Hillary Clinton has a right to seek any offices she wants

A recent letter criticized Hillary Clinton's candidacy for the Senate as inappropriate because she is the wife of a president ("Riding husband's coattails, first lady betrays feminism," Sept. 3).

Does this mean that Mrs. Clinton and other women having enriching life experiences differing from those of the majority of women should be automatically disqualified from seeking to utilize these experiences for their further advancement? If this is so, women have sadly decided to construct their own "glass ceiling."

Mrs. Clinton is qualified to run for any office she so chooses, even though I don't personally agree with her on many issues.

The issues would determine whether Mrs. Clinton would receive my vote.

But in the interest of true democracy and diversity, every woman's right to run for political ...
