

Chron

8-31-98

Thank You Letter From Florida State Sen. Daryl Jones -- Although his nomination to be Secretary of the Air Force "was not what we planned." Jones thanks you and adds that "[i]t won't happen that way again should another opportunity arise." He offers his support as you remain "focused on getting your job done."

Berger Memo on Marine Recruit Case -- During your Chavez event in Santa Fe last month, a Marine recruit from Basic Training informed him. NSC asked General Krulak added that the failed induction four times that the recruit is now a person. Sandy recommended

Tab B - copied page 4 of cover memo, Forges letter & Romero Barcelo letter to Bowles, Greenberger (original letters returned to Greenberger w/ copies to ORM)

We have also received the following:

New York Times, USA forwards a recent NY Times many of which were increased forest pests USA Today article de:

The melting of glaciers worldwide is "among the most compelling indicators of global warming." Alaska and Montana are the two states most affected. Todd has seen the articles.

Tab E - copied page 2 of cover, memo and Jones letter to Bowles, Podesta, Burkhardt

9-1-98

Burkhardt
for Reply

8-31-98

Thank You Letter From Florida State Sen. Daryl Jones -- Although his nomination to be Secretary of the Air Force "was not what we planned," Jones thanks you and adds that "[i]t won't happen that way again should another opportunity arise." He offers his support as you remain "focused on getting your job done."

Berger Memo on Marine Recruit Case -- During your Chavez event in Santa Fe last month, a Marine recruit handed you a letter claiming that he had been unfairly discharged from Basic Training in 1997 on medical disability grounds after a Drill Sergeant "struck" him. NSC asked General Krulak to look into the matter. He reported that the recruit failed induction four times between 1988 and 1997 for medical or personal reasons. Krulak added that the Drill Sergeant's actions were proper, the contact was incidental and that the recruit is now too old to enlist. Krulak strongly urges us "to be wary" of this person. Sandy recommends that no further action be taken on the case.

We have also received the following item:

New York Times, USA Today Global Warming Articles -- Rosina Bierbaum (OSTP) forwards a recent NYT article describing the effects of rising temperatures in Alaska, many of which were identified in a 1997 OSTP workshop (e.g., decreased sea ice, increased forest pests and precipitation, and melting permafrost). She also forwards a USA Today article describing the significant retreat of the Columbia Glacier in Alaska. The melting of glaciers worldwide is "among the most compelling indicators of global warming." Alaska and Montana are the two states most affected. Todd has seen the articles.

213/1000
we need to do something for him
3 Aug 93
7c

SENATOR DARYL L. JONES

Dear Mr. President,

Thank you again for making me your nominee for Secretary of the Air Force. Sincerely, it was a great honor for me. I appreciate your support and that of your staff.

Although the result was not what we planned, it was a tremendous educational experience for me. It won't happen that way again should another opportunity arise.

You are facing significant challenges. Don't let the media center on the negative. You have remained focused on getting your job done. The American people appreciate that and, I believe, in the end will support you because of it.

Warmest regards,
King

copied
Sperling
Reed
Jennings
Bowles

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON
August 31, 1998

THE PRESIDENT HAS SEEN
9/1/98

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: PHILLIP CAPLAN (W)

SUBJECT: Long-term care initiative

The attached Sperling/Reed/Jennings memo seeks your approval of a package of recommendations on a long-term care initiative. At your request, NEC/DPC ran a policy process to explore how such a package could be added to the Administration's tax cut package. The initiative would be fully paid for by postponing or modifying some of our tax cut proposals, or adding additional offsets.

All of your advisors agree on the components of the initiative, which include:

Long-term care tax credit: broad-based, non-refundable $500 tax credit for people with long-term care needs (defined as those having two or more limitations, e.g. bathing, dressing, toileting, etc.), or for families who house and care for such relatives. The credit would be given on the basis of illness, rather than expenses, in order to capture people who receive unpaid long-term care and would help 3.4 million people and cost $3.9 billion over five years. The memo includes a discussion of whether the credit should be (i) larger ($1000) and cover less people, and/or (ii) refundable, but your advisors agree on the credit as outlined.

Tax credit for impairment-related work expenses for people with disabilities: $5000 tax credit for personal and medical care expenses incurred at the workplace -- such expenses are often a pre-condition for the disabled to leave home for work.

Private long-term care insurance for federal workers: there would be no government contribution for this coverage, but OPM would set standards for the plans and sort them into benefit classes to facilitate informed choice. This would be viewed as a small but symbolic step.

☒ Approve ☐ Disapprove ☐ Discuss

Timing: There is a question of whether to announce this package in mid- to late-September, or to hold it for sometime later (NEC/DPC prefer to hold the $5000 impairment-related tax credit component for the State of the Union). While announcing the package soon would put you in a leadership position on this issue, it could also generate momentum for the Republican tax cut efforts; Hill Democrats think that inaction on the tax cut front is a good thing at this point. The memo includes a lengthy discussion of whether to announce now or wait, but bottom line: your advisors will come back to you on the timing issue in a couple of weeks once they have a better sense of how it would play on the Hill.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

THE PRESIDENT HAS SEEN

9/1/98

August 11, 1998

98 AUG 11 11:07

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: GENE SPERLING
BRUCE REED
CHRIS JENNINGS

SUBJECT: LONG-TERM CARE INITIATIVE

cc. THE VICE PRESIDENT, ERSKINE BOWLES, ROBERT RUBIN,
JACK LEW, SYLVIA MATTHEWS, JANET YELLEN, MARIA
ECHAVESTE, JOHN PODESTA, RON KLAIN, LARRY STEIN,
RAHM EMANUEL, PAUL BEGALA, ELENA KAGAN

Per your request, an interagency NEC/DPC process examined long-term care policy options, specifically how long-term care options could be added to our tax cut package. This memo summarizes our recommendations on both the best policy and the advisability of announcing such an initiative in August or September or waiting until the State of the Union.

We developed a long-term care initiative that both assists people who provide or pay for long-term care and encourages workers to purchase high-quality, private long-term care insurance. The centerpiece of the initiative is a broad-based, non-refundable tax credit for people with long-term care needs or for families who house and care for such relatives. The credit could help defray the costs of formal care (e.g., home health care) and informal care (e.g., assisting parents who are bed-ridden). Second, to complement the ongoing work of your Task Force on the Employment of Adults with Disabilities, we could introduce a tax credit of up to $5,000 for impairment-related work expenses incurred by disabled individuals. Third, we could announce support for offering private long-term care insurance to Federal employees, which would have virtually no costs and bipartisan support. The long-term care tax options cost a total of $4 billion over 5 years and $14 billion over 10 years, and would be fully funded by savings from postponing or modifying our budget revenue proposals, plus a few offsets that were in the Senate IRS bill, but that were not included in the final bill, or in your FY 1998 budget.

The timing of an announcement of a long-term care initiative in a modified tax package depends on a number of factors that will be discussed later in the memo.

BACKGROUND

This policy initiative is motivated by an interest to address long-term care and issues facing the chronically ill, particularly the elderly.

Unlike Social Security and Medicare, long-term care has received little attention. Republicans have begun to raise policy options (e.g., MSAs for long-term care in their Patient Protection Act), but not aggressively. Along with the lack of coverage of prescription drugs, the poor coverage of long-term care represents a major concern for the elderly and their families. Medicare pays for only a limited amount of long-term care, and private insurance even less -- only 10 percent of home health care and 5 percent of nursing home care. As a result, long-term care costs account for nearly half of all out-of-pocket health expenditures for Medicare beneficiaries.

Concern about long-term care costs is not limited to the elderly and people with disabilities. Their children, other relatives and friends provide a large amount of formal and informal long-term care. According to an HHS study that has not yet been released, one in three Americans voluntarily provide some unpaid informal care to an ill or disabled family member or friend. Over 90 percent of people with three or more limitations in activities of daily living (ADLs) living in the community receive some kind of informal care, most often from a spouse or relative. This means that middle-class families may find themselves caring both for their parents and their children.

A second motivation for this initiative is to make our targeted tax cut package include a more progressive, senior-focused tax option. Most people with long-term care needs have lower incomes. For example, the poverty rate for the elderly with two or more limitations in ADLs is twice as high as the rate for all elderly.

POLICIES

The proposed long-term care initiative would consist of three policies: two new tax credits plus offering quality private long-term care insurance to federal workers. Savings to pay for this initiative would come from new offsets and savings from postponing or modifying our existing tax cut proposals.

1. Long-term care tax credit

The centerpiece of the long-term care initiative would be a tax credit for people with long-term care needs or the families who house and care for such relatives. A $500, non-refundable credit would cost $3.9 billion over 5 years and $12.4 billion over 10 years (according to preliminary Treasury estimates) and would help a total of 3.4 million chronically ill individuals (described below). People with long-term care needs are defined as having two or more limitations in ADLs (bathing, dressing, eating, toileting, transferring and incontinence management) lasting for longer than six months or severe cognitive impairment, as certified by a doctor. Virtually all people who meet these criteria need some type of long-term care. The credit would be given on the basis of illness rather than expenses because, otherwise, it would not help people who receive unpaid long-term care. For example, a wife who cares for her husband herself rather than paying someone to do it would not receive a credit if it were based on receipts for long-term care expenses. This approach is also easier to administer than alternatives. About 1.7 million chronically ill individuals would directly get this credit on their own tax returns.

Certain families with "dependents" with long-term care needs could also receive the credit. Under current law, adults can be claimed by tax filers as dependents if they are related, have very low income, and receive at least half of their support from the tax payer (among other criteria). Adult dependents are generally not required to file tax returns themselves. For the purpose of this credit, we would broaden the definition of a "dependent" to include a person who needs long-term care (described above), lives with the family member, and generally does not have any income tax liability. Because by definition they live in the community, dependents are rarely nursing home residents. Simply stated, this allows families (other than spouses) who house and care for relatives needing long-term care to apply for the credit on their behalf. This improves the ability of the credit to help people who do not have enough income to file tax returns, although it does not help the elderly with no tax liability living alone or outside of their relatives' homes. Another 1.7 million families would get the credit in this way.

Over half of the chronically ill individuals benefiting from this credit are elderly, since the need for long-term care increases with age. Preliminary conversations with aging advocates suggest that this tax credit would be well received. However, private long-term care insurers could oppose the credit for fear that it will decrease interest in insurance since people may think that the credit protects them against long-term care costs.

Key Issues

Should the credit be refundable? A large proportion of people with long-term care needs are low-income and do not have tax liability. Refundability could improve the effectiveness of this policy at reaching its target population.

Pro:

- An additional several hundred thousand people would benefit from the credit if it were refundable, and, for those with a low tax liability, they would get the full amount of the credit.

Cons:

- It adds complexity to the policy because it creates a need to exclude certain groups. A large number of non-filers with long-term care needs are already receiving assistance through SSI and Medicaid if in a nursing home. Because a refundable credit would count against their eligibility for these programs, it makes sense to exclude them from the credit. However, this would be difficult, administratively and politically.
- It could jeopardize the initiative. Although we have been successful in our support for the refundability of the E.I.T.C. despite the strong Republican opposition, adding another refundable credit could risk the passage of the initiative and potentially undermine support for existing refundable credits as well.

9-1-98

- This proposal, as a refundable credit, may not be administrable at acceptable levels of compliance and intrusiveness.

Should we give a larger credit to few people or a smaller credit to more people? If we make the definition of needing long-term care stricter (i.e., three or more ADL limitations as opposed to two), fewer people would be eligible but we could increase the credit amount within the budget constraints.

Pros:

- Raising the credit amount to $1,000 would make the amount more meaningful. For example, it is enough to purchase a few hours of respite care per week.
- Eligibility based on two or more limitations in ADLs could be more subject to fraud, since it is a less strict standard.

Con:

- Even with $500 credit and the broader definition of needing long-term care, the policy helps a subset of the people who need long-term care or their families. According to one estimate, about 50 million Americans provide some type of informal long-term care to family and friends.
- Because most people meeting the stricter definition (three plus limitations in ADLs) are ill enough to require institutionalization, even a $1,000 may be perceived as being too small relative to the larger costs incurred by these people and their family.

2. Tax credit for impairment-related work expenses for people with disabilities

To complement the work of the Task Force on Employment of Adults with Disabilities, people with disabilities could receive a new tax credit of up to $5,000 for their impairment-related work expenses. This credit could be used to offset expenses for personal care in the workplace, for example, which is often a pre-condition for leaving home for work. A similar credit was in the Health Security Act and a Republican "return-to-work" proposal this year. It costs about $500 million over 5 years, $1.2 billion over 10 years, and helps about 300,000.

Key Issue

Should this credit remain as part of the long-term care initiative or be saved for a separate announcement? Although this credit can be considered a long-term care policy, it also fits in the context of return-to-work policies for people with disabilities and could be announced by itself or in the State of the Union.

Pro:

- 9-1-98
- Omission of a policy for people with disabilities within a long-term care initiative would be noticed. There is a heightened attention to disability issues both in Congress and the community, and especially close attention is being paid to Administration actions. Even the aging advocates support including people with disabilities to avoid this criticism.

Cons:

- The disability community seems happy with the Administration's work on the Jeffords-Kennedy legislation, so that an additional policy at this point may not be needed.
- Since we do not exclude people under age 65 from the long-term care tax credit, we would be helping people with more severe disabilities even if we dropped this specific credit. The overlap between the two credits, however, may be low.

3. Offering private long-term care insurance to Federal workers

 The third piece of the initiative is the small but symbolic non-tax option to offer Federal employees and annuitants a range of high-quality private long-term care insurance policies. There would be no Federal contribution for this coverage, but Office of Personnel Management (OPM) would set standards for the plans and sort them into benefit classes (e.g., "core" policy plus several types of "enhanced" policies) to facilitate informed choice. A seriously flawed bill to allow a open-ended long-term care insurance option was introduced by Representative Mica (R-FL) last week. Democratic members of the Civil Service Subcommittee, plus some Republicans (e.g., Connie Morrella), have expressed interest in a substitute. Proposing an alternative would add to our series of policies for Federal workers that demonstrates our leadership as a responsible employer.

Key Issues. None on policy grounds, although it is not a tax policy like the others. However, your advisors recommend that we act on this as soon as possible to preempt the Republicans from claiming the policy.

4. Offsets

 This long-term care initiative would cost about $4 billion over 5 years and $14 billion over 10 years. It could be offset by modifying our existing tax package and adding a few new policies. First, we would postpone the effective date of our proposed tax initiatives until January 1, 2000. Given the Year 2000 problem, we would probably have to do so regardless. Second, we would scale back the child and dependent care credit (make it a 40 percent credit as opposed to 50 percent and slow the phase-down). Third, we would add two new policies that were in the Senate IRS package, but weren't included in the final bill and that were in your FY 1998 budget. The first is to modify the Foreign Tax Credit carryover rules; the second is to reform the treatment of Foreign Oil and Gas Income and dual capacity taxpayers.

THE PRESIDENT HAS SPOKE

9-1-98

Key Issues. None on policy grounds, although like any offsets, they are not universally liked.

RECOMMENDATIONS. Your advisors (Chief of Staff, Office of the Vice President, NEC, DPC, CEA, Legislative Affairs, Treasury and OMB) generally agree on all of the components of this long-term care initiative. On the issue of refundability of the long-term care tax credit, we recommend against it. In particular, NEC, DPC Treasury and Legislative Affairs fear that making the credit refundable could spur an overall attack against refundability and jeopardize the gains that we have made on the E.I.T.C. It does, however, leave us somewhat vulnerable to criticisms that it is regressive. We suggest responding to this concern by stating that we are willing to work with Congress to make this credit more progressive. There is also agreement choose a broader definition of eligibility (two plus limitations in ADLs) even though we would have to lower the credit to make it affordable. This could help broaden the base of support for the initiative. Finally, even though the credit for people with disabilities could be part of the long-term care package, we recommend making it a separate announcement. NEC/DPC think that this credit might be best announced in the State of the Union, since it is likely to be recommended by the Task Force's November report and such an announcement would be viewed as acting on that recommendation.

Long-term care tax credit:

- ☒ Include refundable credit
☒ Include non-refundable credit (RECOMMENDED)
☐ Do not include in the package

Tax credit for impairment-related expenses for people with disabilities:

- ☒ Include tax credit for people with disabilities
☒ Do not include in the package (RECOMMENDED)

Offering private long-term care insurance to federal employees:

- ☒ Include in package (RECOMMENDED)
☐ Do not include in the package

☐ Discuss some or all options further

ISSUES RELATED TO THE TIMING OF AN ANNOUNCEMENT

Assuming that the long-term care initiative and modified tax cut package are acceptable on policy grounds, the next question is about timing of an announcement. The following outlines the pros and cons of announcing this initiative in August or early September.

Pros:

- Secures ownership of the long-term care issue. A strong, affirmative long-term care message would not only be popular amongst the elderly, people with disabilities and most advocacy groups, but it would probably be well received by validators who think that this is the great, untouched baby-boom issue. This could complement and affirm your leadership on major, societal issues facing the country in the next century.

- Provides an alternative to private long-term care insurance and MSAs as the only solution to the problem. In September, the Republicans will probably take up the Mica federal employees' private long-term care insurance proposal and the Senate Patient Bill of Rights legislation that expands MSAs to include long-term care expenses. The mainstream advocates are concerned about the singular focus on private long-term care insurance and MSAs, since they will not come close to covering the costs of long-term care. Even the insurance industry, in its most optimistic projections, does not foresee that private insurance will cover even half of long-term care costs in thirty years. However, in the absence of alternatives, some may feel some pressure to support the Republicans' proposals.
- Confirms our support for responsible tax cuts. Presenting a tax cut package with explicit offsets would reaffirm that we support tax cuts, so long as they are paid for. As such, it could complement our Save Social Security First message. These credits also are attractive alternatives to some of the Republican proposals, since they focus on the elderly and people with disabilities who have lower income.

Cons:

- Could provide impetus for an unacceptable tax cut this year. The proposal would come at a time when Congressional Democrats, especially in the House, see the Social Security First message as strong and simple. They would probably perceive a new tax package as clouding that message. Also, Gingrich has been musing about settling for a tax cut this year of $70 billion or even less, so that our announcement of a revised tax package of about $30 billion could be read as a sign that we are willing to deal with the Republicans on their tax package in September and make our rule of not using the surplus less clear as well. Finally, given that our revenue raising provisions are unpopular on the Hill, an announcement with an attractive set of options could increase the chances of a tax cut that taps the surplus.
- Democrats may prefer marriage penalty regardless. The new package could have somewhat limited value for Congressional Democrats because it does not include marriage penalty relief, which is their main concern.
- May appear political and not receive the attention and validation that it deserves. Since it is unusual to propose policies with budget implications outside of the State of the Union and Budget process, the timing of the announcement, rather than the substance of it, may be what the press focuses on.

9-1-98

RECOMMENDATIONS. Your advisors generally do not recommend an August or early September announcement. The importance of this initiative to your overall policy agenda would probably be obscured by a media focused on the timing. Moreover, Republicans could seize on the announcement to generate momentum in September for their tax package or one that uses the surplus. It appears, at this point, that Democrats think that inaction on the tax front is a good outcome for them.

~~However, we think that the question of timing should be revisited in mid-September.~~ At that point, we will have a better sense of the potential ramifications of the announcement for Congress. We can also assess when and how we can make this announcement so it clearly gets the attention it deserves and puts you in a leadership role on this important issue.

☐ Announce in August or early September

☒ Revisit timing decision in mid-September (RECOMMENDED)

☐ Discuss further

5608

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

THE PRESIDENT HAS SEEN

9/1/98

98 AUG 19 05:11

August 19, 1998

ACTION

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: SAMUEL BERGER for
MARIA ECHAVESTE ME
STEPHANIE STREETT SS
CAPRICIA MARSHALL CM

Berger
Echaveste
Streett
Marshall
Bowles
winning desk

SUBJECT: April 1999 NATO Summit Schedule

Purpose

To obtain your approval for the notional 1999 NATO Summit schedule.

Background

Planning for the April 1999 NATO Summit in Washington is well under way. Don Kerrick has been chairing Steering Committee meetings to guide the process. The next step requires us to present a notional schedule to the North Atlantic Council (NAC) in Brussels next month. We request that you approve the schedule at Tab A by August 31st.

All of the event sites are at the Federal Triangle -- within walking distance of one another (Tab B). Delegation office space will be in the Old Customs Office Building. Ministerial-level lunches will be held in the ICC Hearing Rooms.

Highlights of each day include:

Friday, April 23

- 50th anniversary commemorative event in the Mellon Auditorium
- You and the First Lady will host NAC Leaders and their spouses at the White House that evening.

*For Don Kerrick
Capricia Marshall
but isn't there a better setting? For minimum
Graham Place
Not Viewed
Graham Place*

Saturday, April 24

9-1-98

- NAC Summit meetings and working lunch
- We are holding Saturday afternoon for possible meetings of the NATO-Russia Permanent Joint Council and/or NATO-Ukraine Council.
- You and the First Lady will host a large dinner on the South Grounds for the NATO and "partner" leaders (44 in all), their foreign and defense ministers, their permanent representatives, Secretary General Solana and his key staff, Members of Congress and other notables.

Sunday, April 25

- Meeting and working lunch for the 44 nation Euro-Atlantic Partnership Council (EAPC)
- Closing press conference

RECOMMENDATION

That you approve the attached schedule so that we can send it to Ambassador Vershbow to present to the NAC next month.

Approve

Disapprove _____

Attachments

Tab A Proposed Summit Schedule
Tab B Map of Federal Triangle

9/1/98

99 AUG 31 4:49:10

HARVARD LAW SCHOOL
CAMBRIDGE MA 02138

August 25, 1998

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

From: Christopher Edley, Jr
Professor of Law

CEJ

Copied
Echaveste
Bowles

Through: Maria Echaveste
Deputy Chief of Staff

Re: Terry Edmonds

It is only 98 days until our target date for completion of your book on race. Creating a document with intellectual ambition, moral force and lasting importance seems a daunting task, but I still believe we can do it. And I hope you still believe that we must try.

Our chances will improve if I can have more latitude to concentrate my own efforts on getting the ideas right – working closely with the policy councils, the core group you identified (Echaveste, Blumenthal, Kagan), the Vice President, the First Lady and yourself. What gives me pause is the challenge of translating the ideas and reasoning into your voice, making the text both thoughtful and accessible, rich both with analysis and with the personal stories that will make it come alive and connect with the audience. I could do it (probably), but it would be tough and time consuming.

I do not believe it is feasible to draft the book and then give it to Michael Waldman & Co. to rewrite. Waldman fears that, because of the workload implications. I fear it because I don't want to relitigate the conceptual issues during the translation process. Michael, like other senior staff, will have ample opportunity to weigh in as the work proceeds. And it would be frustrating for you to read drafts that just "sound" wrong, however good the ideas.

Therefore, I recommend we use Terry Edmonds to help with the writing, as a detailee from the Social Security Administration. I've spoken with Terry, who is very excited about the idea. He is confident that Ken Apfel would be supportive. Terry could do much of the work at home in Baltimore, with occasional trips to D.C.. The technology will work for us.

By the way: Terry reports that his wife is steadily improving, though still impaired. Terry sounds in good spirits, but it only takes a little questioning to get the sense that the situation remains emotionally very difficult for both of them. She faces more surgery soon, and they are trying to decide whether she should file for disability. All that said, Terry gushed with enthusiasm about working with me (which was flattering), and believes deeply in the importance of the project.

☒ APPROVE

☐ DISAPPROVE

☐ DISCUSS

id in the ICC Hearing

*Flour
Coke
Soy*

better 'swt than a sour gause? FOR MEMBERS

ent in the Mellon

NAC Leaders and their vening.

*AT MEXICO
Sour gause
Gause*

THE WHITE HOUSE
9/1/98

5608

Saturday, April 24

- NAC Summit meetings and working lunch
- We are holding Saturday afternoon for possible meetings of the NATO-Russia Permanent Joint Council and/or NATO-Ukraine Council.
- You and the First Lady will host a large dinner on the South Grounds for the NATO and "partner" leaders (44 in all), their foreign and defense ministers, their permanent representatives, Secretary General Solana and his key staff, Members of Congress and other notables.

Sunday, April 25

- Meeting and working lunch for the 44 nation Euro-Atlantic Partnership Council (EAPC)
- Closing press conference

RECOMMENDATION

That you approve the attached schedule so that we can send it to Ambassador Vershbow to present to the NAC next month.

Approve

Disapprove _____

Attachments

Tab A Proposed Summit Schedule
Tab B Map of Federal Triangle

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

August 31, 1998

THE WHITE HOUSE

9/1/98

copied
Sperling
Reed
Jennings
Bowles

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: PHILLIP CAPLAN (W)

SUBJECT: Long-term care initiative

The attached Sperling/Reed/Jennings memo seeks your approval of a package of recommendations on a long-term care initiative. At your request, NEC/DPC ran a policy to explore how such a package could be added to the Administration's tax cut package. The initiative would be fully paid for by postponing or modifying some of our tax cut proposals, or adding additional offsets.

All of your advisors agree on the components of the initiative, which include:

Long-term care tax credit: broad-based, non-refundable $500 tax credit for people with long-term care needs (defined as those having two or more limitations, e.g. bathing, dressing, toileting, etc.), or for families who house and care for such relatives. The credit would be given on the basis of illness, rather than expenses, in order to capture people who receive unpaid long-term care and would help 3.4 million people and cost $3.9 billion over five years. The memo includes a discussion of whether the credit should be (i) larger ($1000) and cover less people, and/or (ii) refundable, but your advisors agree on the credit as outlined.

Tax credit for impairment-related work expenses for people with disabilities: $5000 tax credit for personal and medical care expenses incurred at the workplace -- such expenses are often a precondition for the disabled to leave home for work.

Private long-term care insurance for federal workers: there would be no government contribution for this coverage, but OPM would set standards for the plans and sort them into benefit classes to facilitate informed choice. This would be viewed as a small but symbolic step.

☒ Approve ☐ Disapprove ☐ Discuss

Timing: There is a question of whether to announce this package in mid- to late-September, or to hold it for ~~some time later~~ (NEC/DPC prefer to hold the $5000 impairment-related tax credit component for the State of the Union). While announcing the package soon would put you in a leadership position on this issue, it could also generate momentum for the Republican tax cut efforts; Hill Democrats think that inaction on the tax cut front is a good thing at this point. The memo includes a lengthy discussion of whether to announce now or wait, but bottom line: your advisors will come back to you on the timing issue in a couple of weeks once they have a better sense of how it would play on the Hill.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

9/1/98

August 11, 1998

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: GENE SPERLING
BRUCE REED
CHRIS JENNINGS

SUBJECT: LONG-TERM CARE INITIATIVE

cc. THE VICE PRESIDENT, ERSKINE BOWLES, ROBERT RUBIN,
JACK LEW, SYLVIA MATTHEWS, JANET YELLEN, MARIA
ECHAVESTE, JOHN PODESTA, RON KLAIN, LARRY STEIN,
RAHM EMANUEL, PAUL BEGALA, ELENA KAGAN

Per your request, an interagency NEC/DPC process examined long-term care policy options, specifically how long-term care options could be added to our tax cut package. This memo summarizes our recommendations on both the best policy and the advisability of announcing such an initiative in August or September or waiting until the State of the Union.

We developed a long-term care initiative that both assists people who provide or pay for long-term care and encourages workers to purchase high-quality, private long-term care insurance. The centerpiece of the initiative is a broad-based, non-refundable tax credit for people with long-term care needs or for families who house and care for such relatives. The credit could help defray the costs of formal care (e.g., home health care) and informal care (e.g., assisting parents who are bed-ridden). Second, to complement the ongoing work of your Task Force on the Employment of Adults with Disabilities, we could introduce a tax credit of up to $5,000 for impairment-related work expenses incurred by disabled individuals. Third, we could announce support for offering private long-term care insurance to Federal employees, which would have virtually no costs and bipartisan support. The long-term care tax options cost a total of $4 billion over 5 years and $14 billion over 10 years, and would be fully funded by savings from postponing or modifying our budget revenue proposals, plus a few offsets that were in the Senate IRS bill, but that were not included in the final bill, or in your FY 1998 budget.

The timing of an announcement of a long-term care initiative in a modified tax package depends on a number of factors that will be discussed later in the memo.

BACKGROUND

This policy initiative is motivated by an interest to address long-term care and issues facing the chronically ill, particularly the elderly.

Unlike Social Security and Medicare, long-term care has received little attention. Republicans have begun to raise policy options (e.g., MSAs for long-term care in their Patient Protection Act), but not aggressively. Along with the lack of coverage of prescription drugs, the poor coverage of long-term care represents a major concern for the elderly and their families. Medicare pays for only a limited amount of long-term care, and private insurance even less -- only 10 percent of home health care and 5 percent of nursing home care. As a result, long-term care costs account for nearly half of all out-of-pocket health expenditures for Medicare beneficiaries.

Concern about long-term care costs is not limited to the elderly and people with disabilities. Their children, other relatives and friends provide a large amount of formal and informal long-term care. According to an HHS study that has not yet been released, one in three Americans voluntarily provide some unpaid informal care to an ill or disabled family member or friend. Over 90 percent of people with three or more limitations in activities of daily living (ADLs) living in the community receive some kind of informal care, most often from a spouse or relative. This means that middle-class families may find themselves caring both for their parents and their children.

A second motivation for this initiative is to make our targeted tax cut package include a more progressive, senior-focused tax option. Most people with long-term care needs have lower incomes. For example, the poverty rate for the elderly with two or more limitations in ADLs is twice as high as the rate for all elderly.

POLICIES

The proposed long-term care initiative would consist of three policies: two new tax credits plus offering quality private long-term care insurance to federal workers. Savings to pay for this initiative would come from new offsets and savings from postponing or modifying our existing tax cut proposals.

1. Long-term care tax credit

The centerpiece of the long-term care initiative would be a tax credit for people with long-term care needs or the families who house and care for such relatives. A $500, non-refundable credit would cost $3.9 billion over 5 years and $12.4 billion over 10 years (according to preliminary Treasury estimates) and would help a total of 3.4 million chronically ill individuals (described below). People with long-term care needs are defined as having two or more limitations in ADLs (bathing, dressing, eating, toileting, transferring and incontinence management) lasting for longer than six months or severe cognitive impairment, as certified by a doctor. Virtually all people who meet these criteria need some type of long-term care. The credit would be given on the basis of illness rather than expenses because, otherwise, it would not help people who receive unpaid long-term care. For example, a wife who cares for her husband herself rather than paying someone to do it would not receive a credit if it were based on receipts for long-term care expenses. This approach is also easier to administer than alternatives. About 1.7 million chronically ill individuals would directly get this credit on their own tax returns.

Certain families with “dependents” with long-term care needs could also receive the credit. Under current law, adults can be claimed by tax filers as dependents if they are related, have very low income, and receive at least half of their support from the tax payer (among other criteria). Adult dependents are generally not required to file tax returns themselves. For the purpose of this credit, we would broaden the definition of a “dependent” to include a person who needs long-term care (described above), lives with the family member, and generally does not have any income tax liability. Because by definition they live in the community, dependents are rarely nursing home residents. Simply stated, this allows families (other than spouses) who house and care for relatives needing long-term care to apply for the credit on their behalf. This improves the ability of the credit to help people who do not have enough income to file tax returns, although it does not help the elderly with no tax liability living alone or outside of their relatives’ homes. Another 1.7 million families would get the credit in this way.

Over half of the chronically ill individuals benefiting from this credit are elderly, since the need for long-term care increases with age. Preliminary conversations with aging advocates suggest that this tax credit would be well received. However, private long-term care insurers could oppose the credit for fear that it will decrease interest in insurance since people may think that the credit protects them against long-term care costs.

Key Issues

Should the credit be refundable? A large proportion of people with long-term care needs are low-income and do not have tax liability. Refundability could improve the effectiveness of this policy at reaching its target population.

Pro:

- An additional several hundred thousand people would benefit from the credit if it were refundable, and, for those with a low tax liability, they would get the full amount of the credit.

Cons:

- It adds complexity to the policy because it creates a need to exclude certain groups. A large number of non-filers with long-term care needs are already receiving assistance through SSI and Medicaid if in a nursing home. Because a refundable credit would count against their eligibility for these programs, it makes sense to exclude them from the credit. However, this would be difficult, administratively and politically.
- It could jeopardize the initiative. Although we have been successful in our support for the refundability of the E.I.T.C. despite the strong Republican opposition, adding another refundable credit could risk the passage of the initiative and potentially undermine support for existing refundable credits as well.

9-1-98

- This proposal, as a refundable credit, may not be administrable at acceptable levels of compliance and intrusiveness.

Should we give a larger credit to few people or a smaller credit to more people? If we make the definition of needing long-term care stricter (i.e., three or more ADL limitations as opposed to two), fewer people would be eligible but we could increase the credit amount within the budget constraints.

Pros:

- Raising the credit amount to $1,000 would make the amount more meaningful. For example, it is enough to purchase a few hours of respite care per week.
- Eligibility based on two or more limitations in ADLs could be more subject to fraud, since it is a less strict standard.

Con:

- Even with $500 credit and the broader definition of needing long-term care, the policy helps a subset of the people who need long-term care or their families. According to one estimate, about 50 million Americans provide some type of informal long-term care to family and friends.
- Because most people meeting the stricter definition (three plus limitations in ADLs) are ill enough to require institutionalization, even a $1,000 may be perceived as being too small relative to the larger costs incurred by these people and their family.

2. Tax credit for impairment-related work expenses for people with disabilities

To complement the work of the Task Force on Employment of Adults with Disabilities, people with disabilities could receive a new tax credit of up to $5,000 for their impairment-related work expenses. This credit could be used to offset expenses for personal care in the workplace, for example, which is often a pre-condition for leaving home for work. A similar credit was in the Health Security Act and a Republican "return-to-work" proposal this year. It costs about $500 million over 5 years, $1.2 billion over 10 years, and helps about 300,000.

Key Issue

Should this credit remain as part of the long-term care initiative or be saved for a separate announcement? Although this credit can be considered a long-term care policy, it also fits in the context of return-to-work policies for people with disabilities and could be announced by itself or in the State of the Union.

9-1-98

Pro:

- Omission of a policy for people with disabilities within a long-term care initiative would be noticed. There is a heightened attention to disability issues both in Congress and the community, and especially close attention is being paid to Administration actions. Even the aging advocates support including people with disabilities to avoid this criticism.

Cons:

- The disability community seems happy with the Administration's work on the Jeffords-Kennedy legislation, so that an additional policy at this point may not be needed.
- Since we do not exclude people under age 65 from the long-term care tax credit, we would be helping people with more severe disabilities even if we dropped this specific credit. The overlap between the two credits, however, may be low.

3. Offering private long-term care insurance to Federal workers

The third piece of the initiative is the small but symbolic non-tax option to offer Federal employees and annuitants a range of high-quality private long-term care insurance policies. There would be no Federal contribution for this coverage, but Office of Personnel Management (OPM) would set standards for the plans and sort them into benefit classes (e.g., "core" policy plus several types of "enhanced" policies) to facilitate informed choice. A seriously flawed bill to allow a open-ended long-term care insurance option was introduced by Representative Mica (R-FL) last week. Democratic members of the Civil Service Subcommittee, plus some Republicans (e.g., Connie Morrella), have expressed interest in a substitute. Proposing an alternative would add to our series of policies for Federal workers that demonstrates our leadership as a responsible employer.

Key Issues. None on policy grounds, although it is not a tax policy like the others. However, your advisors recommend that we act on this as soon as possible to preempt the Republicans from claiming the policy.

4. Offsets

This long-term care initiative would cost about $4 billion over 5 years and $14 billion over 10 years. It could be offset by modifying our existing tax package and adding a few new policies. First, we would postpone the effective date of our proposed tax initiatives until January 1, 2000. Given the Year 2000 problem, we would probably have to do so regardless. Second, we would scale back the child and dependent care credit (make it a 40 percent credit as opposed to 50 percent and slow the phase-down). Third, we would add two new policies that were in the Senate IRS package, but weren't included in the final bill and that were in your FY 1998 budget. The first is to modify the Foreign Tax Credit carryover rules; the second is to reform the treatment of Foreign Oil and Gas Income and dual capacity taxpayers.

9-1-98

Key Issues. None on policy grounds, although like any offsets, they are not universally liked.

RECOMMENDATIONS. Your advisors (Chief of Staff, Office of the Vice President, NEC, DPC, CEA, Legislative Affairs, Treasury and OMB) generally agree on all of the components of this long-term care initiative. On the issue of refundability of the long-term care tax credit, we recommend against it. In particular, NEC, DPC Treasury and Legislative Affairs fear that making the credit refundable could spur an overall attack against refundability and jeopardize the gains that we have made on the E.I.T.C. It does, however, leave us somewhat vulnerable to criticisms that it is regressive. We suggest responding to this concern by stating that we are willing to work with Congress to make this credit more progressive. There is also agreement choose a broader definition of eligibility (two plus limitations in ADLs) even though we would have to lower the credit to make it affordable. This could help broaden the base of support for the initiative. Finally, even though the credit for people with disabilities could be part of the long-term care package, we recommend making it a separate announcement. NEC/DPC think that this credit might be best announced in the State of the Union, since it is likely to be recommended by the Task Force's November report and such an announcement would be viewed as acting on that recommendation.

Long-term care tax credit:

- ☒ Include refundable credit
- ☒ Include non-refundable credit (RECOMMENDED)
- ☐ Do not include in the package

Tax credit for impairment-related expenses for people with disabilities:

- ☒ Include tax credit for people with disabilities
- ☒ Do not include in the package (RECOMMENDED)

Offering private long-term care insurance to federal employees:

- ☒ Include in package (RECOMMENDED)
- ☐ Do not include in the package

☐ Discuss some or all options further

ISSUES RELATED TO THE TIMING OF AN ANNOUNCEMENT

Assuming that the long-term care initiative and modified tax cut package are acceptable on policy grounds, the next question is about timing of an announcement. The following outlines the pros and cons of announcing this initiative in August or early September.

Pros:

- Secures ownership of the long-term care issue. A strong, affirmative long-term care message would not only be popular amongst the elderly, people with disabilities and most

advocacy groups, but it would probably be well received by validators who think that this is the great, untouched baby-boom issue. This could complement and affirm your leadership on major, societal issues facing the country in the next century.

- Provides an alternative to private long-term care insurance and MSAs as the only solution to the problem. In September, the Republicans will probably take up the Mica federal employees' private long-term care insurance proposal and the Senate Patient Bill of Rights legislation that expands MSAs to include long-term care expenses. The mainstream advocates are concerned about the singular focus on private long-term care insurance and MSAs, since they will not come close to covering the costs of long-term care. Even the insurance industry, in its most optimistic projections, does not foresee that private insurance will cover even half of long-term care costs in thirty years. However, in the absence of alternatives, some may feel some pressure to support the Republicans' proposals.
- Confirms our support for responsible tax cuts. Presenting a tax cut package with explicit offsets would reaffirm that we support tax cuts, so long as they are paid for. As such, it could complement our Save Social Security First message. These credits also are attractive alternatives to some of the Republican proposals, since they focus on the elderly and people with disabilities who have lower income.

Cons:

- Could provide impetus for an unacceptable tax cut this year. The proposal would come at a time when Congressional Democrats, especially in the House, see the Social Security First message as strong and simple. They would probably perceive a new tax package as clouding that message. Also, Gingrich has been musing about settling for a tax cut this year of $70 billion or even less, so that our announcement of a revised tax package of about $30 billion could be read as a sign that we are willing to deal with the Republicans on their tax package in September and make our rule of not using the surplus less clear as well. Finally, given that our revenue raising provisions are unpopular on the Hill, an announcement with an attractive set of options could increase the chances of a tax cut that taps the surplus.
- Democrats may prefer marriage penalty regardless. The new package could have somewhat limited value for Congressional Democrats because it does not include marriage penalty relief, which is their main concern.
- May appear political and not receive the attention and validation that it deserves. Since it is unusual to propose policies with budget implications outside of the State of the Union and Budget process, the timing of the announcement, rather than the substance of it, may be what the press focuses on.

9-1-98

RECOMMENDATIONS. Your advisors generally do not recommend an August or early September announcement. The importance of this initiative to your overall policy agenda would probably be obscured by a media focused on the timing. Moreover, Republicans could seize on the announcement to generate momentum in September for their tax package or one that uses the surplus. It appears, at this point, that Democrats think that inaction on the tax front is a good outcome for them.

~~However, we think that the question of timing should be revisited in mid-September.~~ At that point, we will have a better sense of the potential ramifications of the announcement for Congress. We can also assess when and how we can make this announcement so it clearly gets the attention it deserves and puts you in a leadership role on this important issue.

- ☐ Announce in August or early September
- ☒ Revisit timing decision in mid-September (RECOMMENDED)
- ☐ Discuss further

AMY WEISS TOBE

Phil C -

Can you get to the right folks
on your staff?
Thanks.

- A.

AWT
Forward to POTUS corresp.
- M.

Den -

Respectful
essential re embarrass recognize

Respectful

Can you handle these.
First probably doesn't need a response; second one is a message request. Let me know. Phil 9/2

/ [signature]

9-1-98

To Burkhardt
for Reply

ation on the Vineyard and have time to reflect.

actions because I thought you were the best person to
; I have defended you. Although you have made country into the next century, your personal actions can no longer support your Presidency.

of the deed, and subsequent admission to the deed f America. I do not believe you can continue to be a President, you put our country at risk and are a cancer s county the best in the world.

American, I am troubled by your remaining employees that what the President does is an illegal company? How do I explain to my daughters that lent lies with immunity? And finally what code of n the President exhibits a total lack ountry and set a moral precedent ou have failed in your most ire this country the pain and Presidency. I trust that history will liminish your personal failures.

1236 spring street
saint helena, ca 94574
vox. 707.963.4480
fax. 707.963.5240
hjones@bbrooks.com

www.bbrooks.com

b brooks fine flowers
henrik jones ceo

9-1-98
To Burkhard
for Reply

August 19, 1998

President William J. Clinton
c/o Mike McCurry
White House Press Center
Martha's Vineyard, MA

Dear Mr. President:

I hope you are enjoying your vacation on the Vineyard and have time to reflect.

I voted for you in the last two elections because I thought you were the best person to lead our country. Until last night, I have defended you. Although you have made tremendous strides in leading our country into the next century, your personal actions undermine your credibility and I can no longer support your Presidency.

The Lewinsky deed, your denial of the deed, and subsequent admission to the deed are unacceptable for the leader of America. I do not believe you can continue to be a successful leader. By remaining President, you put our country at risk and are a cancer to the moral fabric that keeps this country the best in the world.

As an executive, a father and an American, I am troubled by your remaining President. How do I explain to employees that what the President does is an illegal form of sexual harassment in our company? How do I explain to my daughters that they may not lie even if the President lies with impunity? And finally what code of ethics can I expect from my fellow Americans when the President exhibits a total lack of honor? You sit in the highest position in this country and set a moral precedent for our country.

Respectfully, I feel compelled to inform you that you have failed in your most essential role as leader. Now, please resign and spare this country the pain and embarrassment of another two years of a Clinton Presidency. I trust that history will recognize your Presidential accomplishments and diminish your personal failures.

Respectfully yours,

1236 spring street
saint helena, ca 94574
vox. 707.963.4480
fax. 707.963.5240
hjones@bbrooks.com

www.bbrooks.com

PRINCETON a century of service
IN ASIA • 100

12 DILLON COURT EAST, PRINCETON UNIVERSITY, PRINCETON, NJ 08544

EMAIL pia@princeton.edu

PHONE 609-258-3657

FAX 609-258-5300

August 25, 1998

Mike McCurry
9911 Capitol View Avenue
Silver Springs, MD 20910

Dear Mike:

I wanted to thank you again for being so nice about returning my call -- especially during a well-deserved vacation. It definitely made my week! We're really sorry that you won't be able to make it to PiA's Centennial Gala, but I understand that the timing just didn't work for you. In the off-chance that things change between now and October 15th, I am going to send you an invitation. It should be a fun evening.

I hope that I don't wear about my welcome by asking you for one more favor. Seeing that this is such a special milestone for Princeton-in-Asia, our Board of Trustees was hoping that we might be able to receive a congratulatory letter from President Clinton which could be read/displayed at the gala. Below is some of the background I sent you last month about the program which might give him a greater sense of the scope of the program.

Princeton-in-Asia is a non-profit organization affiliated with Princeton University which has been sending young people to work in Asia since 1898. It was founded on a simple yet powerful concept -- send abroad to serve the developing nations of Asia bright, enthusiastic young Americans who have just completed their undergraduate studies. Over the past 100 years, more than 1200 individuals have ventured abroad with PiA, the majority serving as teachers. This year we will have 82 individuals working in ten Asian nations ranging from the urban centers of Tokyo and Beijing to those less-traveled countries of Laos and Kazakhstan. For many who ventured to Asia with PiA, the experience launched a career in Asian business and affairs. For others who followed different paths, it developed a lifelong interest in the region. But no matter what the country or the assignment, each individual returned with a new sense of self and the world.

Thanks for your help and please let me know if this request is possible. You can reach me at 609-258-5358 or at the above e-mail or fax number.

Best regards,

Carrie Gordon
Executive Director