From: Andre Oliver

Re: Peace Corps Summit Participation

Date: 11 April 1997

Per your request, this memorandum outlines our goals for participating in the Presidents' Summit.

1) Current Summit Activities

As you know, we have been working with The Corporation for National Service on cooperative activities during National Service Week and in Philadelphia on April 26 and 27. As I indicated in yesterday's memorandum, we welcome the participation of Cabinet members in the Peace Corps service projects being organized in Philadelphia, New Jersey, Louisiana and northern California beginning National Service Week.

In addition, on the evening of April 26, Mark Gearan will join Harris Wofford and Americorps members in a Jazz concert to thank Americorps members and returned Peace Corps Volunteers for their ongoing service. The event is being co-sponsored by Temple University, and will be held at 30th Street Station.

Mark Gearan and returned Peace Corps Volunteers will also participate in joint service projects with Americorps members in Philadelphia on Sunday, April 27. We expect at least 200-250 returned Peace Corps Volunteers to assist in service activities sponsored by the city that day. Returned Volunteer groups in Washington and New York are organizing bus trips to Philadelphia to participate.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Steve Silverman, Deputy Cabinet Secretary, The White House

FROM: Tom Amontree, Director of Communications, Department of Agriculture

SUBJECT: REVISED LIST OF USDA SERVICE SUMMIT ROLL-OUTS

ANNOUNCEMENTS PRIOR TO THE SUMMIT:

1) Speech to National 4-H Conference: On Wednesday April 9, Secretary Glickman spoke in Washington to the 69th Annual 4-H Conference. He praised the attendees for participating in the National 4-H Council's Summit commitment to involve 300,000 more youth in the program; he also challenged the attendees to increase their food recovery and gleaning activities.

2) Participating in Washington, DC "Mitzvah Day": On Sunday April 13, USDA Director of National Service Joel Berg represented the Administration at the Washington Hebrew Congregation's "Mitzvah Day" service kick-off, which was attended by Oregon Senator Ron Wyden and covered live by NBC Channel 4. Berg spoke about the President's commitment to service, the upcoming Summit, and Secretary Glickman's focus on food recovery.

3) More food recovery and volunteer service in empowerment zones/enterprise communities: At the upcoming Empowerment Zone conference in Detroit, Secretary Glickman will encourage all rural empowerment zones and enterprise communities to take concrete steps to increase gleaning and food recovery and expand projects utilizing community volunteers.

4) DC Urban Resource Environmental Initiative: On April 24, we will announce a multi-year strategy --- heavily dependent upon community volunteers --- to manage and protect the natural resources of America's Capitol city by planting trees, introducing a cost-share program to achieve urban resource stewardship objectives, and form an "Environmental Laboratory" at the John Burroughs Elementary School. This initiative would highlight both the President's commitment to service and the President's commitment to DC.

5) Expanding Environmental Service Projects in Major Cities: We will announce the expansion of the Urban Resources Partnership (URP), which brings together all relevant USDA, Interior, and EPA agencies, as well as other selected Federal agencies, to jointly sponsor environmental projects in eight major urban centers. URP sites will also increase their use of youth service corps and non-compensated volunteers. On Earth Day, we will be able to have an event in Boston announcing that Boston will be a new URP site.

National Volunteer
Week

6) Inter-Agency Food Recovery Task Force Meeting - On April 23, Secretary Glickman will convene the first meeting of the Federal "Food Recovery to Feed the Hungry" Task Force.

7) Food Recovery Event in Wichita - We are working on a possible visit by the Secretary to the Kansas Food Bank Warehouse in Wichita on April 18, at which he would announce expanded food recovery efforts in Kansas.

ANNOUNCEMENTS AT THE SUMMIT:

1) Large-Scale New Food Recovery Efforts Nationally: USDA would announce comprehensive new efforts nationally, including some the following ideas, which are still under development :

- a) Executive directors of the largest youth groups in the country --- such as Boy and Girl Scouts, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, YMCA of America, Boys and Girls Clubs --- would join us in announcing new efforts to engage their memberships in food recovery
- b) National Summit on Food Recovery, which would be modeled on the President's Summit on America's Future. The Secretary would invite former agriculture secretaries of both parties, states, counties, cities, Indian tribes, nonprofit organizations, religious groups, large corporations, and small businesses to come to the Summit to make specific commitments as to how they will increase food recovery --- the Summit would be followed by a Presidentially-declared National Week of Food Recovery
- c) More Federal agencies donating food from cafeterias/commissaries
- d) More food recovered from farmers' markets nationally
- e) Rock & Wrap It Up, a non-profit group that recovers excess food from large concerts, would join us in announcing an effort to increase student volunteers in the program

2) Expand and highlight citizen service activities focused on improving public lands and protecting the environment: Currently, the USDA Forest Service estimates 80,000 Americans are engaged in volunteer activities on Forest Service land, and tens of thousands more Americans are engaged by the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service in volunteer efforts on private land. Possibly in conjunction with EPA and the Department of Interior, USDA could announce significant increases in such efforts.

PHILADELPHIA SPECIFIC EVENTS DURING THE SUMMIT:

1) Philadelphia Farmers' Market To Aid Food Recovery: Possibly during the Germantown clean-up activities or at a time before the Summit, we could hold an event focusing on volunteers, farmers' markets, and gleaning could be held at Reading Terminal Market or Zion Baptist Church, both located in North Philadelphia next to the Germantown Avenue corridor, where the volunteer cleanup will center. Another possibility would be the old firehouse on Germantown Avenue, the recipient of new federal and city grants to fund its conversion to an inner-city farmers' market.

2) Food Recovery At the Summit Itself: Philabundance, a food recovery group located in the Germantown neighborhood, could physically collect excess food from local restaurants and bakeries during the Germantown clean-up activities. The group could also collect any left-over food from the Summit gala and honorary lunch. The principals could help with the collections.

3) URP Event in Philadelphia: Possibly during the Germantown clean-up activities or at a time before the Summit, there could be an event to highlight specific environmental improvements already accomplished by URP in the Germantown neighborhood.

re: Summit Invitation for SSS Director
date: April 15, 1997
pages: 5, including cover sheet.

Dear Mr. Beaubaire:

Per our telephone conversation today, here is a memo explaining why it would be beneficial to have SSS Director Gil Coronado participate in the Summit for America's Future. As I explained, we have been attempting to make this connection for Director Coronado ever since plans for the Summit were announced. After conversations with Bill Smullen, Trevor Cornwell, Melinda Baskin Hudson, and Diana Fortuna, we were pointed to Mr. Silverman's office as the place where decisions regarding Federal invitees are made.

Thank you for calling me today. Your guidance, and your familiarity with the mechanics of Summit invitations for sub-Cabinet level Feds, were indeed a breath of fresh air.

I sincerely hope Mr. Silverman is as enthusiastic about having Mr. Coronado participate and Mr. Coronado is about making a significant contribution! I know that time is short, so I will be in touch with you at the end of the week to assess progress on this recommendation. Please call me at any time if you have news (my home number is 703 451-0122).

MEMORANDUM FOR STEPHEN B. SILVERMAN, DEPUTY CABINET SECRETARY

THRU: David Beaubaire, Special Assistant (VIA FAX)

FROM: Lewis C. Brodsky, Director for Public and Congressional Affairs

SUBJECT: Recommendation for SSS Participation at the Philadelphia Summit

As you help decide which Federal officials receive invitations to participate in the Summit for America's Future in Philadelphia, please consider the Director of the Selective Service System (SSS), the Honorable Gil Coronado. Since last summer, SSS, under Mr. Coronado's inspired leadership, has been working closely with the Corporation for National Service and the Department of Defense. Each day, SSS is reminding thousands of America's young men that they do not have to wait to be called into service during a future national emergency; they can volunteer to "Serve America" today. President Clinton applauded this effort in a January letter to Director Coronado, a copy of which is enclosed.

As the head of an independent Federal agency that has the best and most complete data base of America's young men, along with sophisticated automation resources to communicate with them, the Director is eager to contribute to (and learn from) the Summit's sessions that examine the roles of communities, corporations and government in fostering volunteerism. He can share his vision of how Selective Service resources can be tapped in at least two ways:

— Selective Service can expand its "Serve America" initiative, originally developed last summer, in which the Agency's routine communication with nearly 5,000 men turning 18 every day is used to encourage them to serve the Nation. Working, perhaps, in cooperation with Youth Service America (YSA), SSS can convey the "volunteerism" message to approximately 2 million men each year. New funding may be minimal because the Agency already pays the cost of printing and mailing registration acknowledgment materials to all men turning 18 who must, by law, register with Selective Service. For example, a promotional message added to the mailings can encourage men to call an 800 number, or visit the YSA Web site. Once connected, they can get more information about local volunteer opportunities spawned from the President's Summit and the mini-summits that follow.

-- The Selective Service System can also offer opportunities for qualified young men and women to volunteer within their own communities as SSS Local Board Members. Such opportunities fit with the Summit's fundamental resource of providing "an opportunity to give back through community service." Local Board members are uncompensated community members who are appointed by the Director of Selective Service, acting on behalf of the President. To the maximum extent practicable, the Boards they form must reflect the racial and national origin diversity of the men in the communities they would serve. They train in matters of law, policy and procedures, standing ready to decide claims for exemptions and deferments should this Nation reinstate a military draft in a crisis. There are 11,000 positions authorized on the more than 2,000 boards throughout America. At any given time, about five percent of the positions have vacancies which must be filled due to turnover, so there is a continuing need for volunteers. To be a board member, an individual must be at least 18 years old, a citizen of the U.S., not serving on active military duty or in the Reserves, and have good standing in the community. SSS pays local travel and per diem expenses for Board Members to attend initial training and annual refresher training.

As Director of the Selective Service System, Mr. Coronado does not report to or through the Department of Defense. He is Presidentially appointed, Senate confirmed, and responsible directly to the President. As the Agency's ninth Director, Mr. Coronado brings a wealth of experience as a community activist to the Federal government. He was the initiating force and guiding hand in the movement behind the creation of National Hispanic Heritage Month, designated by Congress in 1988; holds the President's Award from the League of United Latin American Citizens (1989); and helped found the Hispanic Alliance for Free Trade in 1990. It is fitting that he be tapped for the Summit.

Last month, the Summit's Executive Director, Dr. Stuart Shapiro, wrote to Director Coronado (a copy of the letter is enclosed). Doctor Shapiro noted that the Agency's "ability to reach thousands of men could increase our commitments substantially in responding to the needs of our young people nationwide." At the Summit, Gil Coronado would be able to explore with participants a variety of options and launch this small Federal Agency in new directions. SSS wants to play an increasingly important role in helping America's youth realize a brighter, enriched future.

Respectfully submitted,

Enclosures

I commend you for the Selective Service's innovative efforts to increase its peacetime roles and activities. I am particularly impressed with initiatives to promote public service ideals and opportunities for the young men of our Nation. In this regard, the "Serve America" initiative is a noble and worthwhile effort sure to increase civic-mindedness and opportunities in our country.

Dear Mr. Coronado:

Thank you for your letter regarding the Presidents' Summit for America's Future that was forwarded to me by Henry Cisneros.

The prospect of having the Selective Service System involved as a potential clearinghouse for young men interested in volunteerism is promising. The Selective Service System's ability to reach thousands of men could increase our commitments substantially in responding to the needs of our young people nationwide.

Enclosed you will find a copy of a letter which I directed to Lew Brodsky, your Director for Public & Congressional Affairs. As you will note, I indicated to him that Mr. Billy Shore or his staff will be following up with him to assist him in exploring how the Selective Service System can develop a commitment centered around the Summit's goals. Enclosed you will find information that explains the Summit's purpose, goals and how people will be involved.

Again, I want to thank you for your offer to have the Selective Service System participate in this venture to turn the tide for our young people.

HHS has several excellent ideas for service-type events during the next few weeks, including a Girl Power announcement and a Nike commitment. At this point, the Principals are not doing events during National Service and Volunteer week, April 13-20. These are a few good possibilities. Let me, Bibb Hubbard or David Beaubaire know if you have questions (6-2572).

I need to tell HHS by tomorrow if we are interested in the Girl Power event. Thanks.

FR: MELISSA SKOLFIELD, VIRGINIA COX
RE: PRESIDENT'S SUMMIT ON SERVICE
DA: 4/3/97

The following are three good potential announcements for the President or Vice President that we believe amplify the President's message about service -- especially service that emphasizes the mentoring of girls.

1. We will be teaming up with the four African American sororities -- which will all announce that they will be implementing a Girl Power! mentoring program in their undergraduate chapters. The sorority members will work with their local alumni and with national and local organizations like the National Council of Negro Women to mentor young girls in their communities. We could announce this with some sort of ceremony (signing a joint memorandum, etc.). We would include the sorority women, young girls who would be mentored, the national sorority Presidents, and hopefully local youth organizations. If the White House doesn't want to announce this, the Secretary could do it locally at Howard University, which has all four chapters.

2. We could join with NIKE to announce that they have vastly expanded their PLAYCORPS (modeled after Americorps) program -- from 100 coaches in four cities this year to 1,000 all over America next year. Piloted last year, PLAY COPRS takes college students, trains them, and puts them to work in underserved areas to coach/mentor kids all year in recreational leagues. They are paid $500 -- which goes straight toward their tuition. In addition to expanding it (they're looking at the 1,000 number, but they'll take as many coaches as qualify), we will be adding a Girl Power! component. The coaches will be trained specifically on how to work with and inspire girls. They will also get incentives from NIKE to find the barriers keeping girls from participating in sports/physical activity and work with their communities to knock them down. We suggest announcing this in Philadelphia either with the Vice President on April 23 or the President on April 27. We would be joined by NIKE, some of the coaches and kids in the program, and possibly a famous athlete to spotlight how important her coach was growing up. The Philadelphia site was chosen because of the momentum leading up to the President's summit and also because it is the most successful of NIKE's four pilot sites for PLAYCOPRS. If you don't want to do this, we would probably do it on our own in Philadelphia the week of the 21st.

3. Our Department is making a major new commitment to mentorship and teen pregnancy prevention by putting together two new grant programs. We will provide $1 million to national organizations serving boys and hope to also commit $1 million to organizations serving girls in order to foster mentorship by caring adults and get young girls and boys to abstain from sex and make the most of their lives. The grants to girl-serving organizations are part of our Girl Power! campaign. If this doesn't interest you for POTUS, we'd do it in early May in California.

Here are a few other activities that we are planning:

1. On April 24, we will be expanding our traditional Take Our Daughters To Work Day to adopt daughters from schools in D.C., particularly focusing on underserved areas and on the Girl Power! 9-14 year-old age group. We will also be asking employees at NIH, CDC, FDA, and in our regions to adopt daughters from their local schools. In addition to asking employees to plan their own educational activities through the day, we also plan on having an afternoon session for all the girls and inviting someone like Eleanor Holmes Norton to help the Secretary lead a question and answer session. The Secretary will be joined all day by one of the six Ms. Foundation's young essay winners from around the country.

NOTE: We have also talked to the White House Women's Office about having a Take Our Daughters to Work Day roundtable at the White House with 9-14 year old girls to talk about their unique challenges.

2. On April 21, we will be doing an event in D.C. with the Birthing Project and D.C. Healthy Start as they conduct immunization education and awareness projects for volunteers. This also coincides with Immunization Awareness Week.

April 15, 1997

MEMORANDUM FOR ERSKINE BOWLES

FROM: STEVE SILVERMAN AND DIANA FORTUNA

SUBJECT: NATIONAL SERVICE AND VOLUNTEER WEEK

Cabinet Affairs has been very active in encouraging the Cabinet to take a more active role in promoting the Upcoming President's Summit for America's Future, highlighting in particular AmeriCorps and this Administration's leadership in encouraging national service. In addition to the events listed below the Cabinet can be expected to be active on NetDay, April 19th, and Earth Day, April 22nd, and other events that have obvious service-related themes leading up to the summit. It is also expected that the objectives of the Summit will be furthered both by the President's Conference on Early Childhood Development on April 17th, and April 24th, with Take Our Daughters to Work Day.

Cabinet members are eager to participate in the Philadelphia Summit and are currently scheduling satellite radio and TV interviews to promote the Summit. Talking points and copies of both the President's recent radio address and Mrs. Clinton's teleconference have been widely distributed to all Administration surrogates and they have been encouraged to incorporate similar language into their daily speeches.

The following is a list of additional events the Cabinet has planned for National Service and Volunteer Week. Also attached are summaries of events that AmeriCorps and Return Peace Corps volunteers have put together for National Service and Volunteer Week to demonstrate their leadership and commitment to National Service.

The Secretary's remarks will include the upcoming Summit as well as the successful AmeriCorps programs in the area. We are currently exploring the possibility of doing an AmeriCorps event in Philadelphia associated with the "Learn and Serve America" program--the restrictions associated with this event surround the Secretary's limited schedule in Philadelphia.

NATIONAL VOLUNTEER WEEK ACTIVITIES OF PARTICULAR EMPHASIS

April 13 - 19, 1997

Rhode Island Reads!: Hundreds of volunteers will actively participate in a state-wide, week-long reading improvement program. The kick-off event is scheduled for Tuesday, April 15 at 10:00 a.m. at the Providence Boys and Girls Club. Thousands of new books will be collected to fill the shelves of "community libraries." Beginning April 15, new libraries will be constructed in community centers which presently have limited or no reading resources. Throughout the week, which is school vacation week, children's story hours will be held at libraries and community centers around the state.

"Presidio Service Week": This initiative is sponsored by the Center for National Service and the Environment and the National Park Service. AmeriCorps members work together to refurbish homes and construct a plant for endangered and native plants. The event kick-off is Tuesday, April 15 from 8:30 to 10:00 a.m. On Saturday, April 19, members will also serve as Community Leaders during "Earth Day in the Golden Gate National Recreation Area," where they will lead and train community volunteers on various environmental restoration projects. Kick-off for the "Earth Day" event is 8:30 a.m.

The Los Angeles Youth Summit: On Tuesday, April 15, 250 AmeriCorps members will gather at the South Lawn of City Hall for a National Youth Forum. Participants will discuss key issues being deliberated at the President's Summit for America's Future in Philadelphia. Events commence with an 8:30 a.m. Continental Breakfast, followed by a 9:00 Welcome. Discussions take place from 10:00 to noon, with lunch from noon to 1:00. Live entertainment is available from 1:00 to 3:00 on the lawn.

NCCC Philadelphia Project: During the month of April, the National Civilian Community Corps will rehabilitate a former bathhouse at the Cruz Recreation Center, turning it into a youth/community center. This new space will support the expansion of the after school tutoring program, where Corps members and volunteers serve daily from 3:00 to 5:00. This project has been on-going and is roughly half completed. No specific events are scheduled for the week, but drop-by visits are welcome. Volunteers are on-site Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 3:30.

Louisiana's Coastal Erosion Project: From April 12 to 14, over 200 AmeriCorps members will converge upon a USDA project in Grand Isle/Fouchon to prevent coastal erosion. Louisiana loses 50 square miles of land per year to erosion. Members and volunteers will plant grasses, build retaining walls, and build a 5,000 foot sand fence.

Ohio Wesleyan University's "The Columbus Initiative": This program pairs peer student service and tutoring with a "promise" to be admitted to the University. During the week, 125 fourth and fifth graders and 35 sixth through eighth graders will visit the campus and their mentors and tutors with whom they have worked all year. Eight graders participate in a College Readiness Program, after which they receive their "Columbus Initiative Promise" cards. A "Promise" card guarantees that those who complete the program, graduate from high with a "B" average, and are recommended by their high school guidance counselors as good citizens, will be admitted with a full financial aid package. This is an on-going program and is not being presented solely in conjunction with National Volunteer Week. Therefore, no kick-off event is scheduled, but drop-by visits are welcome.

Florida/City of Tallahassee: On Monday, April 14, a kick-off event will be held with Governor Lawton Chiles and Mayor Scott Maddox from 6:30 to 9:00 p.m. On Tuesday, April 15, volunteers will fan out throughout the city to refurbish homes, playgrounds, wheelchair ramps, and the like. It should be noted that the Florida Commission on National Service is independently attempting to have Mrs. Gore attend.

Peace Corps Service Projects

Beginning National Service Week

Northern California, April 12 and 26

- On April 12, approximately ten returned Peace Corps Volunteers (RPCVs) will help the California State Park Service restore a hiking trail on Mt. Diablo, in Contra Costa County. This is part of an ongoing monthly collaboration.
- For the past 5 years, RPCVs in Northern California have been helping to restore trails at Point Reyes National Seashore, north of San Francisco. On April 26, approximately 20 RPCVs will continue this collaboration with the National Park Service, by cutting and hauling out underbrush to make trails passable for hikers.
- Approximately 15 RPCVs in Northern California will also assist in Christmas in April on April 26, working with a non-profit organization in Contra Costa County that mobilizes volunteers to paint, repair, and renovate houses in underserved communities and among the elderly.

New Jersey, April 19

- On April 19th, the Philadelphia Area Returned Peace Corps Volunteers will join Habitat for Humanity in the construction of a house at 7th and Clinton St., in Camden, New Jersey. An estimated 20 RPCVs will participate.

Philadelphia, April 19

- The Philadelphia Area Returned Peace Corps Volunteers will assist the Greater Philadelphia Food Bank on Saturday, April 19, 1997. Approximately 20 RPCVs will break down large bulk food packages, sort and repackage food for distribution to the most needy citizens of Philadelphia.
- On April 19th, the Philadelphia Area Returned Peace Corps Volunteers will also assist the Agape House for Women to renew and refurbish the garden/community area the RPCVs developed for the shelter last year. They will plant, rake, clean and paint. The entire garden area has become an important community center, with open space, picnic tables, and benches. The shelter, with support from the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, manages a range of community services including providing meals and activities for neighborhood children.

Louisiana April 19

On April 19, approximately 50 RPCVs will assist in an urban beautification project, razing an abandoned house situated on a scenic Louisiana bayou. The project is organized by the group Les Reflections de Bayou, and it seeks to maintain the environmental quality of bayous in the Mississippi delta area.

MEMORANDUM

April 15, 1997

TO: Steve Silverman

FROM: Suzy Hubbell

RE: Cabinet Participation in National Volunteer Week

Please add the following events to your memo to Erskine Bowles. I believe the information on the Secretary's Earth Day event was sent to David Beaubaire last week. (Due to a prior commitment, Secretary Babbitt will be in American Samoa for almost all of National Service Week..)

1. April 22, Earth Day. Secretary Babbitt will be part of an Earth Day event in Chicago with a heavy "service" influence. He and Mayor Daley (tentative) will join the River Rats for a clean-up of the Chicago River. Chicago-area AmeriCorps volunteers have been invited and are encouraged to attend. The River Rats are a group of teenagers from one of Chicago's only integrated public housing projects. They take part in occasional river clean-ups, outdoor education programs and boating trips as a way to gain a greater connection with their immediate environment and in an effort to focus on positive developments within their community. Following the clean-up, the Secretary will deliver remarks to the student volunteers and regional stakeholders in the American Heritage Rivers Program on the importance of community involvement and watershed preservation. The exact time and location are still to be determined.
2. April 15. Deputy Secretary John Garamendi participated in the Bureau of Land Management's "Making a Difference" National Volunteer Awards Program. At this years ceremony, held in Washington, D.C., nine outstanding volunteers were recognized for their invaluable service as BLM volunteers.
3. April 14. Deputy Secretary John Garamendi joined Colorado Governor Roy Romer, Denver Mayor Wellington Webb and olympic gold medalist Amy Van Dyken to introduce Colorado's delegates to the Presidents' Summit for America's Future, the kickoff of a national campaign to increase community volunteer efforts. Dustin Redd Playground in City Park served as the background for the annoucement. The playground was built by community volunteers.

Memorandum to Steve Silverman

From Frank Holleman

FH

Re: Philadelphia Service Summit

Secretary Riley asked me to pass this opportunity along; he strongly believes that it is a good idea.

The Secretary received a call from Judith Rodin, the President of the University of Pennsylvania. Her university has responded to the President's invitation to participate in the America Reads effort by devoting a portion of their work study funds for student reading tutors. In addition, the University of Pennsylvania is a member of the American Association of Universities (AAU), to which the Secretary spoke recently; and President Rodin has been working to bring the members of AAU into America Reads.

President Rodin would like the President to come to her campus during the Summit to highlight America Reads and the participation of college students in the effort. This would be an opportunity to illustrate community involvement, service learning, the interaction of higher education and elementary education, our student aid efforts, and America Reads. She says that Mayor Rendell is very supportive of this request and would participate.

For further information, you can contact me or President Rodin's chief of staff, Steven Schutt, at 215-898-7220.

U.S. SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20416

DATE: April 16, 1997
TO: Steve Silverman, Cabinet Affairs
FROM: Paul Weech and Andy Rivera
RE: The Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) participation in the Summit for America's Future

On the behalf of the Small Business Administration we respectfully request that SCORE President Emeritus, Walter H. Channing and present SCORE President, Fred W. Thomas be invited to participate in the Summit for America's Future. Enclosed are their biographies for your review.

SCORE chapters are locally chartered volunteer organizations funded by the SBA which provides free expert problem solving assistance to small businesses. This program began in 1964 and has 12,400 members. SCORE's goal is to help American small businesses prosper. I believe that SCORE's participation in the Summit will be helpful to promote the themes of the President's vision of volunteerism because:

1. SCORE is a successful volunteer program sponsored by the Federal government for 34 years.
2. SCORE has served 4.2 million clients during its history.
3. In Fiscal Year 1996, SCORE volunteers have counseled 157,847 cases, organized 4,016 business development workshops and contributed 1,024,728 volunteer hours.
4. SCORE members volunteer because they have had successful careers in business and want to give something back to their community.
5. Successful businesses are a result of SCORE's volunteer efforts.

Should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact Paul Weech.

Shrooms[®] International Inc. manufacturers of meringue and specialty confections, was recognized today as Client of the Year. SCORE, Service Corps of Retired Executives Association Chapter No. 1, presented a plaque to Paris Dombrowski, President and Chleora Bergquist, Vice President, of this female-owned Kosher wholesale manufacturing facility. The presentation was made at the annual awards meeting at the George Washington University Club's Elliot Room.

Based in Gaithersburg, Maryland on Ziggy Lane, Shrooms[®] International Inc. creates crisp dried meringues confections assembled with chocolate to resemble a mushroom. The company also creates other specialty meringues to fit their clients' needs. Featured in a column by Phyllis Richman, Washington Post Food Editor, Shrooms[®] experienced rapid expansion and needed small business assistance.

Ms. Dombrowski and Bergquist turned to SCORE for help with pricing. SCORE is a nationwide non-profit organizational with 12,300 volunteer members who counsel America's small businesses. SCORE counselors, Sam Edlow and Mike Getz, provided valuable pricing guidance that will support negotiations for contracts with several nationwide distributors and other customers for larger orders.

Shrooms[®] officers returned to their SCORE counselors for advice on sales and marketing strategies and have recently added several new specialty items to their line of confections to include meringue nests for the hospitality industry.

Subject: subcabinet

here's my reaction to the subcabinet requests we've gotten so far to attend the summit:

Defense: they told us high level types (Navy Secy Dalton, and Danzig, who I think is also high level) were hoping to go, but these seem lower level. Where are their most high powered people who are supposed to be so excited about this, if Cohen can't go? I think we should shoot for 4 people here, 2 Navy, 1 Air Force, 1 Army, 1 from the central apparatus, but we may need a slightly higher level mix.

Labor: why do they want to go? they haven't contributed anything commitment-wise. I say ding them unless they have a rationale of some sort.

HHS: I would recommend Olivia Golden, Joan Lombardi, and Lynn Yeakel.

VA: not sure...ideally, we should pick the most dynamic of this group, I guess. Or we could ignore.

DOJ: Markus and Bulchik are supposed to be great, and they should be there. I don't know Rickman.

Peace Corps: I would tell them 1 or 2; they're out of control on their numbers.

Selective Service: they're driving me nuts! I'm not overwhelmed by this guy's need to be there; their commitment is OK, but no big deal. Unless you know of some reason to have him there, I think not.

This adds to about 12. Other agencies that we must add to this list are: HUD, Education, Agriculture, and maybe Interior or Transportation. Two each would total 18-22. How many WH are we assuming? I have a feeling Bruce won't want to stay after the Pres. leaves; I'm checking.

David, are you going to contact HUD, education, agriculture to make sure they send us a few names?

Subject: PROBLEMATIC SUMMIT
TALKING POINTS

5 pages, including this cover

When we scheduled a Summit satellite tour for Secretary Glickman, Sarah Ross set us the attached talking points, giving us the impression these are the "official" talking points for the Summit.

These talking points show very little resemblance to the White House talking points on Service Week.

These talking points don't mention AmeriCorps, don't mention the Peace Corps, and don't mention youth corps --- in fact, they don't mention full-time, stipended service of any kind. They never mention that the Summit is co-sponsored by the Corporation for National Service. They state: "We all agree that government can't do the job alone," but they do not include President Clinton's equally important statement that neither can ucoordinated individuals do the job alone. They list President Clinton and General Powell as equals, but never mention Cisneros or Robb.

I strongly urge you to take whatever steps possible to work with the Summit to alter these talking points and ensure that Administration officials know to use White House or Corporation for National Service talking points.

KEY MESSAGES

WHAT THE SUMMIT IS ABOUT:

- ▶ The Presidents Summit For America's Future will take place at Independence Hall in Philadelphia this April 27, 28 and 29. All of the living Presidents and General Colin Powell are convening leaders from business, labor, the media, religious and educational institutions, and the volunteer sector in an effort to address the needs and problems that face America's 15 million at-risk children.
- ▶ The Summit will launch a new, on-going effort -- America's Promise -- aimed at assuring that every child has access to five fundamental resources that are essential to healthy, fulfilling, productive lives.
- ▶ These resources are:
 - an ongoing relationship with a caring adult: mentor, tutor, coach;
 - safe places and structured activities during non-school hours to learn and grow;
 - a healthy start;
 - a marketable skill through effective education; and,
 - an opportunity to give back through community service.

We would all agree that government alone can't do the job. Foundations and service providers can't do the job by themselves. The only way to guarantee that children at-risk gain access to these resources, is if ALL Americans become involved in some way in their communities to help children in-need.

HOW IT WILL HAPPEN:

- ▶ Americans from every walk of life -- from corporate CEOs to citizens in almost every community -- are making specific, measurable commitments aimed at fulfilling one or more of these five fundamental resources.
- ▶ Importantly, over time, this effort will not just help our children at-risk, but it will make effective citizen service an integral part of the American way of life. This means that helping those in need will no longer be viewed solely as the responsibility of government or service providers; but will be viewed as part of the responsibilities we all have to one another.

EXAMPLES OF LARGER COMMITMENTS GENERATED BY THE SUMMIT:

See Attached List of Commitments to the Summit/America's Promise.

SMALLER EXAMPLES OF COMMITMENTS GENERATED BY THE SUMMIT:

- But these are large examples. The Summit's central message is that every citizen can help, through their churches, school, employers and service organizations.
- For example, the 8th grade class of a small school in Indianapolis has committed to tutor younger students in an inner-city school, to help assure that those kids make the step up to middle school.
- Local bowling clubs can reach out through organizations like their local Boys & Girls Clubs or their Volunteer Center, and provide inner-city children with a new, safe form of recreation.
- Arts and crafts centers can do the same. Athletic clubs can do so too. Employers can provide work-place mentoring opportunities to expose at-risk kids to the workplace. Employees can organize and work with local organizations to read aloud to younger children once or twice a week to help build their literacy skills and ensure a healthy start in life.

WHAT HAPPENS NEXT:

- The President's Summit will launch an organization known as America's Promise.
- America's Promise seeks to mobilize millions of citizens and thousands of organizations to help turn the tide for America's youth.
- America's Promise will monitor commitments made by corporations and service organizations as part of the Summit effort. It will also work to generate more public and private commitments so that more children and at-risk youth have access to a mentor, a safe place, a marketable skill, a healthy start and an opportunity to give back through community service.

There is much, much more that can be done. That's why I'm involved. That's why I hope everyone in my town will become involved.

Those who are interested in becoming involved (in making a difference and in reaching out to America's children and youth) should call the Summit at 1-800-365-0153.

Susan Liss

April 21, 1997

To: Rahm Emanuel, Senior Advisor to the President, The White House

From: Tom Amontree, Director of Communications, Department of Agriculture

Subject: FOOD RECOVERY ANNOUNCEMENT FOR POTUS AT SUMMIT

Earlier today, you asked Secretary Glickman whether POTUS could make a food recovery-related announcement in conjunction with the President's Summit on America's Future. The answer is an enthusiastic yes. There are three possible choices for POTUS or another White House principal:

- 1) a policy announcement on Wednesday, April 23, at the first meeting of the Inter-Agency Federal Task Force on Food Recovery to Feed the Hungry, which he created last November when he signed the executive memorandum on food recovery;
- 2) a policy announcement at the Summit itself between April 27-29; and
- 3) a physical food recovery event in Philadelphia during the Summit.

POLICY ANNOUNCEMENT:

POTUS or another White House principal could join Secretary Glickman at either the first Federal inter-agency task force on food recovery, or at the Summit itself, to announce that:

- a) USDA will sign a Memorandum of Understanding (M.O.U.) with the National Collaboration of Youth (NCY), an umbrella group for such youth organizations as the Boy and Girl Scouts, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, YMCA of America, and the Boys and Girls Clubs; the M.O.U. will specify how the millions of participants in NCY member organizations will be encouraged to volunteer to recover food.
- b) The Administration will hold a National Summit on Food Recovery, which will be modeled on the President's Summit on America's Future and will invite former agriculture secretaries and members of Congress of both parties -- as well as leaders from states, counties, cities, Indian tribes, nonprofit organizations, religious groups, large corporations, and small businesses -- to come to the National Summit on Food Recovery to make specific commitments as to how they will increase the recovery of excess food; this Summit on Food Recovery could be convened by POTUS or Secretary Glickman.

- c) The Administration will declare a National Week of Food Recovery during the summer, during which food recovery volunteer projects will occur nationally.
- d) The USDA Agricultural Marketing Service will work with farmers' markets nationally to increase the recovery of food at such markets, including those held at Federal agencies.
- f) USDA will forge a partnership with the non-profit groups Rock & Wrap It Up and Food Chain that will help students to volunteer to recover excess food from the School Lunch Program, restaurants, and large concerts.
- g) Rural Empowerment Zones and Enterprise Communities will build food recovery activities into the implementation of their strategic plans.
- h) USDA will provide technical assistance to any school district in the nation willing to encourage students to volunteer to recover food. We have already provided such assistance to schools in the DC-area and in Wichita, Kansas. (See attached Washington Post column by Mary McGrory and article from the Wichita Eagle).

MEDIA EVENT:

Philabundance, a food recovery group located in the Germantown neighborhood of Philadelphia, could physically collect excess food from local restaurants and bakeries during the Germantown clean-up activities on Sunday, April 27. The group will also be collecting any left-over food from the Summit gala and the Taste of Philadelphia.

The event could be the following: POTUS and/or another White House principal could join with Secretary Glickman in helping Philabundance recover food from a Summit-related event. The principals could then ride with the collection truck to the headquarters of Philabundance, where they could make any or all of the policy announcements specified above.

Gleaning the Best of America

To see Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman at a food bank, done up in T-shirt and rubber gloves, sorting cans of vegetables and packages of cereal with a group of volunteers, is to see a happy man. At the Capital Area Community Food Bank, Glickman is experiencing the satisfaction of a politician who is doing two things at once. He is advancing his favorite cause, known as "gleaning" or food rescue, and he is putting to work high school students who are volunteering, under duress, to help get food to the hungry mouths of the District of Columbia.

Glickman tells the students that gleaning is always "hard, dirty work," whether it's combing mechanically harvested fields for more crops or getting processed foods off shelves and into trucks.

One local high school student admitted he had been "nagged by my parents" to pitch in. He did 105 hours of sorting and stacking and liked it. He has gone beyond his requirement and become a genuine volunteer. Someone had made it clear to him that he wasn't just slinging sweet potatoes, he was helping rehabilitate a drug abuser or keeping some child or lonely old soul alive.

Schools have finally doped out how to make the young participate in the community. The answer is coercion.

Glickman, the Genuine Volunteer

McGRORY, From C1

No community service, no high-school diploma. Glickman, a genial achiever on Capitol Hill, served eight years in the House and lost a bid for a fifth term in 1994, a killer year for congressional Democrats. Clinton chose him for his reputation, not his farming background. Glickman's father was a scrap iron dealer in Wichita; Glickman knew about crops from his service on the House Agriculture Committee.

He was astonished to find out how much the department, which was founded by Abraham Lincoln, does beyond the obvious. It runs the Forest Service, for instance, and a huge education extension service, which offers government employees courses in just about everything, from property management to Intermediate Chinese Conversation courses.

It is easy to see why gleaning is the program that possesses Glickman. It's humanitarian, low-cost and without critics. The Department of Agriculture has its own contingent of AmeriCorps volunteers, who work for peanuts and do the heavy lifting in recruiting and training workers. Agriculture staffers work on pickup and delivery schedules from federal agencies which now regularly distribute their unused food. Nonprofit feeding organizations deliver the food to the poor and the homeless. Last summer more than 1,000 tons of food were recovered, providing 1.3 million meals.

Even those who hate any government enterprise are silent about gleaning. Who wants to whine about an enterprise that saves food and people? Lynn Brantley, who runs the Capital Area Community Food Bank, says one in four children in the District of Columbia face hunger.

Americans are offended by the specter of hunger stalking the most bounteous land on the planet. Gleaning is relatively new. It was introduced as a policy during the Bush administration. Under Glickman, who made an emotional presentation of the program at a recent Cabinet meeting, it has made giant steps. The Bill Emerson Good Samaritan law has removed the threat of liability for farmers who open their fields to gleaners and nonprofits that serve food. Negligence or malice now has to be proved. President Clinton made a radio speech directing all federal agencies to join in.

Agriculture's cafeteria donates its surplus every week. So do the Federal Reserve and Fannie Mae.

Glickman's evangelism on gleaning and his palpable commitment make him a hero among local food providers. He goes to food banks all over the country, begs hotels and restaurants to contribute their extra food.

"He's an inspiration," says Chapman Todd, associate director of the D.C. Central Kitchen, the city's largest feeding operation. It provides 2,500 to 3,000 free meals every day. Todd thinks that hunger, an issue in the 1980s, could be one again, once the new welfare bill, with its cuts in food stamps, goes into full effect.

Hunger, as Glickman urgently says, is something we can do something about. The numbers offer a perfect symmetry. Twenty percent of the hungry's needs are unmet, and 20 percent of our food goes to waste. There are 150,000 private feeding programs. If more are needed, it seems that Glickman himself will see to it that they come into being.

Even those who hate any government enterprise are silent about gleaning.

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman: He'd rather be gleaning.

BY RAY LUSTIG—THE WASHINGTON POST

Apr. 20--More than 15 percent of the nation's institutional food is thrown in the garbage, Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman said Friday, calling for a coordinated effort that could turn that waste into ammunition in the war on hunger.

"It's enough to feed 25 million people a day pizza, sandwiches, you name it, it is thrown in the garbage," Glickman said.

Glickman, a native Wichitan who represented Kansas' 4th District for 18 years in the U.S. House of Representatives, gave the final Eisenhower Lecture for 1996-97 at Wiedemann Hall at Wichita State University.

While he was in town, he also announced a partnership between the Kansas Foodbank Warehouse and the Wichita Board of Education that will give students a chance to serve their community.

"Twenty-five million meals a day," he said of the potential for the food waste in the United States. "It is disgraceful.

"What can we do to rescue food when the needs of the nation aren't being met?" he said. He spoke of the National Good Samaritan Act signed last summer by President Clinton; the measure relieves people from liability issues related to their donations of food for the hungry.

The government can't do it all, Glickman said; the private sector must help. Several things have happened since the bill, he said, singling out the 7-Eleven Corp., which donates about 260,000 sandwiches a day that it used to toss.

Glickman is behind the program that encourages restaurants and other food providers, such as McConnell Air Force Base, to have local students to haul the excess food to the Kansas Food Bank Warehouse.

The Food Rescue and Gleaning Project will be assisted by students from East High School's International Baccalaureate program and the Downtown Law Magnet as part of the required 100 hours of community service. Thirty-five students attended Glickman's announcement of the program.

Glickman, with his usual self-deprecating wit, opened his speech with some of the differences between being a congressman and a member of the president's Cabinet.

While a member of Congress can be controversial, even irresponsible on occasions, things he says even in jest as a Cabinet member are taken seriously, he said.

Asked once whether the Russians would buy more wheat, he said: "'I don't know.' The headlines in the Journal of Commerce the next day were: 'Glickman bearish on wheat prices.' Wheat prices dropped."

It is like going to an art auction and scratching your head and ending up buying the painting, he said.

Agriculture will have much to do with whether the United States can maintain its leading role in the world, Glickman said.

The U.S. Food for Peace program was a potent weapon during the Cold War, and the United States remains one of the few countries in the world that makes feeding the less fortunate one of its national goals.

A growing world population will require good science to allow mankind to feed a rapidly growing world without savaging our planet, he said.

Fewer pesticides, more efficient use of water, hardier plants and conservation of prime farmland will keep the world from starvation and wars over food and land.

"I'm optimistic that we can feed the world," he said. "But we will need to be more scientific and more clever" about using what we have.

PRESIDENTS SUMMIT

PRESIDENT CLINTON

4/23/97

(IRRELEVANT MATERIAL OMITTED)

QUESTION:

Sir, thank you very much for allowing us in your White House. And we wanna talk to you about the summit. And we wanna hear your thoughts on the summit. What's it all about? I mean what-- what do (OFF-MIKE) the summit (OFF-MIKE)?

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

I hope two big things will come out of the summit. First of all, I hope that we will get the attention of the American people about the urgent need for citizens to help give our young people a better start in life in the areas that President Bush and I and General Powell and the Senate organizers have agreed upon. And in mentoring and giving kids a healthy start. And giving them a-- a good education and marketable skills. Giving them safe places. And then getting children themselves into the idea of community service.

PRESIDENT CLINTON (cont'd):

So there's a very specific agenda here to try to get citizens to realize their obligations and their possibilities to help our young people have a better future. In a larger sense, I hope that this summit will galvanize literally tens of millions of Americans to wanna serve in their own way each in their own community.

Because if you think about the increasing interdependence of people in this world and in our country and in our communities, we have to redefine citizenship to include the word service so that no one really believes that he or she is a complete good citizen just by goin' to work, doing what you're supposed to do and paying your taxes. People ought to think about service as a component of citizenship.

QUESTION:

That's great. Now could you say the whole thing in about 12 seconds? (LAUGHTER) (UNINTEL) kidding. Could you say that somehow and just give me-- I need like a ten-second byte (OFF-MIKE).

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

Sure.

QUESTION:

And action.

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

The summit is supposed to do two things. First of all to focus our attention on children and the obligation of adults all over America to help our children. And secondly in effect to redefine citizenship. To say to America you can't be a good citizen unless you really serve. That's the way to be a complete citizen, to be a good servant in the community as well.

QUESTION:

That's perfect, thank you. Would you like to say something about how all the Presidents and you came together on this in a small byte?

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

I think it shows what's best in America. That, you know, when we reach down to what's really important we get beyond politics and put our country first and put our children first. And that's what President Bush and I tried to do.

PRESIDENT CLINTON (cont'd):

And that's why we're so gratified that the other Presidents are joining us: President Ford, President Carter and Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Carter. And Mrs. Reagan's coming. So they're very happy about it.

QUESTION:

That's great. Can you just say-- just-- I need something at the beginning which is we brought the summit together by so that I could put that in one byte. And action.

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

Well, President Bush and I brought this summit together by inviting the other Presidents to participate to show that this wasn't about party or politics. This is about America and people.

QUESTION:

Perfect. Okay. Let's go into a different-- a different angle, please. (UNINTEL) closer shot or a different angle. I want to ask you now about your-- your life, so to speak, and how you decided that you wanted to serve.

(IRRELEVANT MATERIAL OMITTED)

QUESTION:

You know, like as a young man. Because one of the things that's always impressed me about you (OFF-MIKE) for a long time (OFF-MIKE).

(OFF-MIKE CONVERSATION)

QUESTION:

Okay, now Sir, I was asking you the question about your desire at a very young age to be in service to this country. Could you tell me something about that?

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

Well, I did decide when I was very young when I was still in school that I wanted to be in public service. And I also wanted to be involved in the community service. And I think for me it was a very personal decision. I was interested in people. I liked helping people. I thought that I was supposed to try to do that if I could. I was raised to believe that. And so it came naturally to me.

QUESTION:

That's perfect. Just what I want. Okay. What do you-- what do you think of the-- the saying that there's no greater thing that you can do then to be involved here and to give? Could you tell me something about that?

QUESTION (cont'd):

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

Well, I think that-- I think all those sayings, you know, that we're-- it's only in giving that we receive, all of those sayings are fundamentally true. They recognize that an important part of our human nature is being connected to other people. And when we're giving of ourselves to other people that's in a way is the ultimate selfishness. Because that's-- there's more fulfillment in that than-- than in just acquiring and never giving back. And I think we're put on this earth to enjoy the things of life, but to give them back to other people who don't have them or need a helping hand. I think it's really a selfish act, not a selfless act. Because people who do it are the happiest people you know.

QUESTION:

That's great. Could you tell me something about (UNINTEL) and how that came about, Sir? (UNINTEL)

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

Yes. I got the idea basically for Americorps (PH) from just talking to people about the-- the desire of young people to go out and serve. Seeing young college students in my home state involved in community service.

And the trouble a lot of our young people were having paying for their college education. So it occurred to me with the declining numbers of young people able to go into the military and serve there that we ought to let young people serve their country for a year or two in their communities helping people solve their problems. And give them a stipend to go to college in-- in return.

And now I'm, you know, over 50,000 have done it. I was just in North Dakota dealing with the terrible floods and there were our young Americorps volunteers working with the Minnesota Conservation Corps trying to roll back the flood and help people deal with the aftermath. That's

PRESIDENT CLINTON (cont'd):

America at its best, too.

QUESTION:

That's great. That's really fine. Sir, there's a quote that you made that we talked about earlier. I'd like you to just paraphrase that (UNINTEL) best you can.

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

Well, I've often said that the era of big government may be over, but the era of big challenges is not. And I mean that in two ways. Number one, you can have a smaller bureaucracy and still have a nation that's very vigorous and active in pursuing its interest and its values. But secondly, a lot of the problems we have in America are people problems. And they have to be handled one on one. You know, you don't solve the welfare problem overnight.

Individual people on welfare find their way to independence, education and work. And individual children have to be mentored. Individual children have to start learning. Individual children have to be made safe. Individual neighborhoods and streets. And what that means is we here in Washington, we can help. There are a lot of things we can and should do.

But in the end, if every community is not organized to succeed because citizens are committed to the proposition they won't put up with destruction and violence and they won't put up with anything less than a decent future for their children, no matter what their racial or economic background, then the rest of what we do here won't amount to a hill of beans.

QUESTION:

That's good. Just give me that statement again. 'Cause I wanna use that-- the quote by itself.

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

Okay. I've said many times that the era of big government is over. But the era of big challenges is not. And what that means is that many of our problems are people problems. They have to be dealt with one on one. These children have to be raised and educated one on one. And that means we need more citizen involvement in every community.

QUESTION:

Okay. You did say something at the end, you say our mission is nothing less than a spark of renewed national sense of obligation, a new sense of duty, a new season of service. I love that.

(OFF-MIKE) could you try that one for me?

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

Yes.

QUESTION:

Sure.

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

Our mission in preparing this country for a new century has to be primarily to (UNINTEL) spark a new sense of citizen obligation. To-- to really create a season of service. To redefine citizenship to include service.

QUESTION:

Okay. That's very good.

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

You know, one point I think is worth making is that so much of the world is being bedeviled today by all these racial and religious and ethnic hatreds by people who share the same country, share the same land, share the same neighborhoods and blocks and hate each other because of artificial differences. Yet America can only continue to lead the world if we reject all that and prove that in this incredibly diverse country we're going to serve each other. And that we'll be strengthened in our own lives as we do it. I think that's a very important point to make.

QUESTION:

When you leave the Presidency, Sir, are you going - what are you gonna do, you know, from a voluntary point of view?

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

Well, I haven't decided exactly yet. But I-- I wanna devote a lot of attention to things that really work to help solve problems. I'm an action-oriented person. I like to do things. And I also want to-- to spend a lot of my-- the rest of my life, however much time I have remaining trying to get people to-- to respect and relate to each other and to serve each other. And to get out of the-- what I think is a totally foolish way of living. Which is hating other people because they're different from you. Or turning a blind eye to their needs when they share your future.

QUESTION:

Are you looking forward to being out of public office to do (OFF-MIKE)?

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

You bet I am. I'm really looking forward to it. I mean I love this job. I love every day of it. And if I weren't (UNINTEL) term-limited I'd probably try to stay in it. But I'm very much looking forward to a new chapter in my life. And to going back to what Harry Truman said was the most important title that man could have in this country, and that's the title of citizen. I'm gonna do my best to be a good one.

QUESTION:

Beautiful. Love that, Sir. Sir, what I'd like

QUESTION (cont'd):

you to do is give me a close. What I need is something to the effect that this summit is for the purpose of directing America to what you need (UNINTEL) to do.

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

Yes.

QUESTION:

The reason that we brought attention to this-- we need it short.

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

We have focused this summit on the needs of our young people because that's where our future lies. And we've got five clear areas that we want Americans, I mean millions of Americans in every community and in-- in this country to work on. To serve as citizen volunteers to make sure we give our kids the future they deserve.

QUESTION:

That's beautiful. And now I'm gonna show the logo of the-- of this Presidents Summit. So I need you to say something like the Presidents Summit (UNINTEL) is gonna be one of the greatest

QUESTION (cont'd):

(UNINTEL) okay? And--

(IRRELEVANT MATERIAL OMITTED)

QUESTION:

And action.

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

The Presidents Summit of Service can be one of the most important things that's happened in this country in years if it succeeds in mobilizing citizens to recognize that their citizenship requires them to serve in every community in America.

QUESTION:

That's great. But now we need you to speak a little slower. And (OFF-MIKE) music at this point. (LAUGHTER)

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

Okay.

QUESTION:

And action.

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

The Su-- the Presidents Summit of Service can be one of the most important things that's happened in this country in years if it mobilizes all of us to do our part in our communities.

PRESIDENT CLINTON (cont'd):

QUESTION:

And just give like a-- a-- a wish-- like a-- a-- a-- like I hope that America joins with me to (OFF-MIKE).

PRESIDENT CLINTON:

I hope America will join with me and-- and our other former Presidents-- no, no, lemme say it again. I got a different (OFF-MIKE). I hope America will join with me and the other Presidents to give this country the future it deserves by serving as citizens for our children's future.

QUESTION:

We're done and we're early.

FEMALE VOICE:

That was terrific.

re: Summit Invitation for SSS Director
date: April 15, 1997
pages: 5, including cover sheet.

Dear Mr. Beaubaire:

Per our telephone conversation today, here is a memo explaining why it would be beneficial to have SSS Director Gil Coronado participate in the Summit for America's Future. As I explained, we have been attempting to make this connection for Director Coronado ever since plans for the Summit were announced. After conversations with Bill Smullen, Trevor Cornwell, Melinda Baskin Hudson, and Diana Fortuna, we were pointed to Mr. Silverman's office as the place where decisions regarding Federal invitees are made.

Thank you for calling me today. Your guidance, and your familiarity with the mechanics of Summit invitations for sub-Cabinet level Feds, were indeed a breath of fresh air.

I sincerely hope Mr. Silverman is as enthusiastic about having Mr. Coronado participate and Mr. Coronado is about making a significant contribution! I know that time is short, so I will be in touch with you at the end of the week to assess progress on this recommendation. Please call me at any time if you have news (my home number is 703 451-0122).

MEMORANDUM FOR STEPHEN B. SILVERMAN, DEPUTY CABINET SECRETARY

THRU: David Beaubaire, Special Assistant (VIA FAX)

FROM: Lewis C. Brodsky, Director for Public and Congressional Affairs

SUBJECT: Recommendation for SSS Participation at the Philadelphia Summit

As you help decide which Federal officials receive invitations to participate in the Summit for America's Future in Philadelphia, please consider the Director of the Selective Service System (SSS), the Honorable Gil Coronado. Since last summer, SSS, under Mr. Coronado's inspired leadership, has been working closely with the Corporation for National Service and the Department of Defense. Each day, SSS is reminding thousands of America's young men that they do not have to wait to be called into service during a future national emergency; they can volunteer to "Serve America" today. President Clinton applauded this effort in a January letter to Director Coronado, a copy of which is enclosed.

As the head of an independent Federal agency that has the best and most complete data base of America's young men, along with sophisticated automation resources to communicate with them, the Director is eager to contribute to (and learn from) the Summit's sessions that examine the roles of communities, corporations and government in fostering volunteerism. He can share his vision of how Selective Service resources can be tapped in at least two ways:

— Selective Service can expand its "Serve America" initiative, originally developed last summer, in which the Agency's routine communication with nearly 5,000 men turning 18 every day is used to encourage them to serve the Nation. Working, perhaps, in cooperation with Youth Service America (YSA), SSS can convey the "volunteerism" message to approximately 2 million men each year. New funding may be minimal because the Agency already pays the cost of printing and mailing registration acknowledgment materials to all men turning 18 who must, by law, register with Selective Service. For example, a promotional message added to the mailings can encourage men to call an 800 number, or visit the YSA Web site. Once connected, they can get more information about local volunteer opportunities spawned from the President's Summit and the mini-summits that follow.

-- The Selective Service System can also offer opportunities for qualified young men and women to volunteer within their own communities as SSS Local Board Members. Such opportunities fit with the Summit's fundamental resource of providing "an opportunity to give back through community service." Local Board members are uncompensated community members who are appointed by the Director of Selective Service, acting on behalf of the President. To the maximum extent practicable, the Boards they form must reflect the racial and national origin diversity of the men in the communities they would serve. They train in matters of law, policy and procedures, standing ready to decide claims for exemptions and deferments should this Nation reinstate a military draft in a crisis. There are 11,000 positions authorized on the more than 2,000 boards throughout America. At any given time, about five percent of the positions have vacancies which must be filled due to turnover, so there is a continuing need for volunteers. To be a board member, an individual must be a least 18 years old, a citizen of the U.S., not serving on active military duty or in the Reserves, and have good standing in the community. SSS pays local travel and per diem expenses for Board Members to attend initial training and annual refresher training.

As Director of the Selective Service System, Mr. Coronado does not report to or through the Department of Defense. He is Presidentially appointed, Senate confirmed, and responsible directly to the President. As the Agency's ninth Director, Mr. Coronado brings a wealth of experience as a community activist to the Federal government. He was the initiating force and guiding hand in the movement behind the creation of National Hispanic Heritage Month, designated by Congress in 1988; holds the President's Award from the League of United Latin American Citizens (1989); and helped found the Hispanic Alliance for Free Trade in 1990. It is fitting that he be tapped for the Summit.

Last month, the Summit's Executive Director, Dr. Stuart Shapiro, wrote to Director Coronado (a copy of the letter is enclosed). Doctor Shapiro noted that the Agency's "ability to reach thousands of men could increase our commitments substantially in responding to the needs of our young people nationwide." At the Summit, Gil Coronado would be able to explore with participants a variety of options and launch this small Federal Agency in new directions. SSS wants to play an increasingly important role in helping America's youth realize a brighter, enriched future.

Respectfully submitted,

Enclosures

Dear Gil:

Thank you for your letter summarizing Selective Service System initiatives. I appreciate your inspired leadership and the efforts of all Selective Service members who continue to preserve the vital links between our All-Volunteer Force and society-at-large.

I commend you for the Selective Service's innovative efforts to increase its peacetime roles and activities. I am particularly impressed with initiatives to promote public service ideals and opportunities for the young men of our Nation. In this regard, the "Serve America" initiative is a noble and worthwhile effort sure to increase civic-mindedness and opportunities in our country.

Thank you again. I wish you and your family the best in the New Year.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Coronado:

Thank you for your letter regarding the Presidents' Summit for America's Future that was forwarded to me by Henry Cisneros.

The prospect of having the Selective Service System involved as a potential clearinghouse for young men interested in volunteerism is promising. The Selective Service System's ability to reach thousands of men could increase our commitments substantially in responding to the needs of our young people nationwide.

Enclosed you will find a copy of a letter which I directed to Lew Brodsky, your Director for Public & Congressional Affairs. As you will note, I indicated to him that Mr. Billy Shore or his staff will be following up with him to assist him in exploring how the Selective Service System can develop a commitment centered around the Summit's goals. Enclosed you will find information that explains the Summit's purpose, goals and how people will be involved.

Again, I want to thank you for your offer to have the Selective Service System participate in this venture to turn the tide for our young people.

Sincerely,

Stuart H. Shapiro, M.D.

TALKING POINTS

5 pages, including this cover

When we scheduled a Summit satellite tour for Secretary Glickman, Sarah Ross set us the attached talking points, giving us the impression these are the "official" talking points for the Summit.

These talking points show very little resemblance to the White House talking points on Service Week.

These talking points don't mention AmeriCorps, don't mention the Peace Corps, and don't mention youth corps --- in fact, they don't mention full-time, stipended service of any kind. They never mention that the Summit is co-sponsored by the Corporation for National Service. They state: "We all agree that government can't do the job alone," but they do not include President Clinton's equally important statement that neither can ucoordinated individuals do the job alone. They list President Clinton and General Powell as equals, but never mention Cisneros or Robb.

I strongly urge you to take whatever steps possible to work with the Summit to alter these talking points and ensure that Administration officials know to use White House or Corporation for National Service talking points.

KEY MESSAGES

WHAT THE SUMMIT IS ABOUT:

The Presidents Summit For America's Future will take place at Independence Hall in Philadelphia this April 27, 28 and 29. All of the living Presidents and General Colin Powell are convening leaders from business, labor, the media, religious and educational institutions, and the volunteer sector in an effort to address the needs and problems that face America's 15 million at-risk children.

The Summit will launch a new, on-going effort -- America's Promise -- aimed at assuring that every child has access to five fundamental resources that are essential to healthy, fulfilling, productive lives.

These resources are:

- an ongoing relationship with a caring adult: mentor, tutor, coach;
- safe places and structured activities during non-school hours to learn and grow;
- a healthy start;
- a marketable skill through effective education; and,
- an opportunity to give back through community service.

We would all agree that government alone can't do the job. Foundations and service providers can't do the job by themselves. The only way to guarantee that children at-risk gain access to these resources, is if ALL Americans become involved in some way in their communities to help children in-need.

HOW IT WILL HAPPEN:

Americans from every walk of life -- from corporate CEOs to citizens in almost every community -- are making specific, measurable commitments aimed at fulfilling one or more of these five fundamental resources.

Importantly, over time, this effort will not just help our children at-risk, but it will make effective citizen service an integral part of the American way of life. This means that helping those in need will no longer be viewed solely as the responsibility of government or service providers; but will be viewed as part of the responsibilities we all have to one another.

EXAMPLES OF LARGER COMMITMENTS GENERATED BY THE SUMMIT:

See Attached List of Commitments to the Summit/America's Promise.

SMALLER EXAMPLES OF COMMITMENTS GENERATED BY THE SUMMIT:

- But these are large examples. The Summit's central message is that every citizen can help, through their churches, school, employers and service organizations.
- For example, the 8th grade class of a small school in Indianapolis has committed to tutor younger students in an inner-city school, to help assure that those kids make the step up to middle school.
- Local bowling clubs can reach out through organizations like their local Boys & Girls Clubs or their Volunteer Center, and provide inner-city children with a new, safe form of recreation.
- Arts and crafts centers can do the same. Athletic clubs can do so too. Employers can provide work-place mentoring opportunities to expose at-risk kids to the workplace. Employees can organize and work with local organizations to read aloud to younger children once or twice a week to help build their literacy skills and ensure a healthy start in life.

WHAT HAPPENS NEXT:

- The President's Summit will launch an organization known as America's Promise.
- America's Promise seeks to mobilize millions of citizens and thousands of organizations to help turn the tide for America's youth.
- America's Promise will monitor commitments made by corporations and service organizations as part of the Summit effort. It will also work to generate more public and private commitments so that more children and at-risk youth have access to a mentor, a safe place, a marketable skill, a healthy start and an opportunity to give back through community service.

There is much, much more that can be done. That's why I'm involved. That's why I hope everyone in my town will become involved.

Those who are interested in becoming involved (in making a difference and in reaching out to America's children and youth) should call the Summit at 1-800-365-0153.
