FEDERAL AGENCY COMMITMENTS TO SUMMIT

All Federal Agencies

Federal agencies will expand their commitment to adopt schools or otherwise establish partnerships with schools in their communities by increasing the number of agency-school relationships from approximately 1,500 schools to 2,000 schools by the year 2000. Working through partnerships established by their agencies with schools across the country, Federal employees work closely with schools in a variety of ways -- volunteering as mentors and tutors, purchasing needed equipment for schools, and holding career days.

Community Anti-Drug Coalitions of America (CADCA), CityKids Foundation, and U.S. Office of National Drug Control Policy, Department of Defense

By the year 2000, CADCA, ONDCP and the City Kids Foundation commit to provide over 200,000 young people in more than 100 cities with skills that will teach them to become community leaders, challenge them to build local community coalitions, and empower them to create and implement projects that directly tackle substance abuse and violence in their communities.

This "National Youth Academy" will combine CADCA's national network of community coalitions and its established training capacity with the peer leadership training methodologies of The City Kids Foundation, the support of the U.S. Office Of National Drug Control Policy, and the integral involvement of the Parents' Resource Institute for Drug Education, Mothers Against Drunk Driving, the National Crime Prevention Council, the Work Group on Health Promotion and Community Development at the University of Kansas, the U.S. Department of Defense Junior R.O.T.C., and the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

Department of Defense -- Department of the Army

- The Army has committed to expand opportunities for active duty, reserve, and retired military personnel to volunteer time as mentors and tutors in schools in their local communities; and will also expand opportunities for young people to give back to their local communities and contribute to the common good through a community service learning module in the Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps (JROTC) program. America's Army is committed to enhancing its association with community-based coalitions by participating as a partner in coalitions designed to keep kids off drugs and out of gangs, mentor young minds, clean neighborhoods of destructive graffiti and provide worthwhile apprenticeships with local businesses. Its dedication to this endeavor is best exemplified by its commitment to work with the Community Anti-Drug Coalitions of America to identify Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps student leaders to help train more than 200,000 youth in more than 100 cities by the year 2000.

Department of Defense -- Department of the Navy

The Department of Navy commits to increase its efforts in tutoring and mentoring, focusing on literacy and anti-drug education. The Navy and Marine Corps, combined, will establish partnerships reaching well over 700,000 youths through the year 2000.

- Through its "Personal Excellence Partnership Flagship," the Navy will increase its current youth tutoring and mentoring by establishing partnerships that reach over 400,000 youths through the year 2000.
- Through its "Campaign Drug Free Flagship," the Navy commits to increase its mentoring and drug education efforts by establishing partnerships that reach over 200,000 youths through the year 2000. Volunteer teams of Navy and Marine Corps Reservists and active-duty Sailors use specially prepared and age-targeted videotapes to convey anti-drug messages to elementary, middle, and high school students.
- Through its "Adopt-A-School" program, the Marine Corps commits to tutoring/mentoring over 100,000 students through the year 2000.
- Through the "Young Marines of the Marine Corps League," approximately 950 adult volunteers (mostly present or former Marines) provide an established curriculum of self-discipline, health and anti-drug education, personal responsibility, and teamwork development for at-risk young people. The Marine Corps commits to reach out to over 20,000 youths through the year 2000.

Department of Defense -- Department of the Air Force

- The Air Force commits to increase its current involvement in programs and initiatives that contribute to the goals of the President's Summit for America's Future by at least 10%, in terms of both the number of children reached and the number of bases involved. Currently almost 1 million children and youths benefit from Air Force programs, and the Air Force commits to increase that number by approximately 100,000 by the year 2000.

The Air Force concentrates its efforts on child development programs, including special education, literacy and creative arts programs, child care and child care research and training programs, and nutrition education programs. Other programs the Air Force participates in include Foster Grandparent Programs, Air Force Base Child Development Centers, Air Force Base Youth Programs, Youth Employment Skills Programs, and Air Force involvement in national accreditation of family day care providers. The success of these Air Force programs is due to the emphasis on partnering with local communities.

- The Civil Air Patrol (CAP), the official auxiliary of the Air Force, commits to increase membership and community activities by 10% by the year 2000. Currently CAP has 33,000 adult members, 500 Air Force Reserve members, and 75 active duty personnel involved in mentoring 21,600 Cadets. CAP combines a structured physical fitness program with a sound moral leadership program for youth. In addition, the CAP Drug Demand Reduction Program provides drug prevention training and a drug-free environment for the Cadets.

Office of the Secretary of Defense

- The Office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD) commits to mobilize children of active duty personnel (more than 300,000 children ages 6-18) to volunteer 1.5 million hours of service annually in on- or off-base community service projects.

- The Office of the Secretary of Defense commits to 100 alliances between the Defense Department youth programs and the Boys & Girls Clubs (B&GC) of America, to reach military youth in local communities and strengthen youth programs at participating bases. Currently 51 of 90 Air Force youth programs have been granted B&GC charters.
- The Department of Defense commits to a 50% increase in high school enrollment in Junior ROTC Career Academies, an alternative to the regular high school JROTC program designed to address the special needs of "at-risk" youth. Thirty JROTC Career Academies are located primarily in inner city schools in large urban areas nationwide.

United States Department of Agriculture

- Food Recovery and Gleaning -- USDA commits to increase significantly the amount of excess food that is recovered and distributed to Americans in need, with a particular emphasis on involving young people in gleaning. The Secretary will convene a National Summit on Food Recovery, modeled on the Presidents' Summit, to call on Americans to commit to increase recovery of excess food. The Department will work with the National Collaboration for Youth, Rock and Wrap It Up, and Food Chain to recover excess food from school lunches and large concerts, and with farmers' markets, rural empowerment zones, and school districts.
- "This Land is Your Land" Service Initiative -- The Department commits to engage 26,000 more Americans in voluntary environmental service, and to offer conservation education to half a million school children by the year 2000, through a 25% increase in the Forest Service Volunteer Program and an increase of over 40% in the number of volunteers in its Natural Resources Conservation Service "Earth Team."
- After-school Programs -- USDA will work with state cooperative extension services and the National 4-H Foundation to expand the 4-H Program to engage an additional 300,000 youth in after-school activities. To meet this goal, the 4-H program will recruit an additional 20,000 teenage and adult volunteers who will serve as program coordinators and mentors. USDA will also provide assistance to the Future Farmers of America, the National Farmers Union, the Nature Conservancy, and the American Heart Association to help those organizations meet their goals to increase after-school activities that provide mentoring, environmental education, and nutrition education to youth.
- Matching Volunteers with Service Opportunities -- USDA will create a new Web site to match up volunteers with service opportunities fighting hunger, improving the environment, and boosting rural communities.

U.S. Department of Justice

- Youth Network -- To promote youth service, the Department commits to create a Youth Network to provide a forum for young people, national organizations, and DOJ to exchange ideas about juvenile violence, delinquency prevention, and volunteerism. Through a web site and national meetings, the Network will offer young people a chance to participate in local delinquency and juvenile justice programs and policies, as well as to contribute to the national debate on these issues. Partners will include the National Crime Prevention Council, Boys and Girls Clubs of America, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, National

- League of Cities, MADD, United National Indian Tribal Youth, Youth Build, and others.
- Juvenile Mentoring Program (JUMP) -- The Department will commit $9.6 million to 52 new JUMP sites across the country, many of them in communities attending the Summit, to support one-on-one mentoring for more than 6,500 at-risk young people, more than doubling the number of sites in the JUMP program. The program uses community volunteers as mentors, and grantees coordinate with local schools.
- Drug Education for Youth -- The Department of Justice, working in partnership with the Departments of the Navy and the Army and the American Legion, will expand the number of DEFY sites from 3 to 30, reaching 1,000 young people. Using military role models to promote positive life choices and reduce the demand for illegal drugs, each DEFY site offers a summer camp program for about 30 children between the ages of 9 and 12 at a Navy, Marine Corps, or other military facility. In the following ten months, the children are mentored by individuals from the local U.S. Attorney's Office, police department, or local university, taken to special events, and taught the value of education, health, and citizenship.
- Public/Private Mentoring Alliance -- The Department of Justice, with the Corporation for National Service, will convene a Public/Private Mentoring Alliance of federal agencies and private national organizations supporting mentoring activities. The alliance will disseminate information nation-wide on the value of and opportunities for mentoring, and explore the possibility of a training and technical assistance initiative to expand effective mentoring programs across the country.
- "Get Involved America" Initiative -- The Department of Justice commits to help volunteers identify specific, practical steps that they can take to reach out to youth and reduce youth violence. DOJ will partner with community, education, and law enforcement groups to create and distribute materials that will help them assist young people.

U.S. Department of Health and Human Services

- Girl Power! -- HHS commits to expand its Girl Power! mentoring campaign by working in partnership with the four African American sororities -- Zeta Phi Beta, Sigma Gamma Rho, Alpha Kappa Alpha, and Delta Sigma Theta. The sororities will commit to implement a mentoring program in their undergraduate chapters. Sorority members will work with their local alumni and with organizations like the National Council of Negro Women to mentor young girls in their communities. In addition, HHS will make a major new commitment to mentorship and teen pregnancy prevention through $1-2 million in new grant programs.
- Nike PLAYCORPS -- HHS and Nike commit to greatly expand their PLAYCORPS program (modeled after AmeriCorps) from 100 coaches in four cities this year to at least 1,000 coaches all over America next year. Piloted last year, PLAYCORPS trains college students to coach/mentor kids in underserved areas in recreational leagues. They are paid $500 -- which goes straight toward their tuition. HHS will also add a Girl Power! component by training coaches specifically on how to work with and inspire girls.

United States Department of Education

- Summer Reading Partners -- The Department of Education and its Partnership for Family Involvement in Education commit to increase the ranks of volunteer reading partners participating in this summer's Read*Write*Now! Initiative from 300,000 to 450,000, and to increase the number of children reading over the summer from 1 million to 1.5 million. The Partnership will identify and recruit reading partners and help establish reading programs in communities nation-wide. Working with appropriate reading organizations, the Department will prepare activity kits for the initiative. Launched in 1995 by the Partnership for Family Involvement in Education to prevent a fall-off in reading skills during the summer months, Read*Write*Now! volunteer reading partners pledge to read and write with a child for 60 minutes a week, and the child pledges to read 30 minutes a day five days a week. Last summer, more than 50 organizations sponsored the initiative, and over 300,000 volunteer reading partners read with one million children.
- After-school Programs -- The Department of Education and its Partnership for Family Involvement in Education commit to work with schools to launch 1,000 new after-school programs nation-wide, with the concurrence of Congress. We will enlist AmeriCorps members, Partnership members, and business and community organizations to volunteer in and help organize these programs. The Partnership will help identify potential sites for the after-school programs and recruit local volunteers. This is a newly proposed program to fund after-school, weekend, and summer activities for youth, based on the authorizing language for the 21st Century Community Learning Centers Program.

U.S. Department of the Interior

- Public Land Corps: Restoring the National Parks through Youth Service -- The National Park Service proposes to expand youth service opportunities to help carry out needed repair and restoration projects in our National Parks. Youth service provides the opportunity for environmental education, mentoring, counseling, and career development curricula, as well as the provision of highly skilled and experienced adult supervisors. NPS proposes to allocate $1-2 million per year to expand youth service opportunities, and will work with youth service organizations, including, but not limited to, the Student Conservation Association, the National Association of Service and Conservation Corps, and the Environmental Careers Organization.
- National Park Service National Junior Ranger Program -- The Department commits to creating a "National Junior Ranger Program" through the Internet, targeted at children who are unable to visit national parks. Today, at over 100 parks nationwide, young people who visit parks have an opportunity to participate in activities which earn them the title of "Junior Ranger." This new electronic program will be designed for children ages seven to eleven, from both urban and rural areas. It will reach our nation's diverse population and stimulate interest in learning more about our natural and cultural heritage and the future of America's public resources.
- National Park Service Volunteer Opportunity System -- The Department commits to sharing with other agencies its new National Park Service Volunteer Opportunity System, which provides a nation-wide listing of volunteer opportunities within the National Parks System on the Internet and the ability to apply electronically for a volunteer position in a specific park.

Federal Emergency Management Agency

- Spring Break Program for High School Seniors -- FEMA commits to offer high school seniors new service opportunities in their communities. These students would help communities prepare for emergencies or disasters by performing mitigation activities in community facilities like day care centers, schools, playgrounds, elderly residences and group facilities, and small businesses. Targeted communities would work with FEMA and state and local emergency officials to identify the natural hazards that threaten their community facilities. FEMA would coordinate the process and supervise volunteers. Local architects and engineers would volunteer to inspect facilities and design mitigation efforts, and local contractors/building trades professionals would volunteer to supervise activities. Local hardware and building supply outlets would donate the materials needed. Local high school seniors would provide the labor during the months of March, April, and May of their senior year.

U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs Voluntary Service program, which just celebrated its 50th year of service to this nation's hospitalized veterans through the work of almost 100,000 volunteers, commits to create new opportunities for young people to serve. By the year 2000, VA will increase by 50% the number of student and youth volunteers in its facilities, bringing the total number of youth volunteers to 15,000.

U.S. School-To-Work Program

By the year 2001, the School-to-Work program will commit to:

- triple the number of employers involved with School-to-Work, so that approximately 600,000 companies have mentoring initiatives or School-to-Work systems within their organizations and are partnering with their local school districts. These companies will commit to not only having students learn in the workplace but also bringing teachers into the workplace; and
- implement a School-to-Work system in every state in the U.S.

Peace Corps

- Through its World Wise Schools program, the Peace Corps commits to significantly increase its global learning partnerships to at least 10,000 teachers by the year 2000, tripling the current number of partnerships with teachers. World Wise Schools connects currently serving and returned Peace Corps Volunteers with U.S. students and teachers. The program educates young Americans about the people and cultures of other countries, and exposes them to positive role models who have engaged in public service as Peace Corps Volunteers.
- Every year, thousands of Americans inquire about the possibility of serving as a Peace Corps Volunteer overseas, signaling the tremendous interest among Americans in serving others. Recognizing that every person may not be immediately suited to overseas service, the Peace Corps commits to provide information on domestic service opportunities to an estimated 50,000 people per year.

U.S. Department of the Treasury

- GREAT Program -- The Department of the Treasury commits to increase the number of students educated in the GREAT curriculum by 10 percent -- or more than 35,000 additional students -- each year through the year 2000. GREAT is a Federal, state, and local partnership that teaches elementary and middle school children to avoid joining gangs and violence. GREAT has already reached more than 1 million American children, educating 350,000 students annually. More than 2,000 law enforcement officers have chosen to join the program as part of community policing initiatives.
- Voluntary Income Tax Assistance -- Treasury commits to assist 400,000 more taxpayers by the year 2000 through its voluntary income tax assistance program -- more than a 20 percent increase from 1996 levels. For 27 years, the IRS has organized volunteers to assist poor and non-English speaking people in paying their taxes. Last year, at over 8,000 sites across the nation, 47,000 volunteers assisted 1.9 million taxpayers in completing their forms.
- Savings Bonds -- Treasury is committed to reaching more Americans through the Savings Bond program by increasing its volunteers by 10%. Since WWII, savings bonds have been a stable and cost effective source of financing for the Federal Government, while providing a convenient and safe opportunity for consumers to save. Almost half of all savings bonds sales are sold with the support of Treasury's National Volunteer Committee, formed by President Kennedy in 1963. It includes business executives and leaders from labor, education, and government.

U.S. Department of Transportation

- Garrett A. Morgan Technology & Transportation Futures Program -- The Department of Transportation commits to establish the Garrett A. Morgan Technology & Transportation Futures Program, which will reach 1 million students by the year 2000 through tutoring, mentoring, and education curricula. The goal is to build a bridge between America's youth and the transportation community. All the agencies of the department will contribute, including the Federal Aviation Administration, Federal Highway Administration, U.S. Coast Guard, Federal Railroad Administration, Federal Transit Administration, Maritime Administration, and National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

- Community Environmental Service Agreement with Senior Citizen Groups -- The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency commits to expand senior citizen volunteer efforts to protect public health and the environment through a partnership with the National Council on the Aging, the Environmental Alliance for Senior Involvement, the Corporation for National Service, and the Administration on Aging at HHS. Senior citizens, a growing and active segment of our population, have a large stake in protecting the environment, not only because they are "at risk" in terms of air and water pollution, but also because they want to protect the health of their grandchildren and provide them with a clean environment. The activities of the Partnership will include training senior citizens to teach children how to protect the health and environment of their communities.

Department of Housing and Urban Development

- Neighborhood Networks -- HUD commits to expand its Neighborhood Networks to create 500 computer centers in assisted or insured housing by the year 2000, more than doubling its current program. These centers will give more than 50,000 households the chance to gain job skills necessary to enter the workforce, and will educate children through after-school programs, mentoring, and internships. HUD will work in partnership with educational, business, and community groups to create, operate, fund, and sustain these computer learning centers.

HUD will challenge owners of assisted housing to provide space, motivation, and involvement in Neighborhood Networks; challenge business leaders to provide equipment and technical assistance, prepare people for the job market, and perhaps most importantly, hire those people motivated to learn and to work; and challenge community organizations to help with fundraising, tutoring, mentoring, and accessing local economic opportunities.

- NCAA Partnership -- HUD commits to a partnership to expand the NCAA's Regional Excellence in Academic Preparation (REAP) camps to four empowerment zone/enterprise communities cities next year, with the goal of 25 cities by the year 2000. REAP camps help troubled youth ages 10-13.
- Lead Paint Poisoning Prevention -- HUD commits to funding new partnerships with parent and community groups, including United Parents Against Lead, to educate more than 10,000 families about lead hazards over the next two years.

U.S. Office of Personnel Management -- OPM commits to give Federal agencies the personnel tools they need to support Federal employees' participation in community service. OPM will publicize the work scheduling flexibility available to Federal employees and actively encourage its use in support of volunteer service.

Selective Service System

- Expand "Serve America" -- The Selective Service commits to inform young men about service opportunities that arise out of the Summit through its "Serve America" program, developed last summer with the Department of Defense and AmeriCorps. Serve America takes advantage of the Selective Service System's routine communication with nearly 5,000 men turning 18 every day to encourage them to serve the Nation.
- Opportunities for Young People on Selective Service Local Boards -- The Selective Service System commits to offer more young men and women the opportunity to serve as uncompensated community volunteers on Local Boards. Boards are prepared to decide claims for exemptions and deferments should this Nation reinstate a military draft in a crisis.

Department of Commerce

The Department of Commerce commits to significantly increase its number of volunteers and partner schools, with the goal of doubling its current numbers by the year 2000. The Department's service initiatives focused on tutoring and mentoring.

Social Security Administration

The Social Security Administration commits to provide its staff and those in communities served by SSA with information about new service opportunities, to hold "Back-to-School" drives for clothes, school supplies drives, and books, and to donate business attire for needy men and women for interviews and first jobs.

Subject: Service Tong Schedule

Of the eight existing tongs, it seems to make sense to try and hit these seven. Bruce Reed will do at least one tomorrow at 1 pm, and may be able to do another on Friday. Otherwise, here's my suggestion on who could do what. Let me know what you think.

PEACE CORPS

MEMORANDUM

To: Steve Silverman
From: Andre Oliver AO
Re: Peace Corps Attendees at Presidents' Summit
Date: 18 April 1997

Steve, as we discussed, Mark Gearan has several Peace Corps representatives who he would like to attend the Presidents' Summit. They include:

- ✓ Sherwood Guernsey, Director of Domestic Programs*
- ✓ Chic Dambach, President of the National Peace Corps Association*
- Ted Eisman, Office of Domestic Programs*
- Susanne Cooper, Head of the Philadelphia Area Peace Corps Association*
- Andre Oliver, Director of Communications
- Brendan Daly, Press Director
- Kimberly Rhodes Cornett, White House Fellow

We would also like to have two exceptional returned Peace Corps Volunteers -- Kathryn Anne Dettmer and Allison Moore -- receive credentials to observe the Summit meetings. These RPCVs are excellent spokespersons for the continued service of returned Volunteers. Brief bios of Kathryn and Allison are attached.

As always, I welcome your thoughts and feedback.

* Returned Peace Corps Volunteers

Returned Peace Corps Volunteers Continuing to Serve

Kathryn Anne Dettmer (Czech Republic 92-94)

Current Hometown: Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

As a Peace Corps Volunteer in the Czech Republic, Kathryn taught English and French in an academic high school and revised the school's English course curriculum. Additionally, she taught teachers English and held monthly meetings with area elementary school English teachers. She also taught English and French at an English language camp for KOSENKA, an environmental/educational NGO. She participated in cultural and environmental projects with the NGO and helped translate for visitors to the center and for grant applications.

After her Peace Corps service, Kathryn entered the Peace Corps Fellows Program at Temple University. Currently, she is finishing her masters degree in secondary education – French. Recently, Kathryn appeared on a 30 minute PBS broadcast about the Fellows Program (WYVE, Channel 15 - Philadelphia).

As a Fellow, Kathryn works as a French teacher teaching 9th, 10th, and 11th grade classes at Girard College, a residential school for functional orphans. Most of her students are from inner-city, poverty backgrounds and are considered "at-risk." Kathryn is also a member of the high school planning and management committee and the curriculum writers' group. She is the advisor to the Girard/Akiba Connection, a cultural exchange/friendship program with Akiba Academy, a Jewish day school.

Allison Moore (Senegal 83-85)

Present Hometown: White Plains, NY

Allison is originally from White Plains, New York (outside of NYC) and graduated with a Sociology degree from Amherst College, including a one year study abroad in France. Soon after graduation, she went to Senegal with Peace Corps to serve as a community development volunteer and organized women's groups for income generation, gardening/fruit orchards, well digging, and health projects. As an African American serving in Africa, she had a unique experience. Upon her return from Senegal, she worked in youth development in New York City; then went back for her MBA from NYU Stearn School of Business; worked in finance at the Toronto Dominion Bank for two years. She's married with a 4-year old girl named Sahara. She is currently working at the YWCA as Director of Outreach, doing youth and community development work. The YWCA is in White Plains, back to the community where she came from. She heads up programs for African American and Hispanic American school age children/youth. She coordinates programs between the schools and the YWCA. She says that she shares her experience in Africa with young people, and even adults, with whom she works. Young African Americans thirst for the knowledge of Africa, and she likes to break down people's assumptions and preconceptions of the way of life in Africa.

TALKING POINTS ON THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR SERVICE AND THE CLINTON'S ADMINISTRATION'S COMMITMENT TO CITIZEN SERVICE

Thursday, April 10, 1997

"The era of big government may be over, but the era of big challenges for our nation is surely not. Citizen service is the main way we recognize that we are responsible for one another. It is the very American idea that we meet our challenges not through heavy-handed government or as isolated individuals, but as members of a true community, with all of us working together."

-- President William J. Clinton, April 5, 1997

Service as a path to good citizenship. The President believes that citizen service is not only an effective answer to a community's problems, it is also an important part of every young person's civic education -- their sense of responsibility for themselves, our community, and our nation. Those who serve gain a greater understanding of their communities and neighbors. In many ways, they learn what it truly means to be an American.

Engaging young people in service through AmeriCorps. While today's challenges require something of all of us, it is especially important that young people take leading roles in shaping their own futures, and gain the sense of citizenship that service helps to provide. That is why the President created AmeriCorps. It is also an important reason for the Service Summit's focus on young people.

AmeriCorps: the basic bargain of opportunity and responsibility. The President often says that one of his proudest moments was creating the Corporation for National Service and AmeriCorps. During the last three years, 50,000 young AmeriCorps participants have earned college tuition by serving their communities, with the basic bargain of getting the opportunity to go to college in return for giving something back to their friends and neighbors.

AmeriCorps: reviving the spirit of service in America. The success of AmeriCorps shows that service can help to meet our most pressing social needs, from renewing our cities to protecting our environment, from helping children learn to read to giving them mentors and someone to look up to. That service often leads to more service -- a typical AmeriCorps member trains or recruits a dozen or more community volunteers. AmeriCorps -- and even larger numbers of Senior Service Corps and student volunteers -- have helped revive the spirit of service in America.

The Presidents' Summit: mobilizing citizen power. From April 27-29, in Independence Hall in Philadelphia, President Clinton and President Bush will convene the first Presidents' Summit On Citizen Service, with the support and leadership of the Corporation For National Service and AmeriCorps, the Points Of Light Foundation, Summit Chairman General Colin Powell and Vice Chairs Henry Cisneros and Lynda Robb. The Summit's goal, like that of AmeriCorps, is to mobilize America's citizen power into a united effort to solve our common problems -- especially those that threaten our young people.

Participation from all sectors of society. Leaders from a broad spectrum will come to the Summit with commitments in hand, concrete pledges of support and volunteers to solve their local problems. In preparation for the summit some of our most prominent corporations and service organizations have already stepped forward.

An unprecedented bipartisan Summit. Every living former President will attend or send a representative. We hope this will serve as an example that there are common national values that unite us all. The idea of service is such a value.

A special focus on children, to help prepare them for the 21st Century. No task facing is more crucial than preparing our children for the future. To do that, we must help our children and families overcome the challenges of society today: the burdens of illiteracy and poor health, the lure of tobacco, alcohol and drugs; the need to acquire the tools to succeed in a global economy. That is why the Summit will have a special emphasis on service aimed at America's children.

In preparation for the Summit, the President has already:

- Announced a new National Week of Service (April 13-19), with AmeriCorps and Peace Corps alumni engaging young people in service across the country;
- Called on all states to make service a part of high school and middle school education;
- Launched his National Service Scholarships, offering $1,000 scholarships (half provided by the government, half by local civic groups and businesses) to help students who perform outstanding service pay for college;
- Highlighted a recent Brandeis study that shows that when you begin to serve at a young age, schoolwork improves and there is a good chance you will keep serving in years to come.

In the coming weeks before the Summit, the President will:

- Recognize service and volunteers working for children at the White House Early Childhood Conference on April 17;
- Recognize service, volunteers, and public-private partnerships on Net Day, on April 19;
- Play major role at the Presidents' Service Summit in Philadelphia, which he will attend from April 27-28. (The Vice President, the First Lady, and Mrs. Gore will also attend.)

Monday - Morning

11-A

By way of background, the President's Summit For America's Future will take place at Independence Hall in Philadelphia this April 27, 28 and 29. President Clinton, Former President Bush, General Colin Powell and others are convening leaders from business, labor, the media, religious and educational institutions, and the volunteer sector in an effort to ensure that all American youth have access to five fundamental resources:

- an ongoing relationship with a caring adult: mentor, tutor, coach;
- safe places and structured activities during non-school hours to learn and grow;
- a healthy start;
- a marketable skill through effective education; and,
- an opportunity to give back through community service.

The Summit will be both a celebration of our nation's heritage of volunteer citizen service and a call to action. It will be a call to commitment -- for Americans to pledge to serve; for each of us to put our individual gifts to work for the common good; for us to renew the sense of civic responsibility that has served us well throughout our history as a nation.

Attached is additional information about the Summit. Please contact Sarah Ross at 703-684-4500 extension 139 with questions or to confirm your participation.

Thank you for your consideration.

DRAFT MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

THROUGH: SYLVIA MATHEWS

FROM: STEVE SILVERMAN AND ~~LORRIE MCHUGH~~

Subject: Cabinet's Participation in the President's Summit For America's Future

Approximately 15 Cabinet and 20 Sub-Cabinet officials are expected to participate in the President's Summit on America Future. Talking points and copies of both your recent radio address on National Service and Mrs. Clinton's teleconference have been widely distributed to all Administration surrogates and they have been encouraged to incorporate similar language into their daily speeches. Cabinet Affairs on a daily basis have encouraged the Cabinet to pro-actively talk about Service, your leadership and commitment to this issue, and the Administration's record on creating strong public-private partnerships which benefit the average American citizen.

What's speaking?
Gary
Below is brief summary of the media activity and efforts of your appointees to get this message out leading up to the Summit.

NATIONAL SERVICE AND VOLUNTEER WEEK

We have worked to ensure the Cabinet agencies were active during National Service and Volunteer Week highlighting, in particular, AmeriCorps and this Administration's leadership in encouraging National Service. OPM Director Jim King, Attorney General Janet Reno, Secretary Rodney Slater are just a few of the members of your Cabinet who did events with Americorps volunteers. Deputy Interior Secretary John Garamendi participated in a press conference in Denver with Governor Romer and others to promote the upcoming summit and SBA Administrator Aida Alvarez hosted an event lauding the good works of SCORE volunteers.

SATELLITE TV AND RADIO INTERVIEWS

Many members of your Cabinet have been active going out the Summit Headquarters in Alexandria, Virginia and doing Satellite feeds to regional media markets. Secretary Shalala and Administrator Browner went out last week. Secretary Riley and Secretary Glickman will be there this week. The Attorney General, Director McCaffrey, and Secretary Cuomo are all in the process of rescheduling times.

TONGS

Harris Wofford, Henry Cisneros and Bruce Reed are doing press tongs all week highlighting....

RADIO AND PRINT REPORTERS

Media Affairs has assigned markets for the Cabinet agencies to pitch both for Earth Day and National Service media. Attached is the breakdown of the media markets and which agency they were assigned to.

THE SUMMIT ITSELF

We are working to develop a intensive schedule for Monday and Tuesday for the Cabinet who are traveling to Philadelphia to do regional media interviews while there. A conference call is scheduled for the Thursday for the Cabinet to focus their attention on the message that we expect them to deliver both in the breakout sessions and in their media interviews. A similar call is scheduled for Friday for the Sub-Cabinet appointees who will be attending the Summit as well. In addition we continue to have daily conference call with agency communications and scheduling staff to review logistics and message for the Philadelphia Summit.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE
CABINET CONFERENCE CALL

Thursday, April 24, 1997

TALKING POINTS

- We appreciate your commitment and participation in this Summit. Your role is critical to the ultimate success of the Administration's involvement.
- The negotiations have been overall successful: the program more closely reflects the Administration's vision and provides a good opportunity for us to talk about service in America and highlight the contributions of the Administration to this important issue.
- There are five fundamental themes for America's youth:
 - an ongoing relationship with a caring adult;
 - safe places to learn and grow;
 - a healthy start;
 - a marketable skill through effective education; and
 - an opportunity to give back through community service.
- There are several historic points about this summit. First, the Presidents and First Ladies will join in the call to commitment and action. Second, local leaders from diverse communities will announce their commitments to action. And third, there will be plans of action developed by almost 100 communities and all 50 states.
- In addition, there are extensive commitments being made by every Federal agency. These commitments are important and taken together provide an excellent model for the rest of the country to emulate. I know that these commitments represent a lot of work on the part of the agencies and I want to thank all of you for your work.
- Your participation and presence at the Summit further demonstrates the Administration's commitment. Some of you will be speakers in plenary sessions, others in break out panels and all of you in working group sessions. Your contributions to all of those sessions will have an enormous and positive impact on the conference in general and the community service plans specifically. This will demonstrate the significance of the partnering role the federal government has on these issues.
- I also encourage you to spend as much time as you are able in the satellite and press centers. This activity will provide a great opportunity to continue to get the message out.

TALKING POINTS ON THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR SERVICE AND THE CLINTON'S ADMINISTRATION'S COMMITMENT TO CITIZEN SERVICE
Thursday, April 10, 1997

"The era of big government may be over, but the era of big challenges for our nation is surely not. Citizen service is the main way we recognize that we are responsible for one another. It is the very American idea that we meet our challenges not through heavy-handed government or as isolated individuals, but as members of a true community, with all of us working together."
-- President William J. Clinton, April 5, 1997

Service as a path to good citizenship. The President believes that citizen service is not only an effective answer to a community's problems, it is also an important part of every young person's civic education -- their sense of responsibility for themselves, our community, and our nation. Those who serve gain a greater understanding of their communities and neighbors. In many ways, they learn what it truly means to be an American.

Engaging young people in service through AmeriCorps. While today's challenges require something of all of us, it is especially important that young people take leading roles in shaping their own futures, and gain the sense of citizenship that service helps to provide. That is why the President created AmeriCorps. It is also an important reason for the Service Summit's focus on young people.

AmeriCorps: the basic bargain of opportunity and responsibility. The President often says that one of his proudest moments was creating the Corporation for National Service and AmeriCorps. During the last three years, 50,000 young AmeriCorps participants have earned college tuition by serving their communities, with the basic bargain of getting the opportunity to go to college in return for giving something back to their friends and neighbors.

AmeriCorps: reviving the spirit of service in America. The success of AmeriCorps shows that service can help to meet our most pressing social needs, from renewing our cities to protecting our environment, from helping children learn to read to giving them mentors and someone to look up to. That service often leads to more service -- a typical AmeriCorps member trains or recruits a dozen or more community volunteers. AmeriCorps -- and even larger numbers of Senior Service Corps and student volunteers -- have helped revive the spirit of service in America.

The Presidents' Summit: mobilizing citizen power. From April 27-29, in Independence Hall in Philadelphia, President Clinton and President Bush will convene the first Presidents' Summit On Citizen Service, with the support and leadership of the Corporation For National Service and AmeriCorps, the Points Of Light Foundation, Summit Chairman General Colin Powell and Vice Chairs Henry Cisneros and Lynda Robb. The Summit's goal, like that of AmeriCorps, is to mobilize America's citizen power into a united effort to solve our common problems -- especially those that threaten our young people.

Participation from all sectors of society. Leaders from a broad spectrum will come to the Summit with commitments in hand, concrete pledges of support and volunteers to solve their local problems. In preparation for the summit some of our most prominent corporations and service organizations have already stepped forward.

An unprecedented bipartisan Summit. Every living former President will attend or send a representative. We hope this will serve as an example that there are common national values that unite us all. The idea of service is such a value.

A special focus on children, to help prepare them for the 21st Century. No task facing is more crucial than preparing our children for the future. To do that, we must help our children and families overcome the challenges of society today: the burdens of illiteracy and poor health, the lure of tobacco, alcohol and drugs; the need to acquire the tools to succeed in a global economy. That is why the Summit will have a special emphasis on service aimed at America's children.

In preparation for the Summit, the President has already:

- Announced a new National Week of Service (April 13-19), with AmeriCorps and Peace Corps alumni engaging young people in service across the country;
- Called on all states to make service a part of high school and middle school education;
- Launched his National Service Scholarships, offering $1,000 scholarships (half provided by the government, half by local civic groups and businesses) to help students who perform outstanding service pay for college;
- Highlighted a recent Brandeis study that shows that when you begin to serve at a young age, schoolwork improves and there is a good chance you will keep serving in years to come.

In the coming weeks before the Summit, the President will:

- Recognize service and volunteers working for children at the White House Early Childhood Conference on April 17;
- Recognize service, volunteers, and public-private partnerships on Net Day, on April 19;
- Play major role at the Presidents' Service Summit in Philadelphia, which he will attend from April 27-28. (The Vice President, the First Lady, and Mrs. Gore will also attend.)

The following are our cabinet assignment suggestions for outreach surrounding the upcoming National Service summit. These markets were chosen based on the delegations attending the conference and interested calls. Outreach should include radio and print reporters in each of these cities.

their involvement can yield positive results.

A recent study by Brandeis University and Abt Associates offers proof of what we've known all along: that service-learning works, it's cost-effective, and it's good for students and the community. Service-learning programs can help young people build self esteem, can encourage them to make better grades in school, and can inspire them become active volunteers in their communities throughout their lives.

So let us all strive to make this city's schools our nation's pride by working together, taking responsibility, and serving each other. It's never too soon or too late, whether we are 8, 18, or 80 years of age, to learn for ourselves what the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. meant when he said, "Everyone can be great because everyone can serve."

And I thank you for doing your part.

FIRST LADY HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
REMARKS AT NEW YORK UNIVERSITY
NATIONAL SERVICE EVENT
NEW YORK, NY
APRIL 9, 1997

Thank you. I am delighted to be here at NYU and to meet so many young people who are committed to making a difference in our communities. Thank you for your moving testimonials.

I am happy to find that the spirit of service is flourishing at this University both through the President's C-Team, and your model AmeriCorps program, Project SafetyNet. Two years ago, I had the chance to see firsthand a peer mediation and conflict resolution workshop led by Project SafetyNet volunteers at Seward Park High School. The sense of excitement and discovery in the voices of both the volunteers and the students was unmistakable.

I want to thank each of the student volunteers here today for reaching out to the community beyond the walls of this university, for sharing your time and talents with your youngest and neediest neighbors, for inspiring them to say no to violence and yes to school, college and the future. Too many of our children are growing up without the love and guidance of a responsible adult; too many children are living in communities fragmented along racial, ethnic, religious, or economic lines; too many have lost faith in their futures. You are proof that our young people can be indispensable leaders in addressing these most pressing needs and challenges.

Five years ago, my husband made national service a centerpiece of his campaign for the presidency. One of his proudest moments as President came when he signed the bill creating the Corporation for National Service and AmeriCorps. It reflected his belief, reinforced over a lifetime, that citizen service can not only be an effective answer to a community's problems, it can also be an important part of every young person's civic education -- of their sense of responsibility for themselves, our community, and our nation. Over the last three years, tens of thousands of Americans have improved their own lives as they served our country. They have earned money for college by cleaning up rivers, working with police to make their neighborhoods safer, helping children learn to read.

And, as many of you can testify, AmeriCorps volunteers have gained much more than college tuition, they have gained a greater understanding of the communities they live in and the neighbors they live with. AmeriCorps volunteers have learned what the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. meant when he said, "Everyone can be great because everyone can serve." In many ways, they have learned what it truly means to be an American.

Service is the lifeblood of our democracy and the hallmark of American citizenship. In America, we have always put our democratic values into action through service. More than 150 years ago, Alexis de Tocqueville observed that volunteer organizations and community groups had become a distinctive part of our national life. As a people, we have long believed -- and acted on the belief -- that we can change the world by working together, taking responsibility and serving each other.

I just got back from a two-week visit to several countries in Africa that are now making the difficult transition from dictatorships to democracy and the free market. While I was there, I saw many hopeful signs of democracy at work: Free and fair elections, thriving marketplaces, fledgling newspapers. But perhaps the most encouraging sign that democracy had begun to take root was the fact that the people themselves had begun to recognize the power that they had as individual citizens. They had begun to form independent grassroots networks and community organizations to shape their countries' as well as their own destinies.

Our faith in citizen service has always bound us as nation. Later this month, the President and I, along with Vice-President Gore, former President Bush, General Colin Powell and a host of community volunteers and public servants will gather in Philadelphia for the first ever Presidents' Summit for America's Future. We will be gathering to commit ourselves to making sure that every child has the opportunity to fulfill his or her God-given potential and to kindling the spirit of service in every individual, every home, and every community across America.

It is the President's hope that this summit will inspire Americans to continue to build partnerships with each other and among all sectors of our community -- schools, churches, businesses and government -- and work together on behalf of our children and our common future.

I can think of no task more urgent than helping our children navigate the challenges of growing up and achieve their hopes and dreams. I thank each and every one of you for doing your part.

NATIONAL VOLUNTEER WEEK
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA HIGHLIGHTS

APRIL 13-19, 1997

Food and Friends: This is an AIDS Service Organization that delivers three freshly-prepared meals to nearly 500 D.C. residents living with HIV/AIDS. AmeriCorps members and community volunteers prepare nutritious, wholesome foods at this AmeriCorps National AIDS fund site. Meals are delivered six days a week.

Bright Beginnings: This AmeriCorps, HUD, HHS, Freddie Mac and Junior League partnership places volunteers participating in special lunchtime programming for the children at the developmental day care center for homeless pre-schoolers. For the 25 children in the program, aged 2 ½ to 5, it's the only hot meal in their day. Activities also include reading aloud to the children, who accompany stories with interpretive dance.

Shaw Earth Cleanup Day: April 19. This is a community-organized event in the District's Shaw neighborhood. Volunteers will clean from 9:00 a.m. until noon. There is a community celebration from noon to 1:00 at Kennedy Playground, a focal point of the Shaw community. Over 20 community groups are sponsoring this event; food and musical performances are being donated.

Cardozo Senior High School: AmeriCorps*NCCC is again teaming up with D.C. Public Schools to address critical facilities problems. Projects include the repair of deteriorating walls and painting hallways and restrooms of the upper three floors of the 83 year-old school in Northwest D.C. Renovations are being conducted from 1:00 -- 9:00 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, and 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Saturdays. The First Lady will visit Friday, April 18.

Woodlawn Cemetery: From 8:00 to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturdays, the District's oldest integrated cemetery is being renewed by a team of AmeriCorps*NCCC volunteers. The cemetery, which recently was named a national historic site, is overgrown with vegetation after years of neglect. Thirty-five thousand individuals are buried on 22 acres of cemetery land.

Hands-on D.C.: April 12. A one-day work-a-thon repairs D.C. public schools and raises scholarship funds. Three thousand volunteers will work on 30 public schools. The NCCC will have a painting team at Cardozo High School, Eastern High School, Duke Ellington School of the Arts, Anacostia High School, and Johnson Junior High. An AmeriCorps team is also being created.

The Villager: This 20-unit apartment complex in Southeast D.C. is owned and managed by the D.C. Housing Authority. The building has deteriorated and is undergoing a renewal program. AmeriCorps*NCCC Corps members are repairing doors, installing floor tiles, replacing smoke detectors and making other vital improvements. Renovations are taking place Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 4:30.

Livingston Manor: This project, sponsored by Jubilee Enterprises, a private, non-profit organization that obtains vacant and run down apartment complexes and renovates them for rent to lower-income individuals/families at a reduced amount, is currently station at Livingston Manor in Southeast D.C. AmeriCorps*NCCC members are repairing or replacing doors, floors, windows and correcting plumbing and electrical problems. A tutoring complex has also been established one block from the Manor where two Corps members spend afternoons tutoring students. The renovations schedule is Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 4:30.

J. B. Johnson Nursing Center: AmeriCorps*NCCC Corps members are supporting an understaffed nursing home by providing direct care and attention to residents. Corps members lead daily activities and plan or support recreational events. Corps members are on-site Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 4:30.

Mitzvah Day: April 13. The Washington Hebrew Congregation has organized a day of service for young people and their families. Meals will be prepared for the hungry, vacant lots will be cleaned, and a blood drive will be conducted.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

April 5, 1997

RADIO ADDRESS BY THE PRESIDENT
TO THE NATION

The Oval Office

10:06 A.M. EST

THE PRESIDENT: Good morning. I want to talk with you today about how we can make this glorious spring a season of service all across America. As I have said many times, the era of big government may be over, but the era of big challenges for our nation is surely not. Citizen service is the main way we recognize that we are responsible for one another. It is the very American idea that we meet our challenges not through heavy-handed government or as isolated individuals, but as members of a true community, with all of us working together.

On April 27th through 29th, at Independence Hall in Philadelphia, we will be convening an historic Presidents' Summit on Service. I will be joined by President Bush, General Colin Powell, by every living former president or his representative, by other prominent Americans, including former HUD Secretary Henry Cisneros and Lynda Robb. Every person, business or organization represented at the summit will have already committed to take specific steps to help to serve our children and to rebuild our communities. Our mission is nothing less than to spark a renewed national sense of obligation, a new sense of duty, a new season of service.

I hope that many activities in the weeks leading up to this wonderful event will make all Americans think about the duty all of us owe to one another. Citizen service can take many shapes -- it can mean volunteering nights or on weekends in a religious group or neighborhood association, or devoting full years of your life to service like those the Peace Corps or the Jesuit Volunteer Corps members do.

Over the past four years, we have worked to harness this citizen energy in so many ways. I am especially proud of AmeriCorps, the national service program I proposed when I ran for President, that we launched the very next year. Since its creation, 50,000 young people have earned college tuition by serving their communities, with the basic bargain of getting the opportunity to go to college in return for giving something back to their friends and neighbors.

The success of AmeriCorps shows that service can help to meet our most pressing social needs, from renewing our cities to protecting our environment, to immunizing poor children, to giving them mentors and someone to look up to. And that service often leads to more service -- a typical AmeriCorps member trains or recruits a dozen or more community volunteers.

To focus the American people on the importance of this summit and the urgency of service, I'll issue a proclamation designating the week of April 13th through 19th as national service week in America. During that week, over a million young people will participate in 3,000 events across our nation, cleaning up neighborhoods and working with children.

I've asked the thousands of AmeriCorps alumni and returned Peace Corps volunteers to participate as well, reaching out to youth in their communities, speaking in schools, recruiting volunteers and teaching a new generation about the power of service. I've very pleased that some of them have joined our Peace Corps Director, Mark Gearan, here with me today.

I hope that they will teach that citizen service cannot be a pursuit for just a week or a month, that the ethic of service must extend throughout a lifetime. No one is too young to serve, as a recent study by Brandeis University shows -- when you begin to serve at a young age, schoolwork improves and there is a good chance you will continue to serve in the years to come. It's a good habit that's hard to break. And no one is too old to serve, either. But we must find even more ways to encourage our young people to begin to serve.

I'm joined here today by some young men and women from Maryland, along with that State's Lieutenant Governor, Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, who has been a leader in making Maryland the first state in our nation to require that every student perform some service as a condition of high school graduation. One of the students meeting with me gathered food and clothing for the needy; another, dyslexic herself, taught disabled students; another tutors young children at a Head Start center.

Today I challenge schools and communities in every state to make service a part of the curriculum in high school and even in middle school. There are many creative ways to do this -- including giving students credit, making service part of the curriculum, putting service on a student's transcript or even requiring it, as Maryland does. This week, the National Association of Secondary School Principals agreed to introduce service learning to more than 2 million students, and I hope they'll work to find even more creative ways to involve service. States and schools, of course, should be free to decide this for themselves. But every young American should be taught the joy and the duty of serving, and should learn it at the moment when it will have the most enduring impact on the rest of their lives.

Two weeks ago, applications went out to high school principals all around our nation, inviting them to select a student in that school who has performed outstanding service, thereby making them eligible for a $1,000 scholarship. Under this new initiative, which we launched last year, our national government will put up $500 for each student if it is matched by local communities. Already, a host of civic organizations -- including the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Moose International, the Lions Clubs, the U.S. Jaycees -- have accepted our challenge to work with their local chapters to provide matching funds for these scholarships. And public servants from agencies like the Agriculture Department will continue to work as partners with these schools, sending volunteers to work with teachers and acting as mentors to students.

I hope all of you will join in the spirit of the Presidents' Summit on Service, and take part in the national week of service beginning April 13th. Service is in our deepest national tradition. Millions of young Americans in my generation were inspired by the call to service, issued so often from this very office, by President Kennedy. Now it is up to all of us to take up President Kennedy's challenges -- remembering, as he said, that every person can make a difference, and every person must try.

Thanks for listening.

RPCV service activities during National Volunteer Week

Colorado

On April 12, a group of Colorado RPCVs will be assisting in an urban reforestation project called Denver Digs Trees. The program is sponsored by a foundation called The Park People, which raises money for Denver's parks and public trees. RPCVs will distribute and plant trees along urban streets where elderly property owners are physically unable to do it themselves. The project director of Denver Digs Trees is an RPCV named Gertie Grant, who was a PCV in Malaysia between 1967-69.

Connecticut

On April 19, over 20 RPCVs in Connecticut will be helping to restore a Red Cross Family Housing shelter by painting, cleaning, gardening, and constructing shelves. The shelter, located at 107 Daddario Road, Middletown, houses approximately 14 homeless families at any given time, and it also runs an after school program for the sheltered children. The event is being organized by Lucy McMillan, the director of the shelter, who was a Peace Corps Volunteer in Togo between 1986-1989.

Northern California

- For the past 5 years, RPCVs in Northern California have been helping to restore trails at Point Reyes National Seashore, north of San Francisco. This April 26, about 20 RPCVs will continue this collaboration with the National Park Service, by cutting and hauling out underbrush to make trails passable for hikers.
- About 15 RPCVs in Northern California will be also assisting in Christmas in April on April 26, in Contra Costa County nonprofit group that mobilizes volunteers to paint, repair, and renovate houses in underserved communities and amongst the elderly.
- On April 12, about 10 RPCVs will be helping the California State Park Service to restore a hiking trail on Mt. Diablo, in Contra Costa County. This is part of an ongoing monthly collaboration.

Louisiana

On April 19, about 50 RPCVs will assist in an urban beautification project by razing an abandoned house situated on a scenic Louisiana bayou. The project is organized by a group called Les Reflections de Bayou, and it seeks to maintain the environmental quality of bayous in the Mississippi delta area.

Massachusetts

On May 10 and 11, the Boston Area Returned Peace Corps Volunteers are sponsoring a community service project with another all-volunteer organization in Boston, People Making a Difference through Community Service, Lori Tsuruda, director. The project will involve 20 or more RPCVs working to improve a community garden located at Washington and Rutland St. in Boston's south end. Among other things, RPCVs will be digging a long, deep trench to allow proper drainage of water run-off from an adjoining parking lot to prevent erosion of the community garden.

New Jersey

On April 19th, 1997, the Philadelphia Area Returned Peace Corps Volunteers will be volunteering to assist Habitat for Humanity in the construction of a house at 7th and Clinton St., Camden, N.J. An estimated 20 RPCVs will be participating.

New York

RPCVs of Greater New York will join local soup kitchens in providing food to the homeless. On April 10 and May 8, they will be at the Central Synagogue, at 55th Street and Lexington, and on Sundays April 13 and May 11, they will be at the St. Xavier's Church, 55 W. 15th Street, between 5th and 6th. The contact for these projects is Ingrid Buntschuh, 212-678-2380.

New York and Chicago

New York and Chicago RPCVs are involved in the Global Awareness Program, a project that is sending a student ambassador from each of 34 high schools in New York (25) and Chicago (9), representing over 16,000 students, to Navajo reservation schools in New Mexico and Arizona. Specifically, the students will be going to Wingate, New Mexico and in Arizona, to Tuba City and Dennehotso. They will be visiting the schools between April 12-22. The program has been in operation since 1986. These students are chosen based on essays they submitted as part of a selection process. In addition, the Navajo reservation will be sending representatives from their schools to New York and Chicago this year, beginning on April 6.

Ohio

On April 19, 10 to 20 Cincinnati RPCVs will be joining with assisting in general fix-up and repairs at the Kirby Elementary School, located at 1710 Bruce Ave., is part of a city-wide school restoration day organized by Cincinnati Public Schools.

Oregon

•On April 9, West Cascade RPCVs will be providing 16 volunteers for the "Chef's Night Out," a fund-raiser for Food for Lane County, the local food bank. The event will be held at the Hult Center in Eugene.

- Starting April 5, West Cascade RPCVs will be providing a volunteer each Saturday to help supervise the First Place Family Shelter, at 1996 Amazon Parkway. The RPCV group has donated $1,000 to the center, which handles 40-50 people/day, and this marks the beginning of an ongoing collaboration whereby the group has pledged 500 volunteer hours to the shelter over the next year.

- On April 26th, about 10 RPCVs will be painting the childcare center at the First Place Family Shelter.

Pennsylvania

- The Philadelphia Area Returned Peace Corps Volunteers will be assisting the Greater Philadelphia Food Bank on Saturday, April 19, 1997. Between 10 to 20 RPCVs will be breaking down large bulk food packages, sorting and then repacking the food for distribution to the most needy citizens of Philadelphia. The work project will occur at the Food Bank warehouse at 3rd and Berks St. in Philadelphia, starting at 10:00 a.m. and continuing until 2:00 p.m.

- On April 19th, the Philadelphia Area Returned Peace Corps Volunteers will be assisting a women's shelter, the Agape House for Women, to renew and refurbish the garden/community area the RPCVs developed for the shelter last year. They will be planting, raking, adding wood chips, cleaning and painting. The Agape house is located at 2020 North Woodstock Street in Philadelphia. Approximately 20-30 RPCVs will participate, starting at 10:00 a.m. The entire garden area has become an important community center, with open space, picnic tables, and benches. The shelter, with support from the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, does a lot of community outreach including meals and activities for neighborhood children.

National volunteer week/AmeriCorps

AmeriCorps projects in states in which RPCV's are already engaged

Colorado

Denver: NCCC is already joining the RPCV urban reforestation project. And members and volunteers will converge upon the Sheridan Family Resource Center to build new plots for a community garden, to lead children in painting a mural on the garden's fence, to construct paths throughout, and to host other community groups in a service fair to attract more volunteers of all ages.

Lakewood: national service and community volunteers are building mile of new trail in Green Mountain Park. Repair and renovation of existing trail includes closing off "social trails" and repairing seasonal damage.

Connecticut

Hartford: national service members are hosting a volunteer fair at the State Capitol Concourse, with a focus on recruiting more youth to service.

Linking San Francisco is holding a fair for 250 children who attend their after-school programs.

San Jose: AmeriCorps Members and InnVisions, a local nonprofit, will begin renovating the Julian Street Inn, a shelter for the mentally ill homeless.

Sacramento: for the first two weeks in April members will collect new and used books to promote literacy and develop an interest in reading among at-risk youth. Collected books will benefit several after-school tutoring and mentoring programs in the county.

On April 26, 100 AmeriCorps alumni from across the country will be traveling to Philadelphia for their first national conference. Plans are underway to spend Saturday volunteering at HOPE for Healthy Kids Day performing door-to-door outreach to educate parents on health issues, including immunization, asthma and lead poisoning. Sunday alumni will volunteer at the Germantown Avenue project.

other interesting projects underway with AmeriCorps that could host RPCV's

Rhode Island

Providence: hundreds of national service members and community volunteers will actively participate in a week-long reading improvement initiative across the state. Students at Marshall Middle School are developing a service project with AmeriCorps Members ... painting murals, lockers, and landscaping the school yard. The project is being designed and implemented by the students themselves. Ben & Jerry's is providing ice cream for the 500 volunteers.

Indiana

Fort Wayne: 21st Century Scholars is an AmeriCorps program that will offer after school tutorials for youth at local libraries throughout the week. Scholars will help other youth with homework and will hold group discussions on how an education builds a strong future.

Wisconsin

Milwaukee: The YMCA is hosting a citywide clean up project and is expecting 1,000 young people to participate, all recruited from the Y's.

Michigan

Frendale/Oakland County: AmeriCorps members and volunteers will paint murals on the exterior walls of the Pike Street Boys and Girls Club. Rick French of the Corporation for National Service is available to work with your staff in coordinating these events with the local AmeriCorps volunteers. He can be reached at (202) 606-5000, extension 196.
- (2) Cabinet Secretaries who are unable to travel next week should consider doing events in DC which will highlight the Administration's support for Service. If you need help in planning a D.C. based service event, attached are AmeriCorps events that are happening next week that could include Cabinet participation. Rick French of the Corporation for National Service is available to work with your staff in coordinating these events as well.

FIRST LADY HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
COLUMN FOR RELEASE APRIL 23, 1997
TALKING IT OVER/CREATORS SYNDICATE

For a few weeks every fall, when the [what crop?] fields around Chicago were ripe for harvesting, the children of Mexican migrant farm workers would enroll at my elementary school. I might never have gotten to know them if my mother hadn't persuaded me, along with other members of my church youth group, to babysit the migrants' younger children on Saturdays so that their older siblings -- my classmates -- could help their parents in the fields.

Just seeing the crowded camp where the farm workers lived made me realize the difficulty of my classmates' lives. I had never before known people who lived in trailers. However, it wasn't the differences, but the similarities between these families and my own that struck me most.

As soon as they heard the buses bringing their fathers back from the fields, the children ran as fast as they could to greet them. I instantly recognized their excitement. I felt the same way when my own father came home from work.

Those Saturdays gave me a taste of what volunteering can mean in one's life -- from tutoring a child for a few hours a week to picking up litter on a highway to representing a needy client in court for free. All of us can make a difference in our communities and gain a greater understanding of our neighbors simply by reaching out and offering a helping hand. But now, years later, I realize that the meaning of service goes well beyond volunteering. It is the very

American idea that we meet our challenges not through heavy-handed government or as isolated individuals, but as members of a true community, with all of us working together. It's how we recognize our duties and obligations to one another in our daily lives and how we come together in our democracy to promote the common good.

We know simply from looking around us that volunteer efforts are not enough to address all the problems in our communities. While it's tempting and easy to think that government can step out where volunteers have stepped in, private and individual charity alone can not meet all of the many pressing and complex needs facing our society. Our government can and must also be an important partner with organizations and citizens to provide many of the important services all Americans need to fulfill their God-given potentials.

Take the recent floods in North Dakota, for example. Bill flew to Grand Forks this week to meet the numerous community heroes and volunteers who worked night and day to keep the waters at bay or rescue fellow citizens from their homes. But he also met with the federal emergency management coordinators and professional rescue workers who worked tirelessly to save lives and control the flood waters. Without them or the federal assistance that will be needed to rebuild the state once the waters recede, the people of North Dakota would certainly have a much more difficult time recovering from this natural disaster.

Government can also be an important catalyst in mobilizing the spirit of service in communities all across our country. One of my husband's proudest moments as President came when he signed the bill creating the Corporation for National Service and AmeriCorps. It reflected his belief, reinforced over a lifetime, that citizen service can not only be an effective answer to a community's problems, it can also be an important part of every young person's civic education -- of their sense of responsibility for themselves, our community, and our nation. Over the last three years 50,000 Americans have improved their own lives as they served our country. They have earned money for college by cleaning up rivers, working with police to make their neighborhoods safer, immunizing children and helping them learn to read.

On Sunday, my husband and former President Bush, along with summit organizers Gen. Colin Powell, Henry Cisneros and Lynda Robb, will convene a three-day national summit in Philadelphia to consider all the ways we can commit ourselves to strengthening the spirit of service in America. My husband has always believed that every sector of society -- from government to religious groups to individual citizens -- can be leaders in this effort. The Summit for America's Future will bring together all of our living former presidents or their representatives, as well as educators, business leaders, community organizers, to discuss the needs of our country's 15 million at-risk children and how we can all work together to meet them.

Every one of us has a role to play in giving every child the opportunity to make the most of his or her talents and the inspiration to lead lives of civic duty. We can begin by bringing this sense of obligation and this commitment to service to every aspect of our lives. And in doing so, we can fulfill the greatest responsibility and privilege of American citizenship.

FEDERAL AGENCY COMMITMENTS TO SUMMIT

Draft

Department of Health and Human Services

- Girl Power! -- HHS will expand its Girl Power! mentoring campaign by working in partnership with the four African American sororities. The sororities will all announce that they will implement a Girl Power! mentoring program in their undergraduate chapters. The sorority members will work with their local alumni and with national and local organizations like the National Council of Negro Women to mentor young girls in their communities. Secretary Shalala plans to announce this with a ceremony of some sort, including the sorority women, young girls who would be mentored, the national sorority Presidents, and hopefully local youth organizations, probably at Howard University.

In addition, HHS is making a major new commitment to mentorship and teen pregnancy prevention by putting together two new grant programs. They will provide $1 million to national organizations serving boys, and hope to also commit $1 million to organizations serving girls in order to foster mentorship by caring adults and to get young girls and boys to abstain from sex and make the most of their lives. The grants to girl-serving organizations are part of our Girl Power! Campaign. The Secretary may announce this in early May in California.

- Nike PLAYCORPS -- HHS plans to join with Nike to announce that they have vastly expanded their PLAYCORPS program (modeled after AmeriCorps) from 100 coaches in four cities this year to at least 1,000 all over America next year. Piloted last year, PLAYCORPS trains college students and puts them to work in underserved areas to coach/mentor kids all year in recreational leagues. They are paid $500 -- which goes straight toward their tuition. In addition to expanding it, HHS will add a Girl Power! component by training coaches specifically on how to work with and inspire girls. They will also get incentives from Nike to find the barriers keeping girls from participating in sports/physical activity and work with their communities to knock them down. This could be announced in Philadelphia either with the Vice President on April 23 or the President on April 27. We would be joined by Nike, some of the coaches and kids in the program, and possibly a famous athlete to spotlight how important her coach was when she was growing up. In addition to being the site of the Summit, Philadelphia is also the most successful of Nike's four pilot sites for PLAYCORPS.

Department of Veterans Affairs

The VA commits to build upon the success of its initiatives and programs, as well as create new opportunities for service:

- Encourage the expansion -- in number and size -- of the James H. Parke Memorial Youth Scholarship Award designed to provide college funds for student volunteers in VA hospitals (who decides?), and expand VA's participation in the Partnership in Education program at VA facilities across the country. (Is this adopt a school?)
- Increase by 50% the number of student volunteers working under the auspices of the VA's Volunteer Service office by the year 2000, increasing the number of youth volunteers to 15,000.
- Establish a permanent VA federal employee Volunteer Corps that will integrate federal youth initiatives to serve the Washington area. (Clarify)

Federal Emergency Management Agency

- Spring Break Program for High School Seniors -- FEMA commits to offer service new opportunities to high school seniors. Working with FEMA and a number of partners, these students would help communities prepare for disaster by performing non-structural and minor structural mitigation activities in existing community facilities such as day care centers, schools, and playgrounds, elderly residences and group facilities, and local small businesses. Targeted communities would work with FEMA and state and local emergency officials to identify the natural hazards that threaten their community and at-risk facilities. Local officials would target individual facilities for non-structural and minor structural work each spring. FEMA would coordinate the process and supervise volunteers. Local architects and engineers would volunteer to inspect facilities and design effective non-structural and minor structural mitigation efforts. Local contractors/building trades professionals would volunteer to supervise all structural activities. Local hardware and building supply outlets would donate the materials needed. Local high school seniors would provide the labor during the months of March, April, and May of their senior year. Potential partners include hardware outlets, national architecture and engineering associations, private engineering firms, the AFL-CIO(?), Red Cross, and many others.
- Size? Partners in place?

School-To-Work

By the year 2001, the School-to-Work program will commit to:

- implement a School-to-Work system in every state in the U.S.
- triple the number of companies involved with School-to-Work, so that approximately 400,000 companies have mentoring initiatives or School-to-Work systems within their organizations and are partnering with their local school districts. These companies will commit to not only having students learn in the workplace but also bringing teachers into the workplace.

- ensuring that every school district in America has had the opportunity to implement a School-to-Work system within their community.

Selective Service System

- Expand "Serve America" -- Developed last summer through coordination with the Department of Defense and AmeriCorps, Serve America takes advantage of the Selective Service System's routine communication with nearly 5,000 men turning 18 every day to encourage them to serve the Nation. The Selective Service commits to inform young men about service opportunities that arise out of the Summit.
- Opportunities for Young People on Selective Service Local Boards -- The Selective Service System commits to offer more young men and women the opportunity to serve as members of Local Boards. Local Board members are uncompensated community volunteers appointed by the Director of Selective Service and acting on behalf of the President. Boards reflect the racial and national origin diversity of the men in the communities they would serve. They train in matters of law, policy, and procedures, standing ready to decide claims for exemptions and deferments should this Nation reinstate a military draft in a crisis. To be a board member, an individual must be at least 18 years old, a citizen of the U.S., not serving on active military duty or in the Reserves, and have good standing in the community.

Department of Justice

- Juvenile Mentoring Program (JUMP) -- The Department will commit $9.6 million to 52 new JUMP sites across the country (27 of these sites are in Summit communities) to support one-on-one mentoring for more than 6,500 at-risk young people. These new awards will more than double the total number of sites funded through DOJ's JUMP program. The program uses community volunteers as mentors, and grantees are required to coordinate their activities with local schools.
- Youth Network -- The Department commits to form a Youth Network, which will provide a forum for young people, national youth-serving organizations, and DOJ to exchange information and ideas about juvenile violence, volunteerism, delinquency prevention and victimization. Through a web site and periodic national meetings, the Network will increase young people's opportunities to participate in local delinquency and juvenile justice programs and policies, as well as to contribute to the national debate on these issues. National organizations involved in the Youth Network will include the National Crime Prevention Council, Boys and Girls Clubs of America, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, National League of Cities, MADD, United National Indian Tribal Youth, Youth Build, and others.
- Public/Private Mentoring Alliance -- The Department of Justice, with the Corporation for National Service, will convene and facilitate a Public/Private Mentoring Alliance of federal agencies and private national organizations supporting mentoring activities. The alliance will coordinate grants and disseminate information nation-wide on the value of and opportunities for mentoring, and explore the possibility of a national training and technical assistance initiative to expand effective mentoring programs across the country.

Several federal agencies, foundations such as the Irvine Foundation and the Pillsbury Foundation, and organizations such as Big Brothers/Big Sisters and 100 Black Men of America will be part of this effort. (already underway?)

Community Anti-Drug Coalitions of America with Federal Agencies

The National Youth Academy Community Coalition Building Project is a major initiative that will bring together 200,000 young people, ages 12 to 17, and various sectors of their communities, for the purpose of strategically planning and implementing change both in their environment and in their behavior to reduce substance abuse and substance abuse related violence.

This exciting project will combine CADCA's national network of community coalitions and its established training capacity, with the dynamic peer leadership training methodologies of The City Kids Foundation. The project will also include the integral involvement of five nationally recognized partners:

- Parents' Resource Institute for Drug Education (PRIDE)
- Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD)
- National Crime Prevention Council (NCPC)
- Work Group on Health Promotion and Community Development at the University of Kansas.
- The United States Department of Defense (which has committed financial resources as well as the active participation of the Junior R.O.T.C.)
- National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA)

The National Youth Academy will train youth and build youth coalitions in more than 100 cities throughout the United States. Intended to be a hard-hitting, far-reaching, peer-based program, this training project will involve more than 20,000 youth -- today's and tomorrow's leaders. It will teach them to become community leaders, challenge them to build local community coalitions, and empower them to create and implement youth-designed projects that directly tackle substance abuse and violence in their communities. The youth leadership training and coalition-building components will be complemented by a one-hour prime time television special; the distribution of educational video curriculums; a ten-city celebration performance tour; and a promotional media campaign highlighting the accomplishments of these youth leaders.

By the year 2000, CADCA and The City Kids Foundation will have provided more than 200,000 young people with community coalition building skills that will allow them to create environmental and behavioral change and to establish community-wide comprehensive responses to the nation's drug and violence problems. An emphasis will be placed on building a diverse and multi-cultural cadre of young people who understand the significance of collaboration and the power of community networking in creating healthy communities.

Nonprofit Gateway: to be added

United States Department of Education

- Commitment: Enlisting Volunteers to be Reading Tutors -- Read*Write*Now! is a summer reading program launched by the Partnership for Family Involvement in Education in the summer of 1995 to prevent a fall-off in reading skills during the summer months. Volunteer reading partners pledge to read and write with a child for 60 minutes a week, and the child pledges to read 30 minutes a day five days a week. Last summer, more than 50 organizations sponsored the reading initiative, and we had over 300,000 volunteer reading partners reading with one million children.

For our commitment, the Department pledges to work with the Partnership to increase both the number of volunteer reading partners and the number of children participating in Read*Write*Now! We are committed to having 450,000 partners reading with 1.5 million children in the summer of 1997. If we succeed, the Department and the partnership will have increased the number of volunteers and the children in the program by one-third.

Religious organizations who are members of the Department's Partnership for Family Involvement in Education are pursuing opportunities to sign up and organize reading tutors. And the Department plans to have Read*Write*Now! Kits available for the summit to enlist the support of the participants in this summer's challenge.

Additionally, we will use Read*Write*Now! as a springboard to commit the 100,000 work-study tutors called on by President Clinton for his America Reads Challenge. The Department and the Partnership will continue to encourage colleges to enlist their work-study students to serve as reading tutors over the next two years and to sign up additional volunteers for community service. If the America Reads legislation passes, 30,000 reading specialists and tutor coordinates will be available to mobilize and train one million volunteer tutors as part of the America Reads Initiative. (Has this been announced?)

- Commitment: Encouraging Community Service Programs by Increasing the Number of After School Programs -- The Department and the Partnership will work with schools to initiate 1,000 new after-school programs nationwide. This effort will be linked to funding proposed in our FY 1998 budget request of $50 million for the 21st Century Community Learning Centers Program to fund after school, weekend, and summer activities for youth. If the program is funded, we will enlist the support of the business community and community organizations to come together in a school setting to support youth during after-school hours. The program requires significant community involvement. Therefore, the Department and the Partnership will encourage AmeriCorps and Partnership members to volunteer in these after-school programs and help organize them.

Peace Corps

- Through its World Wise Schools program, the Peace Corps will significantly increase its global learning partnerships to at least 10,000 teachers by the year 2000, tripling the current number of partnerships with teachers. World Wise Schools connects currently serving and returned Peace Corps Volunteers with U.S. students and teachers. The program educates young Americans about the people and cultures of other countries, and exposes them to positive role models who have engaged in public service as Peace Corps Volunteers.

- Every year, thousands of Americans inquire about the possibility of serving as a Peace Corps Volunteer overseas, signaling the tremendous interest among Americans in serving others. The Peace Corps is firmly committed to increasing the opportunities for Americans to serve as Peace Corps Volunteers, and sharing their experiences with fellow Americans. Recognizing that every person may not be immediately suited to overseas service, the Peace Corps will also provide information on domestic service opportunities to those interested in service. An estimated 50,000 people per year will receive information on important service opportunities in the U.S. through the Peace Corps.
- Peace Corps employees, many of whom have served as Peace Corps Volunteers overseas, continue to volunteer in their communities at home. Working in partnership with the Corporation for National Service, more than two dozen Peace Corps employees have recently committed their personal time to serving as literacy tutors to students at Garrison Elementary School in Washington, D.C. Garrison is a participating school in President Clinton's "America Reads" program, an initiative which seeks to insure that every child can read independently by the third grade.

Office of Personnel Management:

- Encourage/develop guidance for flexible work hours for mentoring, etc.; "Success in Workplace" training for students in summer youth employment; help other agencies with guidance on use of leave, excused absence, flexible work schedules, appropriate use of incentive award authority to recognize employee volunteer service, government-wide recognition.

Must resolve these agencies in the next day or two:

If so, please write a summary in "commitment" language

HUD -- awaiting summary?

SSA -- one-pager not summarized here

April 13 - 19, 1997

Rhode Island Reads!: Hundreds of volunteers will actively participate in a state-wide, week-long reading improvement program. The kick-off event is scheduled for Tuesday, April 15 at 10:00 a.m. at the Providence Boys and Girls Club. Thousands of new books will be collected to fill the shelves of "community libraries." Beginning April 15, new libraries will be constructed in community centers which presently have limited or no reading resources. Throughout the week, which is school vacation week, children's story hours will be held at libraries and community centers around the state.

"Presidio Service Week": This initiative is sponsored by the Center for National Service and the Environment and the National Park Service. AmeriCorps members work together to refurbish homes and construct a plant for endangered and native plants. The event kick-off is Tuesday, April 15 from 8:30 to 10:00 a.m. On Saturday, April 19, members will also serve as Community Leaders during "Earth Day in the Golden Gate National Recreation Area," where they will lead and train community volunteers on various environmental restoration projects. Kick-off for the "Earth Day" event is 8:30 a.m.

The Los Angeles Youth Summit: On Tuesday, April 15, 250 AmeriCorps members will gather at the South Lawn of City Hall for a National Youth Forum. Participants will discuss key issues being deliberated at the President's Summit for America's Future in Philadelphia. Events commence with an 8:30 a.m. Continental Breakfast, followed by a 9:00 Welcome. Discussions take place from 10:00 to noon, with lunch from noon to 1:00. Live entertainment is available from 1:00 to 3:00 on the lawn.

NCCC Philadelphia Project: During the month of April, the National Civilian Community Corps will rehabilitate a former bathhouse at the Cruz Recreation Center, turning it into a youth/community center. This new space will support the expansion of the after school tutoring program, where Corps members and volunteers serve daily from 3:00 to 5:00. This project has been on-going and is roughly half completed. No specific events are scheduled for the week, but drop-by visits are welcome. Volunteers are on-site Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 3:30.

Louisiana's Coastal Erosion Project: From April 12 to 14, over 200 AmeriCorps members will converge upon a USDA project in Grand Isle/Fouchon to prevent coastal erosion. Louisiana loses 50 square miles of land per year to erosion. Members and volunteers will plant grasses, build retaining walls, and build a 5,000 foot sand fence.

Ohio Wesleyan University's "The Columbus Initiative": This program pairs peer student service and tutoring with a "promise" to be admitted to the University. During the week, 125 fourth and fifth graders and 35 sixth through eighth graders will visit the campus and their mentors and tutors with whom they have worked all year. Eight graders participate in a College Readiness Program, after which they receive their "Columbus Initiative Promise" cards. A "Promise" card guarantees that those who complete the program, graduate from high with a "B" average, and are recommended by their high school guidance counselors as good citizens, will be admitted with a full financial aid package. This is an on-going program and is not being presented solely in conjunction with National Volunteer Week. Therefore, no kick-off event is scheduled, but drop-by visits are welcome.

Florida/City of Tallahassee: On Monday, April 14, a kick-off event will be held with Governor Lawton Chiles and Mayor Scott Maddox from 6:30 to 9:00 p.m. On Tuesday, April 15, volunteers will fan out throughout the city to refurbish homes, playgrounds, wheelchair ramps, and the like. It should be noted that the Florida Commission on National Service is independently attempting to have Mrs. Gore attend.

Peace Corps Service Projects

Beginning National Service Week

Northern California, April 12 and 26

- On April 12, approximately ten returned Peace Corps Volunteers (RPCVs) will help the California State Park Service restore a hiking trail on Mt. Diablo, in Contra Costa County. This is part of an ongoing monthly collaboration.
- For the past 5 years, RPCVs in Northern California have been helping to restore trails at Point Reyes National Seashore, north of San Francisco. On April 26, approximately 20 RPCVs will continue this collaboration with the National Park Service, by cutting and hauling out underbrush to make trails passable for hikers.
- Approximately 15 RPCVs in Northern California will also assist in Christmas in April on April 26, working with a non-profit organization in Contra Costa County that mobilizes volunteers to paint, repair, and renovate houses in underserved communities and among the elderly.

New Jersey, April 19

- On April 19th, the Philadelphia Area Returned Peace Corps Volunteers will join Habitat for Humanity in the construction of a house at 7th and Clinton St., in Camden, New Jersey. An estimated 20 RPCVs will participate.

Philadelphia, April 19

- The Philadelphia Area Returned Peace Corps Volunteers will assist the Greater Philadelphia Food Bank on Saturday, April 19, 1997. Approximately 20 RPCVs will break down large bulk food packages, sort and repackage food for distribution to the most needy citizens of Philadelphia.
- On April 19th, the Philadelphia Area Returned Peace Corps Volunteers will also assist the Agape House for Women to renew and refurbish the garden/community area the RPCVs developed for the shelter last year. They will plant, rake, clean and paint. The entire garden area has become an important community center, with open space, picnic tables, and benches. The shelter, with support from the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, manages a range of community services including providing meals and activities for neighborhood children.

Louisiana, April 19

On April 19, approximately 50 RPCVs will assist in an urban beautification project, razing an abandoned house situated on a scenic Louisiana bayou. The project is organized by the group Les Reflections de Bayou, and it seeks to maintain the environmental quality of bayous in the Mississippi delta area.

Peace Corps – An Integral Part of America's Future

The Peace Corps fully supports the goals of the Presidents' Summit for America's Future, to provide young people with the fundamental resources to maximize their chances for successful lives. The Peace Corps will continue to foster volunteerism and service, through the work of Peace Corps Volunteers serving in developing countries around the world, and through the work of the more than 148,000 Americans who have returned from Peace Corps service, and continue to serve in their communities at home.

- Through its World Wise Schools program, the Peace Corps will significantly increase its global learning partnerships to at least 10,000 teachers by the year 2000, tripling the current number of partnerships with teachers. World Wise Schools connects currently serving and returned Peace Corps Volunteers with U.S. students and teachers. The program educates young Americans about the people and cultures of other countries, and exposes them to positive role models who have engaged in public service as Peace Corps Volunteers.
- Every year, thousands of Americans inquire about the possibility of serving as a Peace Corps Volunteer overseas, signaling the tremendous interest among Americans in serving others. The Peace Corps is firmly committed to increasing the opportunities for Americans to serve as Peace Corps Volunteers, and sharing their experiences with fellow Americans. Recognizing that every person may not be immediately suited to overseas service, the Peace Corps will also provide information on domestic service opportunities to those interested in service. An estimated 50,000 people per year will receive information on important service opportunities in the U.S. through the Peace Corps.
- Peace Corps employees, many of whom have served as Peace Corps Volunteers overseas, continue to volunteer in their communities at home. Working in partnership with the Corporation for National Service, more than two dozen Peace Corps employees have recently committed their personal time to serving as literacy tutors to students at Garrison Elementary School in Washington, D.C. Garrison is a participating school in President Clinton's "America Reads" program, an initiative which seeks to insure that every child can read independently by the third grade.

BACKGROUND:

In response to President Clinton's Call to Action for American Education in the 21st Century, the Secretary of Transportation, Rodney Slater, will kickoff the Garrett A. Morgan Transportation and Technology Futures initiative in Cleveland, Ohio on Wednesday, April 23. Garrett A. Morgan is best remembered for inventing the safety hood, later known as the gas mask, and the automatic traffic signal. He spent his adult life in Cleveland. The goal of the Morgan program is to introduce one million students by the year 2000 to the transportation profession and industry by leveraging existing federal technology, education and volunteer service programs, and by forging partnerships between DOT, other federal agencies, states, educators, and the private sector. This event will reinforce the message that the Administration is making education a top priority.

PROPOSED GARRETT A. MORGAN TRANSPORTATION FUTURES INITIATIVE

Introduction

Garrett Morgan (1877-1963) was an African-American inventor from Cleveland, Ohio. His most notable inventions were the safety hood, later known as the gas mask, and the automatic traffic signal. Morgan overcame substantial disadvantages to devote his talents and energies to improving the safety of his fellow man. His lifetime of achievement is a model of dedication to public service, public safety and technological innovation. It is in his spirit that Transportation Secretary Rodney E. Slater is announcing the Garrett A. Morgan Transportation Futures Initiative: a wide range of academic, research and technology transfer partnerships that will prepare Americans of all ages to design, deploy and operate the safe and technologically advanced transportation systems of the 21st century.

Challenge

We are at a crossroads in the transportation field: much of the seasoned workforce is retiring and the demand for traditional and new skills is expanding. For example, truck drivers are among the nation's top 15 professions forecasted to have the largest job growth over the next 10 years. The transportation sector will continue to need vehicle operators as well as civil engineers, but there will be an increasing need for multidisciplinary talent. Driven by the globalization of markets, new technologies and continued economic growth, the demand for technologically literate transportation workers continues to increase.

Goals

To ensure that transportation has both the people and the skills necessary to meet the demands of the future, the Garrett A. Morgan Transportation Futures Initiative will have three goals:

- To build a bridge between America's youth and the transportation community;
- To support the development and implementation of educational technology necessary to provide students and practitioners with the most effective means to acquire new skills; and,
- To ensure a technologically literate and internationally competitive transportation workforce.

The Garrett A. Morgan Transportation Futures Initiative will achieve these goals by serving as a catalyst to enhance transportation education at all levels. This will involve not only leveraging the Department's current technology, education and research programs, but also forging partnerships between DOT, other government agencies, the private sector and the education community.

Announcement

Secretary Slater will announce the Garrett A. Morgan Transportation Futures Initiative at an event in Morgan's hometown of Cleveland, Ohio, on April 23, 1997.

TALKING POINTS ON THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR SERVICE AND THE CLINTON'S ADMINISTRATION'S COMMITMENT TO CITIZEN SERVICE

Thursday, April 10, 1997

"The era of big government may be over, but the era of big challenges for our nation is surely not. Citizen service is the main way we recognize that we are responsible for one another. It is the very American idea that we meet our challenges not through heavy-handed government or as isolated individuals, but as members of a true community, with all of us working together."

-- President William J. Clinton, April 5, 1997

Service as a path to good citizenship. The President believes that citizen service is not only an effective answer to a community's problems, it is also an important part of every young person's civic education -- their sense of responsibility for themselves, our community, and our nation. Those who serve gain a greater understanding of their communities and neighbors. In many ways, they learn what it truly means to be an American.

Engaging young people in service through AmeriCorps. While today's challenges require something of all of us, it is especially important that young people take leading roles in shaping their own futures, and gain the sense of citizenship that service helps to provide. That is why the President created AmeriCorps. It is also an important reason for the Service Summit's focus on young people.

AmeriCorps: the basic bargain of opportunity and responsibility. The President often says that one of his proudest moments was creating the Corporation for National Service and AmeriCorps. During the last three years, 50,000 young AmeriCorps participants have earned college tuition by serving their communities, with the basic bargain of getting the opportunity to go to college in return for giving something back to their friends and neighbors.

AmeriCorps: reviving the spirit of service in America. The success of AmeriCorps shows that service can help to meet our most pressing social needs, from renewing our cities to protecting our environment, from helping children learn to read to giving them mentors and someone to look up to. That service often leads to more service -- a typical AmeriCorps member trains or recruits a dozen or more community volunteers. AmeriCorps -- and even larger numbers of Senior Service Corps and student volunteers -- have helped revive the spirit of service in America.

The Presidents' Summit: mobilizing citizen power. From April 27-29, in Independence Hall in Philadelphia, President Clinton and President Bush will convene the first Presidents' Summit On Citizen Service, with the support and leadership of the Corporation For National Service and AmeriCorps, the Points Of Light Foundation, Summit Chairman General Colin Powell and Vice Chairs Henry Cisneros and Lynda Robb. The Summit's goal, like that of AmeriCorps, is to mobilize America's citizen power into a united effort to solve our common problems -- especially those that threaten our young people.

Participation from all sectors of society. Leaders from a broad spectrum will come to the Summit with commitments in hand, concrete pledges of support and volunteers to solve their local problems. In preparation for the summit some of our most prominent corporations and service organizations have already stepped forward.

An unprecedented bipartisan Summit. Every living former President will attend or send a representative. We hope this will serve as an example that there are common national values that unite us all. The idea of service is such a value.

A special focus on children, to help prepare them for the 21st Century. No task facing is more crucial than preparing our children for the future. To do that, we must help our children and families overcome the challenges of society today: the burdens of illiteracy and poor health, the lure of tobacco, alcohol and drugs; the need to acquire the tools to succeed in a global economy. That is why the Summit will have a special emphasis on service aimed at America's children.

In preparation for the Summit, the President has already:

- Announced a new National Week of Service (April 13-19), with AmeriCorps and Peace Corps alumni engaging young people in service across the country;
- Called on all states to make service a part of high school and middle school education;
- Launched his National Service Scholarships, offering $1,000 scholarships (half provided by the government, half by local civic groups and businesses) to help students who perform outstanding service pay for college;
- Highlighted a recent Brandeis study that shows that when you begin to serve at a young age, schoolwork improves and there is a good chance you will keep serving in years to come.

In the coming weeks before the Summit, the President will:

- Recognize service and volunteers working for children at the White House Early Childhood Conference on April 17;
- Recognize service, volunteers, and public-private partnerships on Net Day, on April 19;
- Play major role at the Presidents' Service Summit in Philadelphia, which he will attend from April 27-28. (The Vice President, the First Lady, and Mrs. Gore will also attend.)

AmeriCorps*NCCC Corps members are repairing doors, installing floor tiles, replacing smoke detectors and making other vital improvements. Renovations are taking place Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 4:30.

Livingston Manor: This project, sponsored by Jubilee Enterprises, a private, non-profit organization that obtains vacant and run down apartment complexes and renovates them for rent to lower-income individuals/families at a reduced amount, is currently station at Livingston Manor in Southeast D.C. AmeriCorps*NCCC members are repairing or replacing doors, floors, windows and correcting plumbing and electrical problems. A tutoring complex has also been established one block from the Manor where two Corps members spend afternoons tutoring students. The renovations schedule is Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 4:30.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

April 5, 1997

RADIO ADDRESS BY THE PRESIDENT
TO THE NATION

The Oval Office

10:06 A.M. EST

THE PRESIDENT: Good morning. I want to talk with you today about how we can make this glorious spring a season of service all across America. As I have said many times, the era of big government may be over, but the era of big challenges for our nation is surely not. Citizen service is the main way we recognize that we are responsible for one another. It is the very American idea that we meet our challenges not through heavy-handed government or as isolated individuals, but as members of a true community, with all of us working together.

On April 27th through 29th, at Independence Hall in Philadelphia, we will be convening an historic Presidents' Summit on Service. I will be joined by President Bush, General Colin Powell, by every living former president or his representative, by other prominent Americans, including former HUD Secretary Henry Cisneros and Lynda Robb. Every person, business or organization represented at the summit will have already committed to take specific steps to help to serve our children and to rebuild our communities. Our mission is nothing less than to spark a renewed national sense of obligation, a new sense of duty, a new season of service.

I hope that many activities in the weeks leading up to this wonderful event will make all Americans think about the duty all of us owe to one another. Citizen service can take many shapes -- it can mean volunteering nights or on weekends in a religious group or neighborhood association, or devoting full years of your life to service like those the Peace Corps or the Jesuit Volunteer Corps members do.

Over the past four years, we have worked to harness this citizen energy in so many ways. I am especially proud of AmeriCorps, the national service program I proposed when I ran for President, that we launched the very next year. Since its creation, 50,000 young people have earned college tuition by serving their communities, with the basic bargain of getting the opportunity to go to college in return for giving something back to their friends and neighbors.

The success of AmeriCorps shows that service can help to meet our most pressing social needs, from renewing our cities to protecting our environment, to immunizing poor children, to giving them mentors and someone to look up to. And that service often leads to more service -- a typical AmeriCorps member trains or recruits a dozen or more community volunteers.

To focus the American people on the importance of this summit and the urgency of service, I'll issue a proclamation designating the week of April 13th through 19th as national service week in America. During that week, over a million young people will participate in 3,000 events across our nation, cleaning up neighborhoods and working with children.

I've asked the thousands of AmeriCorps alumni and returned Peace Corps volunteers to participate as well, reaching out to youth in their communities, speaking in schools, recruiting volunteers and teaching a new generation about the power of service. I've very pleased that some of them have joined our Peace Corps Director, Mark Gearan, here with me today.

I hope that they will teach that citizen service cannot be a pursuit for just a week or a month, that the ethic of service must extend throughout a lifetime. No one is too young to serve, as a recent study by Brandeis University shows -- when you begin to serve at a young age, schoolwork improves and there is a good chance you will continue to serve in the years to come. It's a good habit that's hard to break. And no one is too old to serve, either. But we must find even more ways to encourage our young people to begin to serve.

I'm joined here today by some young men and women from Maryland, along with that State's Lieutenant Governor, Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, who has been a leader in making Maryland the first state in our nation to require that every student perform some service as a condition of high school graduation. One of the students meeting with me gathered food and clothing for the needy; another, dyslexic herself, taught disabled students; another tutors young children at a Head Start center.

Today I challenge schools and communities in every state to make service a part of the curriculum in high school and even in middle school. There are many creative ways to do this -- including giving students credit, making service part of the curriculum, putting service on a student's transcript or even requiring it, as Maryland does. This week, the National Association of Secondary School Principals agreed to introduce service learning to more than 2 million students, and I hope they'll work to find even more creative ways to involve service. States and schools, of course, should be free to decide this for themselves. But every young American should be taught the joy and the duty of serving, and should learn it at the moment when it will have the most enduring impact on the rest of their lives.

Two weeks ago, applications went out to high school principals all around our nation, inviting them to select a student in that school who has performed outstanding service, thereby making them eligible for a $1,000 scholarship. Under this new initiative, which we launched last year, our national government will put up $500 for each student if it is matched by local communities. Already, a host of civic organizations -- including the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Moose International, the Lions Clubs, the U.S. Jaycees -- have accepted our challenge to work with their local chapters to provide matching funds for these scholarships. And public servants from agencies like the Agriculture Department will continue to work as partners with these schools, sending volunteers to work with teachers and acting as mentors to students.

I hope all of you will join in the spirit of the Presidents' Summit on Service, and take part in the national week of service beginning April 13th. Service is in our deepest national tradition. Millions of young Americans in my generation were inspired by the call to service, issued so often from this very office, by President Kennedy. Now it is up to all of us to take up President Kennedy's challenges -- remembering, as he said, that every person can make a difference, and every person must try.

Thanks for listening.

Subject: "Computer for Kids" per EO 12999---ACTION

Under Executive Order (EO) 12999, signed by President Clinton on April 12, 1996, Federal agencies have been granted the authority to donate surplus computers and related peripherals to public and private schools and nonprofit educational organizations.

In keeping within the spirit of the EO, the Social Security Administration (SSA) has taken a leadership role in accepting the challenge that ensures American children have the skills they need to succeed in the information-intensive 21st century. Under SSA's national implementation plan, internal guidelines and procedures have been established to allow for the donation of up to an estimated 10,000 excess computers and related tools to classrooms across America during the next 3 years.

State and local education administrators are being contacted and invited to assist in the identification of recipient schools with emphasis on empowerment zones. SSA has begun the transfer of excess computers to many classrooms within the Baltimore metropolitan area and we are happy to report that the reaction to date has been highly positive.

Therefore, SSA will be prepared to lead a national public understanding campaign entitled "Computers for Kids", which would report to the American public. This campaign would be designed to report to the American public on SSA's accomplishments made thus far to improve technology in the classroom through this EO, as well as to serve as an incentive to maximize efforts in the Federal sector. Sharing the "good news" that we are helping the youth of today better prepare for tomorrow is an important message the American public deserves to hear.

The Agency would like to do a press event announcing the donation of the 10,000 computers, celebrating the 1-year anniversary of the EO and the roll-out of events leading up to the Presidents' Summit For America's Future.

Given his interest in technology and improving education for American children, Vice President Gore would be well suited to lead this campaign as we approach the first anniversary of the EO. I would suggest that Richard W. Riley, Secretary of Education and Acting SSA Commissioner, John J. Callahan join him in making this timely report to America.

Please let me know if the Vice President is interested in participating in an official capacity and how we might proceed. SSA's point of contact for this campaign will be Joan Wainwright, Deputy Commissioner for Communications. She can be reached at (410) 965-1720. Thank you.

RE: PRESIDENT'S SUMMIT ON SERVICE
DA: 4/3/97

The following are three good potential announcements for the President or Vice President that we believe amplify the President's message about service -- especially service that emphasizes the mentoring of girls.

1. We will be teaming up with the four African American sororities -- which will all announce that they will be implementing a Girl Power! mentoring program in their undergraduate chapters. The sorority members will work with their local alumni and with national and local organizations like the National Council of Negro Women to mentor young girls in their communities. We could announce this with some sort of ceremony (signing a joint memorandum, etc.). We would include the sorority women, young girls who would be mentored, the national sorority Presidents, and hopefully local youth organizations. If the White House doesn't want to announce this, the Secretary could do it locally at Howard University, which has all four chapters.

2. We could join with NIKE to announce that they have vastly expanded their PLAYCORPS (modeled after Americorps) program -- from 100 coaches in four cities this year to 1,000 all over America next year. Piloted last year, PLAY COPRS takes college students, trains them, and puts them to work in underserved areas to coach/mentor kids all year in recreational leagues. They are paid $500 -- which goes straight toward their tuition. In addition to expanding it (they're looking at the 1,000 number, but they'll take as many coaches as qualify), we will be adding a Girl Power! component. The coaches will be trained specifically on how to work with and inspire girls. They will also get incentives from NIKE to find the barriers keeping girls from participating in sports/physical activity and work with their communities to knock them down. We suggest announcing this in Philadelphia either with the Vice President on April 23 or the President on April 27. We would be joined by NIKE, some of the coaches and kids in the program, and possibly a famous athlete to spotlight how important her coach was growing up. The Philadelphia site was chosen because of the momentum leading up to the President's summit and also because it is the most successful of NIKE's four pilot sites for PLAYCOPRS. If you don't want to do this, we would probably do it on our own in Philadelphia the week of the 21st.

3. Our Department is making a major new commitment to mentorship and teen pregnancy prevention by putting together two new grant programs. We will provide $1 million to national organizations serving boys and hope to also commit $1 million to organizations serving girls in order to foster mentorship by caring adults and get young girls and boys to abstain from sex and make the most of their lives. The grants to girl-serving organizations are part of our Girl Power! campaign. If this doesn't interest you for POTUS, we'd do it in early May in California.

Here are a few other activities that we are planning:

1. On April 24, we will be expanding our traditional Take Our Daughters To Work Day to adopt daughters from schools in D.C., particularly focusing on underserved areas and on the Girl Power! 9-14 year-old age group. We will also be asking employees at NIH, CDC, FDA, and in our regions to adopt daughters from their local schools. In addition to asking employees to plan their own educational activities through the day, we also plan on having an afternoon session for all the girls and inviting someone like Eleanor Holmes Norton to help the Secretary lead a question and answer session. The Secretary will be joined all day by one of the six Ms. Foundation's young essay winners from around the country.

NOTE: We have also talked to the White House Women's Office about having a Take Our Daughters to Work Day roundtable at the White House with 9-14 year old girls to talk about their unique challenges.

2. On April 21, we will be doing an event in D.C. with the Birthing Project and D.C. Healthy Start as they conduct immunization education and awareness projects for volunteers. This also coincides with Immunization Awareness Week.
