"Here I am," said Mrs. Clinton, with a little wave. She added that it took her 31 years to work up the courage to come on the show.

Former "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson invited Mrs. Clinton on in 1969, she said, after her unexpectedly defiant commencement speech at Wellesley College. But instead, Mrs. Clinton went to Alaska for a job that "best prepared me for political life: sliming fish."

Of her Senate campaign in New York, Mrs. Clinton said, "I'm having a great time. ... I get yelled at to go home in 62 different languages."

Mrs. Clinton will speak Monday, the opening night of the Democratic convention, followed by the president. She joked that her notoriously long-winded husband "may be done by Wednesday."

Mrs. Clinton also wasn't above hunting for laughs at her own daughter's expense.

Leno asked her what would happen if Chelsea Clinton changed affiliation and announced that the Republicans had good ideas.

"I'd miss her a lot," Mrs. Clinton replied.

Chelsea Clinton, 20, gave her mom a laugh from the studio audience.

Reflecting on leaving the White House, Mrs. Clinton told Leno: "People will have a new president and life will go on. The only person I'm worried about is you. What are you going to talk about when we're gone?"

Mrs. Clinton, after months of needling from David Letterman, appeared on CBS'
