BODY:

ALBANY, N.Y. - New York Democrats made it official Tuesday: Hillary Rodham Clinton is the first first lady to be nominated for high political office, namely the U.S. Senate.

"I know that we can do this together," Mrs. Clinton said in a 45-minute speech outlining her economic agenda to the state Democratic Convention.

All she needs now is ...

As the Democrats formally put Mrs. Clinton's name on the ballot, New York Republicans continued to wonder if they will have to scramble for a new candidate, less than ...

... air to the five-hour Democratic convention in a packed Pepsi Arena. A crowd of more than 10,000 cheered Mrs. Clinton's bid to replace retiring Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, just a year after she moved to the state.

Mrs. Clinton did not mention Mr. Giuliani or his problems, saying the election is about issues. She pledged legislation to create better schools, more ...

... cleaner environment, tighter restrictions on gun sales and improved protection of Social Security and Medicare.

"So what is this election really about?" Mrs. Clinton asked the crowd, which included her husband, Bill. "It is not about candidates. It is, though, about our children and about our families and about our futures."

Mrs. Clinton is not the first candidate to move to New York to run for the Senate. Former Attorney General Robert Kennedy did so in 1964, winning the very seat Mrs. Clinton hopes to claim. Four years later, Mr. Kennedy's presidential bid ended with his assassination.

Some analysts believe a successful Senate race could also vault Mrs. Clinton into presidential politics, though she has pledged to serve the entire six-year Senate term.

Convention delegates called Mrs. Clinton a pioneer in child development, women's rights and education.

But critics revile her as a carpetbagger and a shameless ...

... in the Senate race.

"You look at every possible number in every possible way and there's only one conclusion: Mrs. Clinton and Mr. Giuliani are running neck-and-neck and nothing seems to change that," said Maurice Carroll, director of the Quinnipiac College Polling Institute.

He added: "There is no explaining this election."

Mrs. Clinton's chances improve if Mr. Giuliani drops out, pollsters said. But Michele Mitchell, a New York-based ...

... 20,000.

The mayor declined to say whether he bought the ring, calling it a private matter.

He said the decision on whether to oppose Mrs. Clinton will depend on his health.

"I've made no decision about treatment, much less the decision to run," he said.

... State Republican leaders are said to be anxious for the mayor to decide. Not only are they worried about giving the Senate job to Mrs. Clinton, they worry that a weak performance at the top of the ticket may cost the GOP control of the State Senate. That would weaken the party's ...
