Dear John:

Last evening I was reading Truman by David McCullough. I am enclosing pages 956 and 957.

Truman was honored at Oxford University in June of 1956 at a white-tie dinner for four hundred returning graduates of Christ Church College. He is quoted as saying, "Every person born in the twentieth century is entitled to the benefits of the twentieth century."

He continued, "... we must declare in a new Magna Carta, in a new Declaration of Independence, that henceforth economic well being and security, that health and education and decent living standards, are among our inalienable rights."

He concluded by saying that every man and woman was entitled to the full benefits of the best in medicine, that every child was entitled to a first-rate education, and that there should be no economic worries for the elderly in their declining years. That was almost 50 years ago.

Tell your boss not to be discouraged, but to go on and finish the Truman program. Lyndon Johnson came to the Truman Library in Independence, Missouri, to sign the medicare bill into law.

President Clinton should go to Independence and sign the health care bill when it is passed.

Best wishes.

Sincerely,

Ralph H. Kelley
United States Bankruptcy Judge

TRUMAN

Truman was tireless, determined to see everything, and fascinated by nearly all he saw. Bess tried valiantly to keep the pace, seldom smiling, at least in view of the photographers. The itinerary would have exhausted people half their age.

Their route in France, interestingly, included no return visits to the Vosges Mountains, the Argonne, or Verdun, Truman apparently having no wish to see any of those places ever again.

There were big crowds to cheer him at the train stations in Brussels, The Hague, and Amsterdam, where at the Dutch State Museum he and Bess saw the largest exhibit of Rembrandts ever held, and had lunch with Queen Juliana at the Royal Soestdijk Palace.

Then, on June 17, they were on their way to England, the part of the trip Truman had looked forward to most of all. "We crossed the Channel on the night boat," he recorded, "and landed at the English side in beautiful sunshine. . . ."

It may be fairly said that in his long, eventful life, in an extraordinary career with many surprising turns and times of great fulfillment, there were few occasions that meant so much to Truman as the ceremony that took place at Oxford on Wednesday, June 20, 1956. Wearing the traditional crimson robe and crushed black velour hat of Oxford, the man who had never been to college, nor ever made a pretense of erudition, walked at the head of the procession, beside the Public Orator, at one of the world's oldest, most distinguished universities.

"Never, never in my life," he had whispered to a reporter, "did I ever think I'd be a Yank at Oxford."

The ceremony, called the Encaenia and conducted in Latin, was held in Oxford's 300-year-old Sheldonian Theatre, designed by Christopher Wren. The audience numbered more than a thousand people. As Truman stood in the center facing the crimson-robed professors of Oxford, he heard the Public Orator present "Harricum Truman," for an honorary degree of "Doctoris in Jure Civili" (Doctor of Civil Law). Then the towering, ornately robed Earl of Halifax, chancellor of the university and former British ambassador to Washington, admitted Harricum Truman into the ancient fellowship of Oxford, lauding him, in Latin, as Truest of allies, direct in your speech and in your writings and ever a pattern of simple courage . . . (sociorum firmissime, qui missis ambagibus et loqueris et commentarios scribis veraeque constantiae specimen semper dedisti).

The applause that followed went on for a full three minutes. Truman, moved to tears, searched beneath his academic gown for a handkerchief.

BACK HOME

An elderly professor told a reporter that he had attended many such convocations but had never heard such applause. "Mr. Truman is very popular in this country," he said. Recovering himself, Truman smiled broadly.

That night he was honored at a white-tie dinner for four hundred returning graduates of Christ Church College. "Every person born in the twentieth century is entitled to the benefits of the twentieth century," he said in his speech.

... we must declare in a new Magna Carta, in a new Declaration of Independence, that henceforth economic well being and security, that health and education and decent living standards, are among our inalienable rights.

Every man and woman was entitled to the full benefit of the best in medicine, he added, striking an old theme. Every child was entitled to a first-rate education. There should be no economic worries for the elderly in their declining years.

"Give 'em hell, Harricum!" the students of Oxford called from their windows as he departed.

A still more dazzling white-tie dinner followed the next night in London, at the Savoy—the annual stag dinner of the Pilgrims, the leading Anglo-American society dedicated to maintaining close ties between the two nations. And again Truman was a triumph, Lord Halifax paying him what to most present was the ultimate compliment. "I think we in this room feel that you are the sort of chap with whom all of us would be quite happy to go tiger hunting."

He had been getting along very well in England, Truman said, at the start of his remarks. So far, he had not needed an interpreter.

"A good many of the difficulties between our two countries," he continued, "spring not from our differences but from the fact that we are so much alike. . . . Another problem we have . . . is that in election years we behave somewhat as primitive peoples do at the time of the full moon." But the essence of his warning was that "a great, serene and peaceful future can slip from us quite as irrevocably by neglect, division and inaction, as by spectacular disaster." He hoped that both nations would never become careless about "our strength and our unity."

And—not least of all—let us escape from this modern idea of the mass psychologists that we should be guided not by what we honestly

Dear Mr. Podesta:

Allow me to introduce myself in a rather roundabout fashion. My husband is Bob Thibeault and Bob's uncle is Leo Orlowski, who lives on Austin Ave. in good old Chicago. As you probably remember, Uncle Leo and your Dad drove to work together for quite a few years. Bob and I were visiting Uncle Leo when your name came up and he suggested that I drop you a note. All is well in the Orlowski family although Aunt Adeline underwent heart surgery recently. Fortunately she is recovering nicely.

Since 1987 I have owned and operated my business and, being a lifelong active Democrat, I currently volunteer one day a week in the Agency Liaison Office at OEOB to contribute in any way possible to the success of this Administration. I know that you are unbelievably busy, but if you could spare a few minutes I would appreciate having the opportunity to meet you. I know that Uncle Leo would be thrilled to think that you remember him from years gone by.

Thanks for your time and keep up the great work!

I saw you on CNN yesterday. I can't imagine what it must feel like to sit in front of the Dias - and to answer dopey questions from low-life Republican House Members. You were fabulous! I especially liked the dig at Republican efforts to gut the FOIA.

One question: I watched (most of the day's hearing. Is it just me (exposed to the L.A. Times version of the ads/news) or is it a fact that hardly anyone in America understands (or cares) what the Republicans are going on about??

I've heard from some of our old friends (like Bruce Selman) that everything is going well for you. Please call if you get to California (310-275-4477)

Dear John,

It was so good to see you, both at the President's birthday party and at your office the next day.

As I indicated to you, the Executive Committee of the Association of Democratic Chairs has voted to hold its Fall official meeting in Athens, Greece. The decision was made in honor of the 2500 year anniversary of the birth of democracy.

President Jim Brady appointed me chairman of the event with Ohio State Democratic Party chairman and Executive Committee member Harry Meshel and Senior Legal Counsel to the Committee Mike Pannos serving as Co-Chairs. As you know, both are fellow Greek Americans.

// You will receive from President Brady an official invitation to address the Executive Committee in Athens when it officially holds its meeting in Athens on Tuesday, September 21, 1993.

The schedule runs as follows: The Committee leaves New York via Olympic Air on Saturday evening, September 18, 1993, and will arrive in Athens on Sunday, September 19. We return on Sunday, September 26. The official business of the committee will start on Tuesday morning at 10:00 a.m. at Pnyx (the site where the Athenians celebrated the creation of democracy 2500 years ago). It would be just great to have you address the Committee at that time, later that day, or the next day.

Also attending the meeting in Greece will be Kathy Vick, secretary to the Democratic National Committee and Vice Chairs Lottie Shackleford and Martha Love, along with several other state chairs and vice chairs who are not members of the Executive Committee. The group will total 35 in all.

John, it would be great to have you for the entire week, or a portion of it. I hope things can be worked out so you can join us.

Let's keep in touch.

Warm personal regards,

Dear John:

On behalf of the Association of State Democratic Chairs and its executive committee, I invite you to speak to the Association's Executive Committee at its Fall meeting in Athens, Greece on Tuesday, September 21st, 1993.

The Executive Committee is holding this meeting in Greece in honor of the 2500 year anniversary of the birth of democracy. We felt that it was appropriate to meet where this form Government originated. We will begin our official business meeting at 10:00 a.m. on the 21st at the Pnyx (the site where the Athenians dedicated the formulation of democratic government 2500 years ago.)

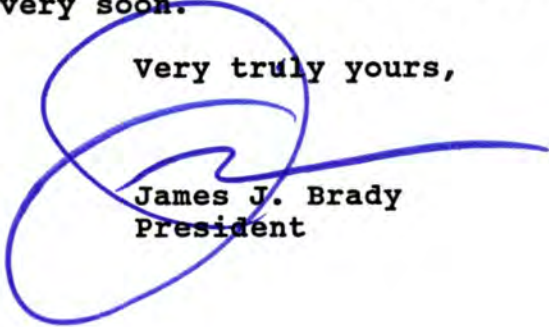

As a leading Greek American, and as a top advisor to President Clinton, it would be extremely beneficial to the committee to have you present and to hear your views on issues of mutual concern. Obviously we feel that your presence and participation in this event will go a long way in making our visit to Greece a good one, and it would be a great gesture of good will to our many friends in Greece as well.

I know that you have been briefed by Chairman Chris Spirou on some of the details of our visit and your attendance. I stand ready to provide you with any additional information you may need and the Association of State Democratic Chairs will, of course, defray all of your expenses incident to your participation in our meeting.

Dear Mr. President:

I am taking the liberty of asking John Podesta to ask you to sign this picture for me. I am most proud to have it and will be prouder still with a signed photograph! The place on my studio wall is ready and waiting. I would greatly appreciate your taking the time out of a schedule that I cannot even imagine.

I have just watched the last day of Judge Ginsburg's confirmation hearings. Your choice of this clearly remarkable person is one that I am sure America will long be grateful to you for. I then switched channels to the Jocelyn Edlers hearing and again, was moved and yes, thrilled to feel the winds of change blowing. With this new Supreme Court Justice, the new Surgeon General and of course, the brilliant appointment of Janet Reno, no matter what other disappointments and roadblocks may be placed in your way, these three additions to our government are achievements that will resonate and redound to your accomplishments for years, perhaps generations to come. As a mother, a civil and women's rights activist, an artist, as an American - I thank you.

I had the great pleasure of seeing Mrs. Clinton twice on her visit to Los Angeles this week. In the list of remarkable women who will make historic change, she most certainly must have a prominent place.

My sincere condolences to you and Mrs. Clinton on the loss of your friend. Alan joins me in sending you our warm regards.

Dear John:

As incoming Chair of the ABA Section of Individual Rights and Responsibilities, I would like to invite you to co-chair the Section's Committee on Privacy for the 1993-94 ABA year.

The Section officers and Council greatly appreciate the contributions you have made to date as committee co-chair. In the coming year, as we implement the Section's long-range plan, we want to work with you to further develop your committee's activities and to initiate some cooperative projects among committees. With your leadership, we believe, your committee also can help ensure that the Section and the ABA address priority issues in a timely and effective way.

Serving as a committee chair of course does require some commitment of time and effort, both in developing activities and cultivating active members. But committees are the heart of the Section; most of the Section's many achievements over the years have been attributable to strong and persuasive committee leadership. We hope that you will be able to help continue that tradition by accepting this appointment.

I encourage you to call me (202/861-3900) or Section Director Penny Wakefield (202/331-2280) if you have any questions about Section or committee directions for the coming year. Please also return the enclosed form at your earliest convenience, but no later than Friday, July 16, so that we can have the most complete listing possible of the Section leadership in the ABA's 1993-94 "Redbook."

In other recent mailings, you have received information about planned Section events, including the Aug. 7 Thurgood Marshall Award Dinner and the Aug. 8 Breakfast Meeting of Committee Chairs, at the ABA's Annual Meeting in New York City in August. I hope that you will be able to attend these and other events. Please note that the deadline for receipt of committee reports and other agenda book items is Friday, July 23.

I look forward to the possibility of seeing you in New York and working with you in the coming year.

Dear John:

I read in the Post that you have undertaken to unravel the Travel Office incident. (I wish the press would stop using the suffix "gate" for every flap; it cheapens the language like bad money cheapens the currency.) I'm sure that if scandal lurks there you will uncover it, but from here it looks only like terminal dumbness. I don't smell the foul breath of corruption, and I think my nose still is sensitive to such even after nearly twenty years.

When you catch your breath and want the critical outside perspective of an observer who fervently wants the President to succeed, give me a call. A lot of us middle-aged straight white undisabled old-style liberal males are rooting for you.

Best,

William A. Dobrovir
