have faithfully continued the work we embarked upon more than a decade ago in the Lower Mississippi Delta Development Commission, which I was privileged to lead. I thank you for your counsel and your recommendations for the future development of this vast region that lies at the center of America. We are committed to continuing work on this initiative in the new century and the new millennium to ensure that people throughout the region can participate fairly and fully in the unprecedented prosperity our Nation enjoys today.

As a son of Arkansas, I have traveled the beautiful valleys, wetlands, and other natural splendors of the Delta for much of my life. During my New Markets tour last year, I visited several Delta communities in Mississippi and Arkansas and met with many grassroots leaders. Those meetings only reinforced my determination to bring together Federal, State, and local government and the private sector to revitalize the region.

We must continue to encourage private sector investment in underserved areas through such initiatives as Empowerment Zones, Enterprise Communities, Community Development Financial Institutions, the Community Reinvestment Act, and other financial incentives. In my State of the Union address earlier this year, I announced a budget proposal of more than $150 million in specific set-aside funding targeted for the Delta -- funding to promote job creation, to improve education, housing, and health care, to aid small business development, and to create community development initiatives.

This report presents an additional and impressive array of thoughtful recommendations for the Delta's future development, from the establishment of a permanent regional commission to the "circuit rider" proposal for technical assistance for the poorest and smallest communities. Much like the original Delta Report, this is a "handbook for action" that any concerned citizen can use to make a difference. I am especially grateful for the thoughtful contributions from so many grassroots leaders and organizations from the region who are the true and powerful voices of the Delta.

From the banks of the Potomac to the banks of the mighty Mississippi, we are listening to those voices, and we are committed to working together to make our vision of prosperity and opportunity a reality for the people of the Mississippi Delta in the 21st century and throughout the new millennium.

Subject: James Byrd, Jr.

Dear Pres. Clinton,

I wrote you a few months ago about the fact that I feel public pressure should be applied to get Gov. Bush to sign the J. Byrd, Jr. Hate Crimes Bill. In my mind, he has no intention of signing this bill.

I am enclosing a magazine and an article from the Beaumont Enterprise about the Grand Wizard of the KKK, James Roesch who is trespassing on Mr. Byrd's grave. I've met with the district attorney, the local sheriff, the judge who presided over the trials to get a protective order in place to prevent this man from trespassing and other crimes targeted towards the grave of Mr. Byrd. The people of Jasper think I'm overreacting and have not given the Byrd family nor me the respect or the help we need.

Can you help as the city of Jasper thinks that they are above the law and also have a different set of laws for blacks and white people in Jasper.

Thank you for your time and attention in this matter. I'd be happy to discuss further with you. If you need more information. I am a sports publicist but am assisting the family of Mr. Byrd too.

With Kindest Regards,

Dear John,

Hope things are going great in Washington!

Unfortunately it has not been a great week for my family. I am sure you are aware of the terrible (and apparently racially motivated) shootings that took place on Friday in Pittsburgh. My second cousin, Anita (Nikki) Gordon, was one of the victims: she was the next-door neighbor of the suspect.

For our family, Nikki was a very special person. She and my mother grew up together, were bridesmaids in each other's weddings, and always stayed in constant contact. Their relationship was much more than that between relatives: they were also the closest of friends. While she was my grandmother's first cousin, she was only 1 1/2 years older than my mom.

Nikki is survived by her husband, Sandy Gordon and their three daughters Annette, Linda and Nancy, as well as Nikki's sister Seema. While they are the next of kin survivors, my mother, Gerry Teitelbaum, who the President met at my DNC fundraiser in New York in the end of February, is in Pittsburgh sitting shiva with them.
