HEADLINE: Sheehy effusive on first lady's character, but not her own

BYLINE: Melinda Henneberger; NEW YORK TIMES NEWS SERVICE

... more, much more. The book says the Clintons nearly divorced a decade ago but stayed together after Mrs. Clinton offered to support her husband in the presidential race they had both dreamed of by offering him cover against any and all allegations of ...

Mrs. Clinton's representatives have dismissed the book, which quotes a number of her friends, as a bunch of psycho-hooey.

But Sheehy, who also wrote "Passages," "New Passages" and "Men's Passages," calls it her "lucky 13th" book, landing just as Mrs. Clinton announced that she did intend to run for the Senate. The psychological profiles Sheehy calls "character studies" have been her specialty since 1984, when she wrote ...

... didn't really like people all that well, and wondered if it's possible to be a "compassionate misanthrope." Sheehy even writes up Mrs. Clinton's "hokey Midwestern sense of humor."

Mrs. Clinton's campaign spokesman, Howard Wolfson, disputed the book on "Larry King Live" last week, specifically challenging Sheehy's assertion that Mrs. Clinton's father did not attend her college graduation.

"Howard didn't even listen to my interview" on the same show, Sheehy ...

Now 62, Sheehy suggested that there might be as many sequels in Hillary Clinton as there were in her 1976 best-seller, "Passages."

"I saw her in East Hampton and she's, 'Oh, Gail, I haven't seen you ...

... couldn't you?' I said, 'My biography of you is finished.' She said, 'So soon?' And I said, 'But this is only Volume 1.' "

Mrs. Clinton's reaction? "Stricken!" she said, laughing. "It was delicious."
