Dear Lissa,

Per conversations, the following information pertains requesting an interview with The First Lady for the First Women's Radio Broadcast & Holiday Special. I understand this is an extraordinary busy time, and believe from past interviews with The First Lady, that time, however brief will be inspirational, as she continues to be her own woman and defy history, instilling a path for future generations.

The Live Real Women Hour information is included. If Mrs. Clinton's schedule prohibits an interview during the broadcast (via the phone) at The Museum of Television & Radio in Beverly Hills, please advise me of times in which we could tape a five-ten minute conversation.

I will contact you on Monday. Please contact me with any questions. Thank you for your attention, as it is greatly appreciated.

Best wishes,

Nanci Saper

Memo

To: Lisa Muscatine
From: Ellen Ratner
Re: Request for First Lady/Senator Hillary Rodham Clinton Interview

Dear Lisa,

This is a follow up to our earlier conversation. I would love to conduct an in person interview with Mrs. Clinton for radio, lasting approximately ten to fifteen minutes. I broadcast on the Talk America Radio Network, which reaches over 400 stations. In addition, I report for two radio stations in New York; including, WGY in Albany and WHAM in Rochester. Both are 50 000 watt stations with high ratings. The interviews would run on those stations as well.

The last lengthy interview I conducted with Mrs. Clinton was when she published It Takes A Village. Apparently she enjoyed the interview, expressing her satisfaction to the President, who, in turn, told my brother of the experience.

In this interview I would like to focus upon Mrs. Clinton's newly released book. Furthermore, I would also like to discuss which issues Mrs. Clinton championed while at the White House, and how she will continue her advocacy work on these matters while in the Senate.

I look forward to hearing from you and I am available, day or night, for the interview.

Thank you.

November 16, 2000

Hillary Rodham Clinton
First Lady of the United States of America
White House, Washington, DC

Dear First Lady:

First, let me congratulate you with hard-won victory in the Senatorial race in New York.

Second, I would like to inform you that on December 3, 2000 "The Russian Forward" newspaper will celebrate its fifth anniversary. I request your greetings to the staff and readers of our Jewish weekly newspaper.

For the last five years "The Russian Forward", founded and published by the Forward Association (which also publishes the 103-year-old "Yiddish Forverts" and the English "Forward") has grown rapidly into a powerful voice of the Jewish immigrants from the former Soviet Union. Read weekly by over 40,000 people, it serves as an immigrant primer and a window on the political and cultural developments of the day, as did the "Forverts" for earlier generations.

We are going to publish your greetings and to read them at our fifth anniversary celebration in Brooklyn.
Thank you in advance.

Sincerely, yours

Leonid Shkolnik,

Dear Ms. Muscatine:

I am writing to request an interview as soon as possible with First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton. American Urban Radio Networks White House Correspondent, April Ryan, will conduct the interview.

The First Lady during a chat with April at the recent State Dinner for South African President Thabo Mbeki agreed to grant an interview before the end of the year. I am hopeful her schedule will permit her to do the interview either in person or via telephone.

April would like to discuss Mrs. Clinton's legacy, her history making efforts, her New York Senate win, and how she has changed the way the nation views First Ladies, among other things.

You can reach April at the White House by calling (202) 347-7930. I can be reached via telephone at (412) 456-4035 or via fax at (412) 456-4040.

Dear Lissa:

First, congratulations to all of you from all of us at Family Money Magazine!

I am writing to request an interview with the Senator-elect from New York for a major piece on the women of the Senate, which will feature the newly elected members. The piece will run in our March issue, which will hit the newsstands in February as the new Congress is getting to work.

Family Money is the only personal finance magazine in America targeted to women. Its mission: to give women the information they need to invest and manage their money wisely—and live and retire comfortably. Its 650,000 readers are educated, middle and upper-income women, most of who are active in community causes, politics, career and family. They will be looking to Senators like Mrs. Clinton to voice their concerns and make a real difference in Washington.

The magazine, which is a bi-monthly—and therefore remains on newsstands for two months—is published by Meredith Corp, which also publishes Ladies Home Journal, Better Homes & Gardens and More. Enclosed is a copy of the magazine, including a story I wrote on the importance of women voters in the recent election.

To meet our deadline, we would have to do the interview by mid-December. We hope you can make this work.

All the best,

Ann Reilly Dowd

Dear Mrs. Clinton :

We are currently working on a story for George Magazine celebrating the 30th anniversary of All in the Family. We'll be interviewing dozens of actors, entertainment executives, politicians, comedians and cultural critics about the impact this ground breaking show had on American culture then and now.

Set during the Vietnam War, the show dealt with controversial issues such as race, religion, feminism and homosexuality with provocative humor and some of the best writing on television.

We would love to include your personal recollections, opinions and/or impressions, and are hoping to set up a brief phone interview in the next week, if possible.

Please let us know if you will be able to participate. Thanks for your consideration.

Best,

8th December 2000

Dear Lissa

I have been advised by a friend and colleague, Joe Lockhart, that you are the person I need to contact about interviews with the First Lady.

I am organising Sky News' coverage of The President and First Lady's visit to Northern Ireland and Eire. We will be giving heavy coverage to Mrs Clinton's visit, especially with her recent election success and I wanted to see what the possibility was of a one-on-one interview with Mrs Rodham Clinton

The interview would be with our main anchor and former Washington Bureau Chief, Jeremy Thompson.

I am also interested to see if there is a possibility of some words with their daughter, who it is said, may do her own thing in Belfast. There is growing interest in Chelsea Clinton here in Britain, especially with her plans to come here to further her education.

In both cases, if the itinerary is tight, could we arrange to be at a designated spot to throw a series of questions away from the pack.

I am at home this weekend on 208 943 0292 or you can contact me on my cell phone 7711 448882 and I will be in Belfast from Monday lunchtime onwards.

Yours Sincerely

- ✓ New York has been a symbol for people from all around the world, as a multicultural and cosmopolitan mega city. What is your vision of "New York of 21st century"?
- ✓ Which was the crucial factor that motivated you to run for office?
- ✓ What does mean to you having spent 8 years as the first lady and how has this affected your family life?
- ✓ The greekamerican community in the state of New York has significant power. Greekamericans traditionally tend to support Democrats. Do you think that this "tradition" will help your candidacy?
- ✓ Even in the USA, women's participation in politics is limited. How do you explain this fact? Do you anticipate women's more active involvement in politics in the year future?

How "heavy" is the name Clinton on you?

- ✓ You have visited our country several times in the past. When do you plan to come again? What impressed you more in Greece?
- ✓✓ Greece during last decades has been facing problems with huge fires that devastated our forests. You have contributed significantly to the reforestation of our country. Do you plan to carry on with that project?
- ✓ You have shown great interest in helping to solve the political problem of divided Cyprus. What is your prediction for the progress of the issue?

? Crime is a great concern for New Yorkers. Athens also is described as a dangerous place to live or to visit especially because of terrorism. What is your opinion on that?

Do you think that Athens can organize safe olympic games?

Dear Ms. Doyle:

Talk magazine is organizing a photo shoot for all of the current and freshmen women Senators. The photo will accompany Clara Bingham's piece on women Senators, which is scheduled to run in our February issue. We have contacted all of you already about the shoot, and have discussed December 5th as an ideal date. This is the latest day that we can shoot for the February issue. Tovah Ravitz in Senator Murray's office will be helping us coordinate the time and place.

Please let me know as soon as possible whether you can make a December 5th photo shoot.

RE:	# OF PAGES: 1 (TOTAL)

(please contact me if the indicated pages are not received)

Dear Ms. Mucatine:

Pursuant to my conversation with Norma Jean regarding the possible participation of The First Lady in a "Cosmo Girl" article, the following is applicable information.

I am writing an article for the April issue of Cosmo Girl on success and self esteem, with the aim of promoting a young woman's self esteem and personal success. I am asking various notable people: "What is the secret to your success?" Along with this answer, I am asking for a specific story that exemplifies the secret - whether it's something that happened to them in their teens or early on in their career or even last week - something that was a challenge to them but when they used their secret, they overcame it and found success.

The readers of this magazine, 750,000 per month, have said they see Mrs. Clinton as a role model and want to know something of the history of her success.

The deadline for this is rather tight. I would need his answer by Saturday, January 13th. You can email me at bsiegler@mediaone.net, fax at (310) 823-6539 or call me at (310) 822-9170.

Thank you in advance for your prompt attention to this request. I look forward to receiving Mrs. Clinton's reply.

Sincerely,

Bonnie Siegler

Carlton Television is a leading part of the ITV Network - Britain's most popular television channel.

Created in 1955, ITV is a commercial station made up of 15 regions. Carlton owns four regional licences, covering London (weekday), the Midlands, the South West and Wales. These account for over half the UK population and over 46% of ITV advertising revenue. Carlton is also a major television producer, investing over £200 million a year in new programmes. It specialises in high-quality drama, factual, entertainment and children's programmes, including Inspector Morse, Peak Practice and The Railway Children. Other recent hits include Goodnight Mister Tom, which touched the hearts of 14 million viewers, Barbara - ITV's most popular new comedy in five years, and Britain at War in Colour - the follow-up to the groundbreaking factual series World War II in Colour.

Carlton Television is part of the Carlton Media Group, which also owns the independent production companies Action Time and Planet 24.

In addition, Carlton owns 50% of ONdigital - the world's first digital terrestrial television service offering over 50 channels, internet and e-mail through an aerial, 20% of ITN, the national and international news provider, and 25% of GMTV, the national breakfast television licence holder.

I appreciate this is short notice but if there was anyway it would be possible to arrange a meeting, Carlton Television would be very grateful. Nick, Maureen and Steve have availability on the 25th or 26th of January.

Protected Crimes, Protected Criminals ☆ Only The Public Remains Unprotected

Date: January 12, 2001

Pages: One, including this cover sheet.

Dear First Lady/Senator HRC: With only eight (8) days remaining, it seems unlikely that you or any other key Cabinet member of The Clinton Administration will ever fulfill The President's commitments to us while honoring the Federal claims the Administration requested from us as the proper vehicle to cause the conduct of a thorough and comprehensive investigation of these alleged crimes and to focus the brightest possible spotlight on the abundance of present and past public- and private-sector criminals to be found therein. Our assorted claims continue to lie dormant in the Office of the General Counsel, DHHS. We must recover the $1.2M we invested in our research and criminal investigative work product. Our proofs are easily confirmed and irrefutable. You know our truths. We have your husband's word and the words of key direct reports that our efforts would be rewarded and that we would be made whole. If one were to independently confirm the veracity of our each and every submission to you personally during the past eight (8) years, it would seem that you are extremely hard-pressed to explain why you declined to protect the public and why the United States Food & Drug Administration has not been ordered to fully and completely disclose all that is known about triazolam and "The Halcion® Crimes" with absolutely nothing withheld. Already known on the Parklawn Campus as "FDA's most tragic mistake", with DOD's 10-year Halcion "mistake" added to the mix, it is probable that Halcion will eventually become known as America's most heinous pharmacologic crimes. Former FDA Commissioner David Kessler's self-serving mantra: "Maintaining the integrity of FDA is far more important than telling the American public the truth about Halcion" will soon be exposed for what it is. Would you take an FDA-approved drug if it contained the "WARNING: May potentiate bizarre behavior and suicidal tendencies"? After seven (7) years of study and rejection, that it precisely what CDER Senior Medical Officer Theresa Ting Woo, M. D. demanded after "higher authority" ordered her to approve the drug. You can get a very good idea of who has helped to protect and insulate this drug simply by reading the FEC reports going well back in time. We still must ask you to cause our claims to be honored before the inauguration. It is the right thing for you to do. We are depending on you to keep your word. Best wishes for your future. Warmest personal regards. Cordially, Mike.

Here is the letter

I faxed to

Melanne before Christmas, self-explanatory - I think.

MELANNE VERVEER
CHIEF OF STAFF
OFFICE OF THE FIRST LADY
WASHINGTON D.C.

DEAR MELANNE:

HERE, ON PAPER, IS THE GIST OF MY CALL TO YOU.

CBS NEWS "SUNDAY MORNING" WOULD LIKE TO SET IN MOTION A REQUEST TO DO A STORY ON MRS. CLINTON SIX MONTHS INTO HER SENATE CAREER.

WE WOULD LIKE TO SIT DOWN AND HAVE AN ON-CAMERA CONVERSATION WITH HER ABOUT WHAT SHE WILL HAVE EXPERIENCED, LEARNED, DISCOVERED, ETC. IN THE COURSE OF MAKING HER HISTORIC TRANSITION FROM FIRST LADY TO CANDIDATE TO SENATOR...HER POLITICAL AND HER PERSONAL ODYSSEY.

OBVIOUSLY, WE WOULD ALSO NEED TO FOLLOW HER AROUND SOME, SHOOTING SEVERAL REPRESENTATIVE ACTIVITIES AND APPEARANCES IN HER NEW ROLE.

I WOULD DO THE PIECE. IT WOULD END UP AROUND TEN MINUTES OR SO COMPLETE.

SINCE YOU KNOW ME, AND I DON'T KNOW WHO MRS. CLINTON'S SENATE STAFF WILL BE, I THOUGHT YOU MIGHT BE ABLE TO ROUTE THIS REQUEST. PERHAPS YOU COULD PUT IT IN HOWARD WOLFSON'S HANDS. I WOULD APPRECIATE ANY HELP POSSIBLE.

I HOPE YOUR LAST TRIP ABROAD WAS A WONDERFUL SENTIMENTAL JOURNEY, AND THAT THIS LAST HOLIDAY SEASON IN THE WHITE HOUSE IS A TIME TO BE TREASURED AND SAVORED.

SINCERELY,

Dear Mrs Clinton,

I will be publishing in Autumn 2000 a superb book of photographs of remarkable women by a very distinguished photographer called Boo Beaumont, whose work is in the collection of the National Portrait Gallery here in London. I wonder whether you would be prepared to write a commentary or foreword to this original book? Universe, which is part of Rizzoli, should be co-publishing this book in the US, and I am asking Cherie Booth to write the UK commentary to the book.

I am hoping to coincide publication with an exhibition at the National Portrait Gallery, and shortly afterwards, an exhibition at either the Metropolitan in New York, at New York Public Library, or the Museum of Women in Washington.

I am enclosing herewith a selection of Ms Beaumont's photographs, and a selection of those to be photographed in the US; the trip is to take place next year.

I am aware that you must be hugely busy at the moment. I stayed up all night when you were voted in as the next mayor of New York to see your heroic acceptance speech. It is a great thing for New Yorkers, as my relations there confirm. Congratulations!

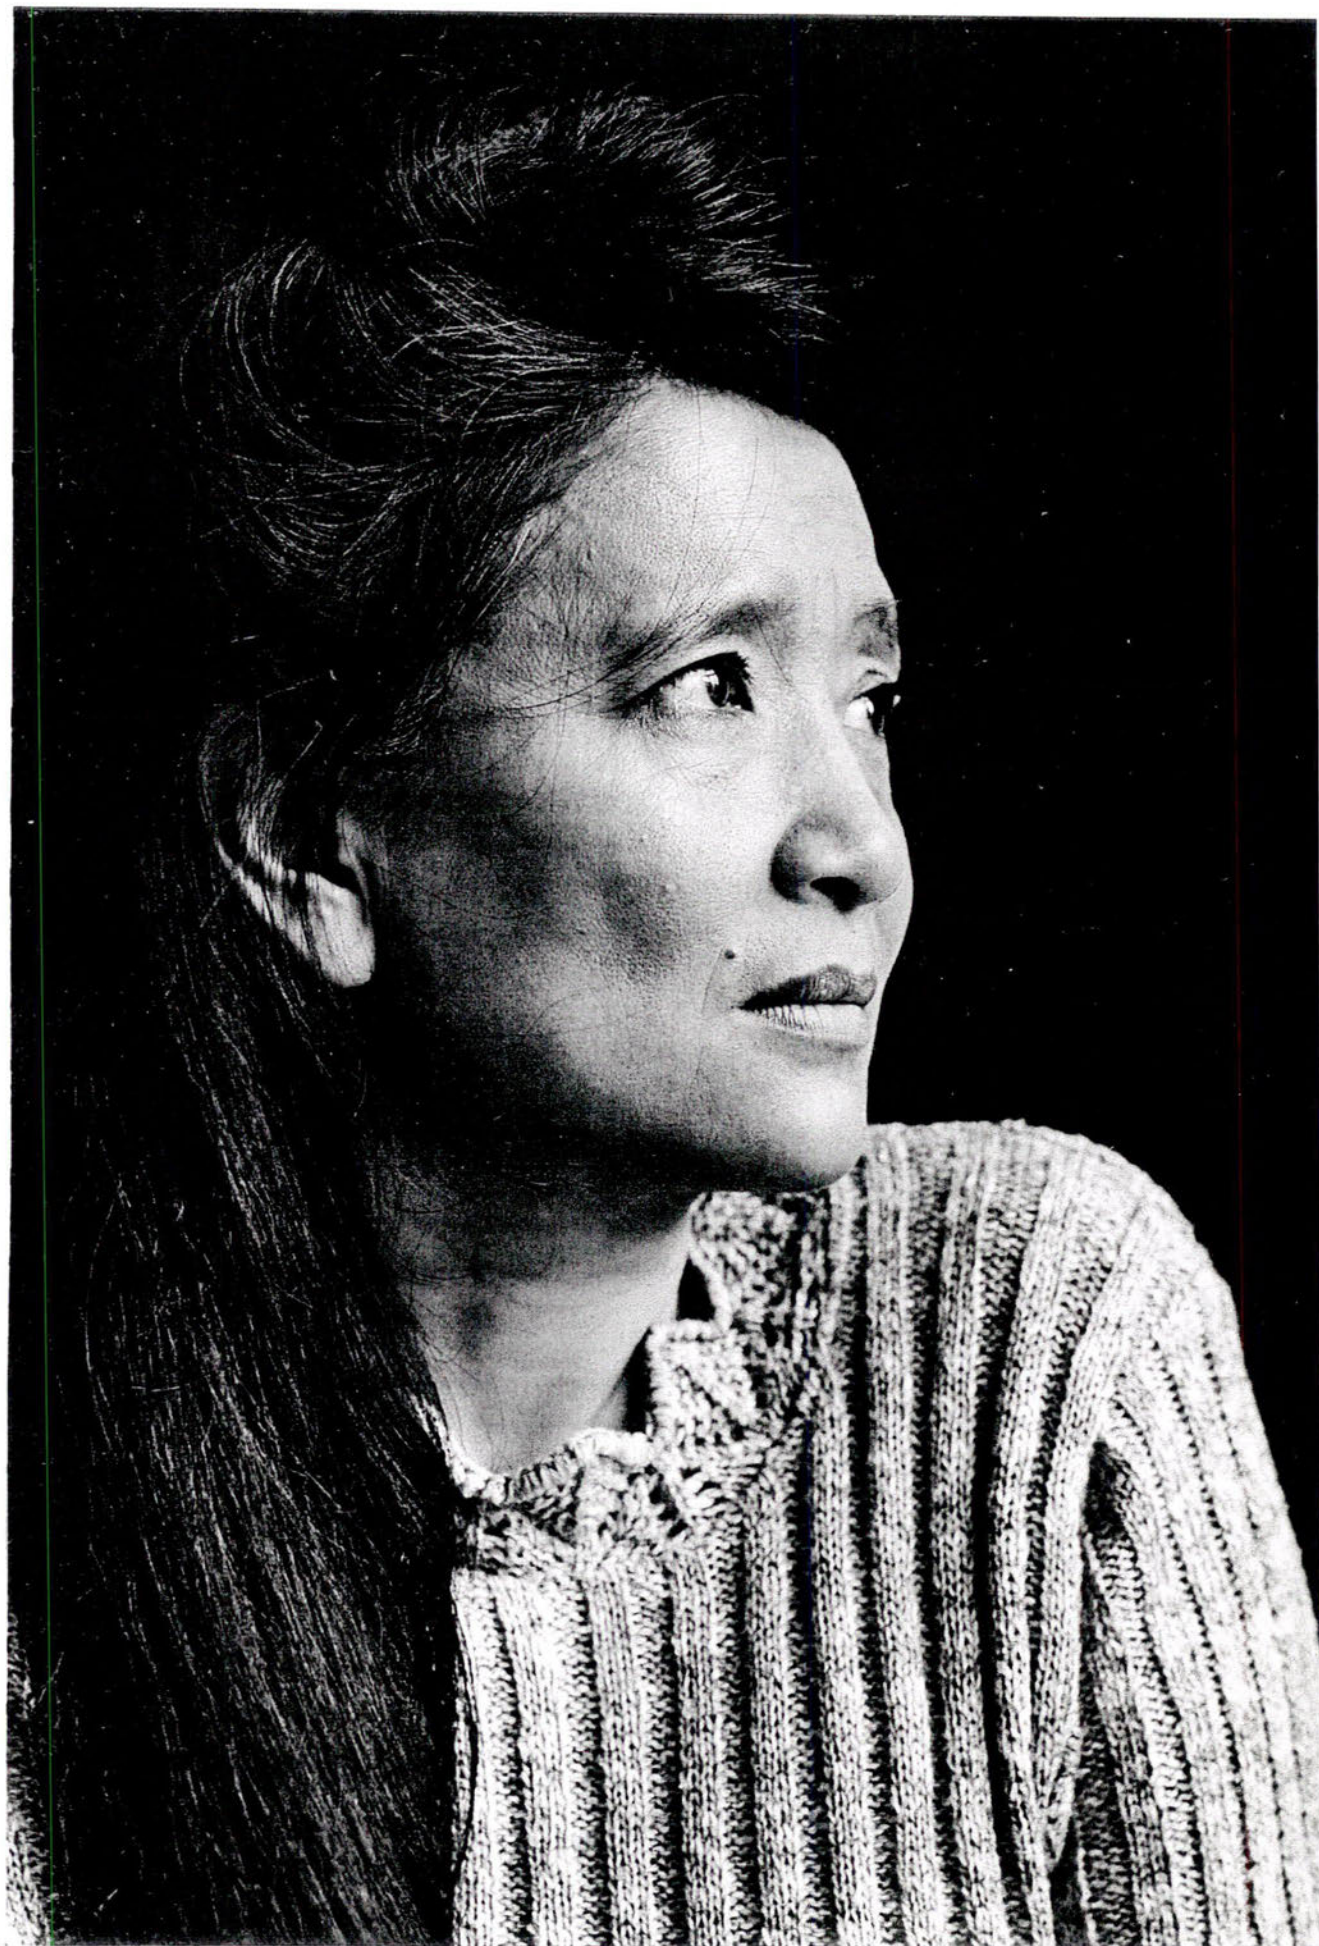

I will tell you further about Ms Beaumont's trip to the US, since she would like to make an appointment to photograph you.

I hope that you will consider this project, and look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely,

[Message]

Dear Mrs. Clinton: I am writing portions of a childrens textbook grades 5 through 8. It is part of the Our Presidents series published by Rourke. My assignment is to provide a biography on you and several others.

I would love to be able to provide the children with a statement from you that hasnt been published previously -- maybe something regarding the importance of education, a brief story about your school days during these years or anything else youd like to discuss.

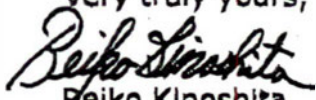

My deadline is tight, I need to have finished copy to the publisher in early January. I would appreciate any help you or your staff could provide.

Thanks very much for your consideration of this request and I hope you and your family have a very safe and happy holiday! Cathy Cunningham

Re: Request for Interview

Dear Ms. Muscatine:

First, please let me convey my congratulations to First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton on her election to the United States Senate last Tuesday. This letter is sent in order to request an interview with Mrs. Clinton for a monthly called FORESIGHT. My name is Reiko Kinoshita. I am a journalist, who serves on the International Women's Media Foundation Board of Directors and was a senior visiting scholar at The Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies. In 1993, I authored "FIRST TEAM." A copy of the book was presented to the First Lady, and another one was subsequently requested by Mr. Mike McCurry. For your review, please find attached my biography.

Since its inception in March of 1990, I have been writing in FORESIGHT. It is one of Japan's most respected publications on international affairs and published by the 104-year-old Shinchosha. Available exclusively by subscription, for an annual cost of 12,000 Yen (approximately $111.00), the monthly's 30,000 subscribers consist of statesmen, academics, journalists, business leaders, university students and Japan specialists overseas. To commemorate the magazine's tenth anniversary, FORESIGHT has just released a special book edition available for the first time to the general public. Under the title of "WHAT'S NEXT?: 2001 - 2010," it features my exclusive interview with Mr. Steve Case of America Online, Inc.

As an International journalist who has written about Mrs. Clinton over the last eight years, I would very much like to hear her thoughts at present. In particular, her aspiration as a public official, including how the Senator-elect hopes to contribute to the well-being of America. I would be most grateful if your office could kindly arrange an appointment sometime between late January of 2001 and early February, in time for FORESIGHT's eleventh anniversary issue.

Date: October 17, 2000 (November 11, 2000)

Pages: One, including this cover sheet.

Dear Mr. President: Please call us when you have a few moments to spare. With the Administration in its final weeks and so much going on in the World, it appears that the commitments you and David Wilhelm made to us have dropped through the cracks and we have been forgotten. During the past seven and one-half years, you have been a prime recipient of our scientific, medical and legal research and the product of our ongoing investigation. You have our findings and conclusions. Your staff has verified and confirmed our most serious charges and allegations, claims and complaints. You know them to be true. At DHHS, in the Office of the General Counsel, Business and Administrative Law Division, the unnumbered replacement to the OS-requested FTCA Claim #93-M-186, dated November 11, 1999, lies unacknowledged and dormant on the fifth floor of the Wilbur J. Cohen Building. This new and improved complaint contains an additional six (6) years of research and development, additional pivotal findings and conclusions and far more detail. It clearly provides the Federal government with the best in-depth description of these pharmacologic heinous crimes and a detailed road map to the location of past and present public- and private-sector criminals. We have a Presidential pledge that our righteous claim would be honored. To date, it has been ignored or opposed. Bill, we need your help today. We trusted your word. We literally mortgaged our future by believing in you and trusting that you would keep that word us. Please agree to personally do what you can to see to it that The White House remembers its commitments to us; and please use your good offices and powers of personal persuasion across party lines to cause our claim to be honored and paid by DHHS without further delay. Our health and very survival are at stake. Few things on your plate today could be more important. Full and complete disclosure is imperative. Warmest personal regards. Cordially, Mike.

Dear Sir or Madam;

Jones and Bartlett Publisher is revising a college textbook by Dan Chiras entitled, ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE: A Systems Approach to Sustainable Development. The author would like to include a new photograph showing the "Greening of the White House" - conservation measures taken to set an example for the American people. Any of the following pictures would be appropriate:

- 1) Aerial view of The White House South Lawn to show improvements made in the irrigation system to conserve water
- 2) Installation of compact fluorescent instead of incandescent bulbs in The White House
- 3) Use of cleaner burning alternative-fuel vehicles in The White House fleet
- 4) First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton planting a tree on the Mall in Washington, December 15, 1999 as part of the Millennium Green Initiative
- 5) First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton at the Official Launch of Millennium Green and Dedication of the Hillary Rodham Clinton Tree by USDA and the White House Millennium Council

Please send color prints to the address above via Federal Express. Charge the shipping fees to Jones and Bartlett's account #1104-4733-7 and reference the air bill to Chiras. We will include a courtesy photo credit for The White House Press Office upon publication.

Thank you for your cooperation and prompt reply.

Dear Ms. Dalsimer:

Referring to our telephone conversation of today I would like to submit the following question:

Yesterday I was told by the press office of the First Lady that President and Ms. Clinton had an appointment on Wednesday evening, Dec. 29, at the Sculpture Garden in Washington as part of the First Family's Final Goodbye.

The question is: Was it the National Sculpture Garden or the Sculpture Garden of the Hirshhorn Museum?

Since our deadline is today at 1 pm we would appreciate if you could give us an answer by then. Please call me at 202-347-5222, fax: 202-347-3194 or e-mail: derspiegel@nationalpress.com

Dear Erica,

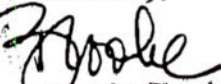

Thank you for your time on Friday. As you requested, here are a few thoughts about my story and requests of what I'll need. My deadline is December 8.

This is a food story, so I'd like to write about the White House Christmas feast this year. I'll need a menu and some recipes, maybe some holiday traditions of the first family. Also, I would really like to incorporate some history: what other first families ate at Christmas, did Grover Cleveland prefer goose, or something like that.

Since it's the 200th anniversary of the White House, it seems fitting we should talk about historical table decorations, what rooms they entertain in, etc.

Can you please help? I look forward to working with you.

Sincerely,

Brooke Tarabour

Re: Judy Weinraub / Washington Post Story

My media director, Tiki Davies, had lunch today with Judy Weinraub and at the end of lunch, mentioned a story idea. She then called me and here is the gist of what she wants to write. Judy wants to do a story on the impact of Hillary's decision to hire an American chef and the switch to American service. She thinks this is an incredibly positive story that ought to be done near the inauguration. She wants to highlight this decision as an extremely positive one and to showcase the dramatic effect that Walter's hiring has had on small producers of top quality products. For example, she mentioned is Jonathan White, the cheese maker that Walter uses a lot. She is hearing from a lot of people that Walter has reached out to the food community at large and is using a lot of small purveyors for which working with the White House has meant a great deal – it has even meant that they can stay in business.

She wants to talk with Walter and do a very positive story on Hillary's decision to hire him. She read Hillary's book and believes that this decision has been a really important one historically.

Dear First Lady Hillary Clinton,

I am producing a one-hour radio documentary entitled "Lady Bird Johnson: Legacy of a First Lady" for KUT-FM, Austin, Texas, which will be aired in January on National Public Radio as part of the NPR's Presidential Inauguration coverage. I would like you to participate in this worthy project which will highlight her contributions to society including "The Highway Beautification Act of 1965" and "The Lady Bird Johnson Wildflower Center".

One of the areas we will be covering in this program is the positive effect her role as First Lady had on those that came after her. With this in mind, we would like to have a few words from you in the program giving your personal view on how Lady Bird inspired you and affected your role as First Lady.

Because the program will air on NPR in January, the project is on a very tight schedule with all interviews to be conducted in the fall and production to be completed by mid-December 2000. We would like to record a few sentences from you in early November, immediately following your Senate campaign and the elections. We would only take up a few minutes of your time and could be recorded by phone if necessary.

I realize that you are very busy, but I do think that your insights would be extremely valuable. As you know, Mrs. Johnson, like you, was involved in many aspects of politics and government from campaigning to actively pursuing environmental legislative initiatives. We would certainly be able to work around your schedule and hope that you will be able to participate.

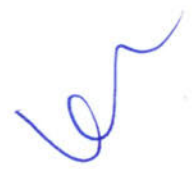

Attached is a brief description of the project that you may find helpful in making your decision. I look forward to hearing from you. Please call me at your earliest convenience at 512-459-6839.

Sincerely,

Joe Bevilacqua

Producer

MEMORANDUM

TO: HRC
FROM: Erika/Gayleen
RE: Phone interviews
DATE: December 21, 2000

You are scheduled to do 2 short phone interviews on Friday morning. The first is for a radio documentary on Lady Bird Johnson and the second is for the Yale Women's History Project.

"Lady Bird Johnson: Legacy of a First Lady"

The reporter producing the Lady Bird Johnson piece is Joe Bevilacqua. They would like you to briefly comment on how Lady Bird Johnson inspired you and affected your role as First Lady (they have talked to other former First Ladies as well). They only need a few sentences from you. The documentary will focus on Mrs. Johnson's contributions to society, including "The Highway Beautification Act of 1965" and "The Lady Bird Johnson Wildflower Center."

The one-hour documentary will air in January on NPR as part of the network's inaugural coverage. Additional background on Lady Bird Johnson is attached.

Claudia Taylor (Lady Bird) Johnson

Biography: Christened Claudia Alta Taylor when she was born in a country mansion near Karnack, Texas, she received her nickname "Lady Bird" as a small child; and as Lady Bird she is known and loved throughout America today. Perhaps that name was prophetic, as there has seldom been a First Lady so attuned to nature and the importance of conserving the environment.

Her mother, Minnie Pattillo Taylor, died when Lady Bird was five, so she was reared by her father, her aunt, and family servants. From her father, Thomas Jefferson Taylor, who had prospered, she learned much about the business world. An excellent student, she also learned to love classical literature. At the University of Texas she earned a bachelor's degree in arts and in journalism.

In 1934 Lady Bird met Lyndon Baines Johnson, then a Congressional secretary visiting Austin on official business; he promptly asked her for a date, which she accepted. He courted her from Washington with letters, telegrams, and telephone calls. Seven weeks later he was back in Texas; he proposed to her and she accepted. In her own words: "Sometimes Lyndon simply takes your breath away." They were married in November 1934.

The years that followed were devoted to Lyndon's political career, with "Bird" as partner, confidante, and helpmate. She helped keep his Congressional office open during World War II when he volunteered for naval service; and in 1955, when he had a severe heart attack, she helped his staff keep things running smoothly until he could return to his post as Majority Leader of the Senate. He once remarked that voters "would happily have elected her over me."

After repeated miscarriages, she gave birth to Lynda Bird (now Mrs. Charles S. Robb) in 1944; Luci Baines (Mrs. Ian Turpin) was born three years later.

In the election of 1960, Lady Bird successfully stumped for Democratic candidates across 35,000 miles of campaign trail. As wife of the Vice President, she became an ambassador of goodwill by visiting 33 foreign countries. Moving to the White House after Kennedy's murder, she did her best to ease a painful transition. She soon set her own stamp of Texas hospitality on social events, but these were not her chief concern. She created a First Lady's Committee for a More Beautiful Capital, then expanded her program to include the entire nation. She took a highly active part in her husband's war-on-poverty program, especially the Head Start project for preschool children.

When the Presidential term ended, the Johnsons returned to Texas, where he died in 1973. Mrs. Johnson's White House Diary, published in 1970, and a 1981 documentary film, The First Lady, A Portrait of Lady Bird Johnson, give sensitive and detailed views of her contributions to the President's Great Society administration. Today Lady Bird leads a life devoted to her husband's memory, her children, and seven grandchildren. She still supports causes dear to her--notably the National Wildflower Research Center, which she founded in 1982, and The Lyndon Baines Johnson Library. She also serves on the Board of the National Geographic Society as a trustee emeritus.

DATELINE: JOHNSON CITY, Tex.

BODY:

IT'S easy to miss the sign for Ranch Road, which turns off the state road north of Johnson City, especially if you're looking for Texas bluebonnets along the way.

It's a flat road, Ranch Road, but it winds gracefully along the Pedernales River, where Lyndon B. Johnson's registered Herefords -- his initials are on each pair of horns -- graze beneath the live oaks.

Lady Bird Johnson doesn't grant many interviews anymore, but she agreed to talk about wildflowers -- and the progress of the National Wildflower Research Center, one of those things that, Mrs. Johnson likes to say, "make my heart sing."

She founded the center about 10 years ago, on her 70th birthday, and her "birthday gift" to Austin, Tex., was 60 acres just east of town and $125,000 of seed money to look into something America had forgotten: its native plants. "I want our regions to look like themselves," she said. "When I get to Mississippi, I want to see mountain laurel and azaleas."

She is now 80 and her eyes are beginning to blur the color and shapes of the flowers she loves most. But come down in April, she had said, when the fields are carpeted with bluebonnets and red phlox and the fiery orange-red spires of Indian paintbrush.

It was a gray, chilly Sunday morning, as a Secret Service agent (First Ladies can have them for life, if they like) helped Mrs. Johnson, dressed for church, into the back seat of her white Lincoln Continental.

"I'm sorry you're seeing us on such a gray, drab day," Mrs. Johnson said as the Lincoln purred out the drive and along the river. "It just makes you wonder, is this local? Or is this global? It seems like we've broken more records for heat in the last three summers, and we've had a lot more rain."

She picked a bit of lint off her dark blue suit and set her cane down by her feet, which were in sensible blue flats with little bows (L.B.J. liked her in heels, but she said the Lord didn't make the foot to fit). She's prettier than in all those photos of the White House years. That stiff bubble hairdo has eased with the years into thick, wavy gray hair. Her smile is wide (she likes coral lipstick) and her eyes, even behind the thick glasses, have a level gaze.

She is gracious, but in an efficient way, as if this invitation had to be extended for the sake of her wildflowers. (After all, she has weathered a thousand interviews from journalists and biographers probing everything from Vietnam to stolen elections to her husband's love life.) She pointed out some trees along the river bank, laden with pink flowers. "I think that's redbud, but I could be wrong," she said, adding that she has an eye disease, macular degeneration. "I could feel real sorry for myself, but that wouldn't do any good."

The pecans weren't out yet, she noted. "The last two things to come out is pecans and mesquite. That means spring is here."

Mrs. Johnson, born Claudia Alta Taylor (her black nurse declared her pretty as a ladybird and the name stuck), grew up in Karnack, a little town in East Texas. Her father had a general store and sold everything from cornmeal to coffins.

"I just roamed the countryside," Mrs. Johnson said. "I wouldn't ever think of being afraid, or of getting lost. Of course, if I had, everybody knew T. J. Taylor. It was cotton country and corn and black people. And my father was the local landowner and gin owner so our life revolved around the crops."

She would wander down to the branch to find the first violets of spring. "The wind through the pines made such a melancholy, beautiful sound," she said. In summer, she went barefoot, reveling in the hot sand between her toes, and walking among the birches and the wild white roses.

She said she didn't really think about preserving such rambling beauty until "I got to the White House and was trying to figure out of all Lyndon's programs the ones that made my heart sing, like Head Start and the environment."

It was her husband's Great Society speech in 1964 that struck home, the one in which he exhorted Americans to clean up the air and water, preserve the shrinking wilderness -- and the green spaces in their cities.

"I thought, 'That gives the environment a place of dignity on the national agenda,' " Mrs. Johnson said. "It's not just a few garden club ladies. It belongs to us.' And in an urban environment, it doesn't just mean planting flowers in a park, it means the right to order and cleanliness and a pleasant life."

On a barge in Lake Erie, she had watched "a great swivel-type dipper that scooped up this water that looked like a combination of glue and ink, the foulest-looking thing you could imagine," she said. "It fills you with rage to realize how careless we've been."

Within the next year, Mrs. Johnson had rounded up a group of influential friends for the First Lady's Committee for a More Beautiful Capital.

"The Secretary of the Interior, Stewart Udall, was very much a spark plug," she said. "And so was Nash Castro of the National Parks Service, and so was a dear friend of mine, Mrs. Jim Rowe, head of the garden clubs, then my good friend Mary Lasker and Laurance Rockefeller, people who had similar beliefs.

"It was a mar-r-r-velous yeasty committee. Mary Lasker gave us a million daffodil bulbs, which we planted around Rock Creek and along the Potomac."

In the next four years, they planted two million bulbs, thousands of cherry trees and dogwoods -- and not just around the monuments. They went into the blighted neighborhoods as well. "We did invest a lot of money on getting rid of rats," Mrs. Johnson said, though critics said "beautification" was just putting a pretty face on poverty.

The Lincoln pulled up to St. Barnabus Episcopal Church in Fredericksburg, west of Johnson City, and Mrs. Johnson, who carries a cane these days but doesn't like to use it, just tucked her hand into a nearby man's elbow, with the words, "I'm going to grab onto you if you don't mind." Two men gave up their seats on a pew, and at a pause in the service, she pointed out the stained glass: "Probably the only place you will see a cactus blooming in a church window."

On the way home, Mrs. Johnson promised to "stop chasing rabbits" and get to the nitty gritty of the work at the wildflower center. But chasing rabbits was maybe the point.

She spent about five years helping Austin build a hiking trail along Town Lake -- actually a part of the Colorado River that courses through the downtown -- turning an overgrown eyesore and a deserted old dump into a wide path now bordered by native plants. "You must go walk on it," she said. "I loved that project to death."

In 10 years, the center's membership -- from every state and 20 countries -- has grown to 18,000. Its $1.7 million budget finances everything from researching prairie restoration to advising states across the country on how to plant wildflowers along their highways, at enormous savings in water, fertilizer and work time. It also helps gardeners locate species native to their regions and learn how to grow them. Which isn't easy.

The Lincoln trailed home along the Perdenales, where cattle herons grazed with the L.B.J. Herefords, and Mrs Johnson pointed out the gravestones of the family plot that lies by the river, beneath a great live oak. There's Lyndon's stone, she said, and his grandmother's and grandfather's, and his mother's and father's, and his great-grandmother's (hers has the little lamb on the top). They couldn't get her body across the river one year, it ran so high, so they made this graveyard under the oak tree.

The original part of the house is fieldstone (one great room with a fireplace, L.B.J.'s domino table and Sam Rayburn's picture, the one they had in the White House). But the real living room, added later, the one with the comfortable chairs and the vases of bluebonnets and the fire going, is where the family gathers. Lynda Bird and Luci Baines, who have seven children between them, are frequent visitors. The house is full of rugs and old furniture and American paintings. And photographs line the hallways -- of the children and grandchildren and everybody from Helen Hayes to Stewart Udall.

"That's all you're having?" Mr. Munoz murmured as Mrs. Johnson put half her chicken on her butter plate. Yes, she said. She is two sizes bigger than she was in the White House.

He's settin' on the square.

Next time I seen him, he had his fam'ly there, he had his fammmmm-'ly there.

Tell me, boll weee-vil,

Where is your na-tive home?

Way down in the bot-tom

Among the cot'n an' co'n.

It was suddenly easy to remember that Mrs. Johnson's father owned 18,000 acres and was called Mr. Boss.

What does a boll weevil look like, Mrs. Johnson?

T. J. Taylor's daughter smiled faintly. "I've never seen one," she said. "But he was a problem for the black man and a problem for the white man."

That so.

Spring pressed in on the windows. The bluebonnets turned bluer out in the yard. It was time to change out of this Sunday garb and walk among the wildflowers.

A busload of tourists came down River Road, and Mrs. Johnson lifted her right arm to the blue sky in a grand gesture. "Glad the sun came out for y'all," she sang out. They pressed their faces to the windows. Look, there she is, standing right in her bluebonnets. Chucking her cane under an old live oak as she walks through the unmown grass toward the river.

The hummingbirds sipped nectar from the Indian paintbrush. A mockingbird sang. The crape myrtle is coming back to life.

"I was afraid it got froze," Mrs. Johnson said. "We had a very bad out-of-season freeze a week or two ago and it AWHHHH-most killed it."

The puffy clouds moved over the river at a good clip. The Indian paintbrush turned the same coral color as Mrs. Johnson's lipstick.

Her assistant telephoned the visitor's hotel the next morning: "Mrs. Johnson wants to make sure you know that Route 71, from Buchanan to Llano, has the best wildflowers right now."

LADY BIRD JOHNSON AND THE ENVIRONMENT

By Lewis L. Gould.

Illustrated. 312 pp. Lawrence:

University Press of Kansas. $29.95.

Lady Bird Johnson, the wife of one of the most intensely and personally political of our Presidents, spent much of her married life in a national capital city still dominated by a white male power structure where "policy matters were appropriately a preeminently male preserve." Not until after the Johnson Administration did custom, law and practice begin to transform the role of women high and low, in and out of power, in and out of Washington.

The politics of the environment, as Mrs. Johnson began to practice it in the White House in 1964 and 1965, though restricted by the umbrella label "Natural Beauty," was still a highly personal matter. As Lewis L. Gould, a historian at the University of Texas, Austin, says in "Lady Bird Johnson and the Environment," success, if it was to come in her long-term campaign, would depend heavily on her own persistence and personal contacts as well as contributions to her ventures from private funds. There were her own monies, enlarged from the early inheritance that had financed the Johnsons' ownership of KTBC-TV in Austin, Tex., an immensely profitable venture. And there were rich friends - notably Mary Lasker, Brooke Astor, Laurance Rockefeller and Stephen Currier, who was married to a member of the Mellon family.

There were no impact laws to quantify local environmental quality, or its absence. The Federal infrastructure that today permeates environmental affairs was still to come. Mrs. Johnson's early observations were criticized as personal; her impressions and anecdotal evidence were to be listened to politely, of course, but were not to be seriously considered. Even within the Johnson White House itself, chauvinism prevailed.

The placement of the Hirshhorn Museum on the Mall in Washington is a case in point. During the early 1960's, the wealthy art collector Joseph Hirshhorn's efforts to find a home for his collection in Los Angeles, London and New York had stalled. S. Dillon Ripley, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, saw a chance to entice Hirshhorn and his museum to the Mall in Washington through Mrs. Johnson's access to the President. There followed an extended sociopolitical courtship: overtures through friends, invitations to the White House ("a little time to ourselves just to see the paintings of the White House," wrote Mrs. Johnson, "before the other luncheon guests arrived"). The President assured Hirshhorn, "you don't need a contract. Just turn the collection over to the Smithsonian and I'll take care of the rest."

But Hirshhorn, not taken in, specified that the museum must "bear my name in perpetuity." There should be a contract - an act of Congress. Mrs. Johnson visited the Hirshhorns at home and performed an act of contrition: "I really know nothing about art. I'm prepared to learn." As Mr. Gould comments, she kept well polished her "understanding, gained first in East Texas, that men became uncomfortable with women whose intelligence and learning equaled or exceeded their own." Congress acted in 1966, the ground-breaking for the Hirshhorn Museum took place in 1969 just before the Johnsons vacated the White House, the dedication came five years later.

Mr. Gould details in similar fashion Mrs. Johnson's struggles to improve the visible environment in the man's world of Washington. During her husband's years as congressman, senator, Vice President and President - 1943-68 - beauty was tolerated if not denigrated by powerful congressmen and the mostly male Federal establishment. It was "probably the only subject that LBJ would have let her [Mrs. Johnson] handle without jealousy," observed a longtime associate, Nancy Dickerson.

For Mrs. Johnson, beautification slowly acquired the broader environmental overtones that fully emerged from the background in the 1970's. She continued her skillful appearances at ground-breakings, courted the press, gave women reporters a newsworthy beat to cover. Her biographer agrees with many of Mrs. Johnson's contemporaries in judging the Highway Beautification Act of 1965, with all its compromises, as "the most significant legislative achievement" having her support. But more was to come: after returning to Texas, she established the National Wildflower Research Center near Austin.

In the White House, Mrs. Johnson had benefited from - without attempting to copy - the example set by Eleanor Roosevelt, the first great activist First Lady. Compared with her glamorous predecessor, Jacqueline Kennedy, and with the less legislatively astute wives who later accompanied Presidents Nixon, Ford and Reagan into the White house, Mrs. Johnson broadened for all time the potential role of First Lady.

In a biography such as this traditional values prevail. There is no Grand Theme, no soaring new interpretation and few speculations distilled from the mountainous documentation to which the author had access. Yet it is an admirable venture into serious history, giving future scholars and First Ladies a firm footing for their own interpretations.

If the Presidential spouse as role-model should in time become an Office Holder, with constitutional or other powers accompanying, Lady Bird Johnson will have played her part in smoothing the way.

Dear Ms. Lissa Muscatine:

Focus Magazine, a Japanese newsweekly published in Tokyo, Japan by Shinchosha Company (circulation of approximately 800,000) is planning an article on "The Role of Female Politicians in the United States and Japan for the New Millennium" and would like The First Lady, Mrs. Hillary Clinton to represent the United States. We would like to request the opportunity for an interview, but knowing the extremely busy circumstances of her transition from the White House to the Senate, we understand that this may not be plausible. However, we thought if it might be possible to ask a few questions in writing and await if the First Lady will be willing to answer them.

The questions will follow on the accompanying page and our deadline is January 5, 2001. I would be much obliged if you could reply to me at our Washington, DC bureau address, fax, or email.

I appreciate that your time is valuable and I would be grateful for any assistance from you.

Sincerely yours,

Bureau Chief

Questions for the First Lady for "The Role of Female Politicians in the United States and Japan for the New Millennium" article, Focus Magazine / Tokyo

1. Do you believe that there are merits or benefits for the nation that women are serving as politicians in the United States? If so, what are they?
2. Do you believe that there are differences in the way male and female politicians govern? Are there any advantages or shortcomings for being a female politician?
3. What will be the first items on your agenda as Senator?
4. Who do admire as a politician? And why?
5. You have been symbolized in Japan as the "person most likely to become the first woman President of the United States." How do you feel about being looked upon this way and do you feel that one day, you may run for the Presidency?
6. What were some of the hardships as being the wife of the President during his political campaigns?
7. Would you like to see your daughter run for office some day? What would be your advice for her?
8. If you were to become President of the United States in the future, what would be the most important issue that you would like to see resolved?

Dear Ms. Delsimer,

The New York Times would love to do a "Question and Answer" with the White House Curator, Betty Monkman for our Inaugural issue of the Magazine, to be published on January 14.

The feature will appear in the front section of the Magazine called "The Way we Live Now". Past interviews for this page include everyone from Vernon Jordan to Renee Fleming to John Ashberry to Kareena Gore Schiff. Our readers would be thrilled to read about Ms. Monkman and the positions she has held in her thirty years of employment at The White House.

We would need to do a phone interview and send a photographer to do a portrait by Tuesday, January 2. Please let me know at your earliest convenience if this will be possible.

Yours Sincerely,

Kira Pollack

Dear photo staff,

I am writing to request a photograph of Hillary Clinton for publication in our forthcoming New Oxford American Dictionary. The photograph will accompany a brief biographical entry.

Here is the information about our project:

- Print Run 75,000 (plus 10,000 bundled CD-ROMs)
- Pub. Date October 2001
- Rights one-time, North American
- Images BxW, interior, spot

We would also like to clear rights for usage in a Putnam college edition of the dictionary:

- Print Run 50,000
- Pub. Date July 2002
- Rights one-time, U.S.

We prefer an 8x10, BxW, glossy print, but may be able to use color or other formats. Our Federal Express number is 1520-1652-2 (internal ref. 383). We are on an extremely tight schedule and must have prints in by the end of the month—the sooner the better.

Thank you for your help. Please call me if you have questions or need more information.

Dear Mrs Muscatine,

Mr Bill Di Blasio recommended that I contact you. I would like to submit to you a request for an interview with the First Lady.

Mrs Clinton has already left her mark on US politics. Because of her active role as First Lady, she has acquired a unique position in American history. That is all the more so since her overwhelming victory in the New York Senate race. Her election reflects superb political talent, but also contains a message to millions of couples that two high profile careers are compatible. Needless to say that the public throughout the world is interested in her story and in her views.

We would be thrilled if Ms Clinton granted an interview for our special Christmas issue. Topics would be: the changing role of the First Lady, campaigning in the United States, the position of women in politics and in public life generally, the chances to bridge the gap between rich and poor in America.

Elsevier is the leading news weekly in the Netherlands, comparable to Time and Newsweek. I am its New York correspondent. In the Christmas issue, which has a readership of one million, we are proud to publish interviews with world leaders in politics and business as well as prominent academics and artists.

The deadline is the first week of December.

Please let me know if you need additional information. I look forward to hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

Yours truly,

Elsbeth Tiedemann

BY END OF NOVEMBER.

I am producing a one-hour radio documentary entitled "Lady Bird Johnson: Legacy of a First Lady" for KUT-FM, Austin, Texas, which will be aired in January on National Public Radio as part of the NPR's Presidential Inauguration coverage. I would like you to participate in this worthy project which will highlight her contributions to society including "The Highway Beautification Act of 1965" and "The Lady Bird Johnson Wildflower Center".

One of the areas we will be covering in this program is the positive effect her role as First Lady had on those that came after her. With this in mind, we would like to have a few words from you in the program giving your personal view on how Lady Bird inspired you and affected your role as First Lady.

Because the program will air on NPR in January, the project is on a very tight schedule with all interviews to be conducted in the fall and production to be completed by mid-December 2000. We would like to record a few sentences from you in early November, immediately following your Senate campaign and the elections. We would only take up a few minutes of your time and could be recorded by phone if necessary.

I realize that you are very busy, but I do think that your insights would be extremely valuable. As you know, Mrs. Johnson, like you, was involved in many aspects of politics and government from campaigning to actively pursuing environmental legislative initiatives. We would certainly be able to work around your schedule and hope that you will be able to participate.

Attached is a brief description of the project that you may find helpful in making your decision. I look forward to hearing from you. Please call me at your earliest convenience at 512-459-6839.

Sincerely,

Lady Bird Johnson: Legacy of a First Lady

"The Constitution of the United States does not mention the first lady. She is elected by one man only. The statute books assign her no duties; and yet, when she gets the job, a podium is there if she cares to use it. I did." --Lady Bird Johnson

In January, The United States will inaugurate a new president and a new first lady. One of the legacies of a presidency is that of the first lady. Lady Bird Johnson: Legacy of a First Lady will be a one-hour radio documentary for national distribution examining the challenges, achievements, and failures of our oldest living first lady: Lady Bird Johnson.

Questions that will be raised include:

How did Lady Bird's views differ from her husband? What aspects of her childhood and life before becoming First Lady helped define what she did as First Lady? Did she redefine the role of First Lady? How did she effect future First Ladies? Did she represent a style or character of First Lady that was significant? Did she use the power of the First Lady for things both noble and ignoble? What obstacles to she face as First Lady? What failures did she have? What did colleagues think of her at the time? What do they think of her now? What has she done since leaving the White House? What legacy will she leave behind?

The documentary will combine archive audio interviews, oral histories, and other records housed at the LBJ Library and Museum, the John F. Kennedy Library, the National Archives and Records Administration, the Library of Congress and the Smithsonian Institution, period news clips and music of the time period, new interviews with surviving colleagues, other first Ladies, and the words of Mrs. Johnson herself from interviews past and present and her personal diaries.

In order to ensure accuracy and objectivity, the production will be overseen by a panel of scholars and experts including historians from the University of Texas at Austin. In addition to a producer and associate producer, a content editor will be used to further insure the accuracy.

Lady Bird Johnson: Legacy of a First Lady will be offered to National Public Radio stations nationwide in mid-December 2000, for broadcast during coverage of the January 2001 Presidential Inaugural and rebroadcast in March 2001 during Woman's History Month.

Dear Erika,

I am writing to request an interview with the First Lady for a one hour news special that NBC is preparing on the issue of trafficking and servitude in the United States. We understand that Hillary Clinton has been speaking out about these problems for several years now. We would want her to comment on the global nature of the problem, the vulnerability of victims, what needs to be done to prevent these crimes, what are the obstacles that governments face, etc?

If possible, we would like to schedule an interview as soon as possible after the election. Our correspondent is Geraldo Rivera. I've enclosed some background information on several of the other documentaries that we've done. Would it be possible for you to send me background on the First Lady's statements and actions on trafficking? My address is on the letterhead, just make sure you include the room number - 408. Please send the material by Federal Express. Our account # is 147-581-947. If the material is not over 10 pages, you can fax it to me, at 212-664-2426. I can be reached at 212-664-4322.

Eighteen Journalists Honored for Illuminating the Plight of the Disadvantaged Annual RFK Journalism Awards Presented at Washington, D.C. Ceremony

Washington, D.C. (May 11, 2000) – Eighteen print and broadcast journalists selected for their outstanding reporting on the problems of the disadvantaged received the 32nd Annual Robert F. Kennedy Journalism Award. Washington Post reporter Peter Finn won both this year's Grand Prize and First Place in the International Print category for his series of stories on atrocities committed during the conflict in Kosovo. Other award winners were honored for their reporting on people living at the margins of society: children living in poverty, immigrant workers, victims of violence or environmental pollution, people with disabilities, and prison inmates.

Mrs. Robert Kennedy and Courtney Kennedy Hill presented the awards at a May 11, 2000, ceremony at The Freedom Forum in Arlington, Virginia.

"The highest calling of journalists is to observe our world, and then to do something that makes a difference," said Gwen Ifill of WETA and Chair of this year's RFK Journalism Awards Committee. "The RFK Journalism Awards recognize reporting that illuminates the plight of the people Robert Kennedy cared about. We honor these journalists for allowing us to hear the voices of the disadvantaged and to see the world through their eyes."

First Prize, Domestic Television Broadcast

"Women in Prison: Nowhere to Hide" – Geraldo Rivera, Reporter, and Susan Farkas, Executive Producer, NBC News

This NBC News Special Report documented abuse in America's prisons against female prison inmates by male guards, including incidents of sexual intimidation, illegal and demeaning body searches and, in some instances, rape. In many cases, women who reported abuses suffered retaliation from the guards who abused them. After the program aired, Congressman John Conyers (D-MI) held legislative hearings about conditions in Michigan's women's prisons. As result, the Michigan Department of Corrections announced that it would no longer assign male corrections officers to women's housing units.

Now in its 32nd year, the Robert F. Kennedy Journalism Awards were founded in 1968 by a group of reporters who covered Robert Kennedy's presidential campaign. Dedicated to Robert Kennedy's youngest child, Rory, it is the largest single program that honors outstanding reporting on the problems of the disadvantaged. Known as the "Poor People's Pulitzers," it is one of the few journalism awards in which the winners are judged solely by their peers.

Robert F. Kennedy's belief that individual action could overcome injustice and oppression continues to inspire generations to change the world. For three decades, the Robert F. Kennedy Memorial has been dedicated to perpetuating his vision by encouraging respect for human rights and social justice in the United States and around the world through its domestic and international programs.

JOINT LEGISLATIVE HEARING
RE: "NOWHERE TO HIDE" IN MICHIGAN PRISONS FOR WOMEN"
MONDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1999 (9:00 A.M. - 1:00 P.M.)
COLEMAN A. YOUNG MUNICIPAL CENTER AUDITORIUM - 13TH FLOOR

As a direct response to Geraldo Rivera's NBC Special, "Women in Prison: Nowhere to Hide" which spotlighted Michigan correctional system for women and their strong stand against any outside intervention or monitoring, Congresswoman Carolyn Cheeks Kilpatrick and I are convening a Joint Legislative Hearing comprised of local and state officials to listen to testimony from those have been directly involved with this on-going travesty of justice. We would be most honored if you could plan to attend this important event and participate as a Panelist.

The contribution of Human Rights Watch to put the international spotlight on our continued acceptance of a double standard in addressing human rights violations has been significant. Now it is up to us to take the necessary steps in addressing this grave matter. We no longer can sit back and ignore it. It is long past time for those who believe that rape and sexual assault should not be considered "part of the sentence" to step up and be counted.

As you must know, the impact of welfare reform has impacted the citizens of Detroit in more than one way. We are losing a disproportionate number of African Americans to the penal system. While violent crimes have gone down, our incarceration rates continue to soar, particularly with women. Therefore, it is most appropriate to convene this hearing in Detroit for both state and local officials. We believe that your efforts to attend will not be disappointing.

Please contact Deanna Maher Scallen at (313) 961-5670 (or voice mail at 884-6001) to confirm your attendance. Feel free to copy and distribute the attached flyer. If you should have any further questions, do not hesitate to contact us. We sincerely look forward to hearing from you.

Dear Lissa:

People Magazine has selected First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton as one of the year's Most Intriguing People. We would like to interview and photograph Mrs. Clinton in the next few weeks about her historic Senate race and her plans once she takes office next year.

We understand that President and Mrs. Clinton are planning to travel overseas next week and are returning on Nov. 21, but we hope that she can find time in her busy schedule for us. People Magazine, which reaches 35 million readers weekly, features the Most Intriguing People in a double year-end issue that is on the news stands for two weeks. Many of our readers – the majority women – will want to hear Mrs. Clinton's words describing how she became the first First Lady ever elected to office.

Thanks in advance for considering this request. We look forward to talking to you about the interview and photo session.

Sincerely,

Dear Ms. Muscatine:

I am writing to follow up on my telephone message of last week to set a date for an oral history interview with the First Lady for the Yale Law School Women's History Project. When you and I spoke in May, you asked that I contact you shortly after Labor Day to set a date for an interview in November, 2000 following the Senate election.

I appreciate that this is a very busy time for you, but wanted to make sure that I followed up on your request that I contact you in early September to schedule an oral history interview with the First Lady in November.

I look forward to hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

Sincerely,

The reporter is Joe Bevilacqua....he needs literally 2 minutes with HRC on the phone (or he could catch up w/ her at an event) by the end of November. I told him we'd run it by HRC and that it would ultimately depend on her schedule. He's already talked to former first ladies, except Nancy Reagan. The story will run nationally in January.

For the year end issue of Time magazine, we are producing a photographic portfolio of the most important persons of the year for a section entitled PEOPLE WHO MATTERED. This portfolio is part of the annual Time Man of the Year package. The three main photographers producing the portraits for this section are Gregory Heisler, Nigel Parry, and Albert Watson.

We would like to request that Mrs. Clinton sit for one of our photographers for this very special portfolio. Our absolute deadline for this portrait is Friday, December 1.

We would appreciate your cooperation and look forward to hearing from you. Thank you in advance for your careful consideration of this request.

Dear Ms. Muscatine,

Let me introduce myself. I'm Jim Kelly, and I've just been named the new managing editor of Time, succeeding Walter Isaacson. As one of my first acts, I plan on publishing a stunning photo gallery of the most important people of 2000. We've already photographed Ehud Barak, Tiger Woods and Vincente Fox; we'd love to include the newly-elected Senator from New York as well. Trust me; this will be an extraordinary showcase in our year-end double issue.

We understand that during this transition period Mrs. Clinton's schedule is extremely tight. Given time for hair and makeup, the photographer's setup and breakdown, and the actual portrait, we are requesting only about 45 minutes. One of our portfolio photographers, Gregory Heisler, Nigel Parry, or Albert Watson, would be happy to travel to whatever location would be most convenient for her. Due to our tight deadlines, we'd love to make an appointment sometime before December 5.

I'd be most grateful for any help you can give us. And please free to call me at 212-522-2819 if you would like to discuss my proposal further.

Sincerely

Jim Kelly

Hi Erika.

I spoke to you on the phone on Thursday 9. You gave me your email but I got the message returned. I'll try again today, but in the meantime am also trying the snail version to try to get to you. Here's my original message:

I'm Portuguese, my name is Clara Pinto Correia, I am a Full Professor at Universidade Lusófona (Lisbon) where I teach Embryology and History of Science, I got my Ph.D. at SUNY at Buffalo, did a post-doc at UMass-Amherst and worked after that at the History of Science Dept. at Harvard. Presently I'm Stephen Jay Gould's research associate there. I'm also a writer, and have a weekly editorial at the magazine "VISÃO", pretty much the Portuguese equivalent of Time magazine. My husband is American and teaches at Amherst College. I've long admired the work and public presence of Hillary Clinton and today, after the announcement of her Senate victory, VISÃO asked me to go over to the States to interview her (long, detailed interview on politics, being a woman, having a family, how to explain America to Europeans, what's worth fighting for, what's next for her, why these choices). I'm writing to enquire about the possibilities of setting up this interview. I understand Mrs. Clinton must be extremely busy and pestered with requests of this sort right now, and my friend Susan McGowan, through whom I got your phone number, also told me she's going to be visiting Vietnam. Is there any possibility of scheduling something between November 26th and Sunday 3rd? Any time and place would do for me.
Thank you in advance for your help.

Best
