FIRST LADY HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
STATEMENT UPON ARRIVAL IN FINLAND
HELSINKI, FINLAND
JULY 9, 1996

I am pleased to arrive in Finland this evening at the conclusion of a trip to Central Europe and the Baltic region. On behalf of the President and the American people, I have delivered a message of hope and encouragement to the people of the new democracies of Europe who are striving to build civil societies and strengthen democratic values in the wake of communism's fall.

Finland's experience during the Cold War was unique, maintaining constructive relations with its neighbors, serving as a source of information and as an example of a free and open society, and contributing to Europe and the world culturally and through the arts. In the West, we must not forget that the Helsinki Accords lent moral force to dissidents in Central Europe and the Baltic states who led the struggle for freedom and democracy before 1989.

During my brief stay in Finland I will meet with President Ahtisaari and with other officials and private citizens who have helped to shape Finnish society. I look forward to learning from them and to exploring ways in which our countries can work together to strengthen democracy and freedom in Europe and around the world.

FIRST LADY HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
STATEMENT UPON ARRIVAL IN THE CZECH REPUBLIC
PRAGUE, THE CZECH REPUBLIC
JULY 3, 1996

It is a pleasure to come to Prague, one of the world's most beautiful cities and capital of a nation that is leading Central Europe's democratic transformation.

I arrive on the eve of America's Independence Day with a message of support and commitment from the American people to the people of the Czech Republic. From afar, we have admired the Czech Republic's inspiring success in making a free market democracy work after decades of tyranny and dictatorship. And Americans are proud to stand with the Czech people as they complete their journey back to the democratic family of the West.

I look forward during my stay to meeting with government leaders and the people of Prague and learning more about the democratic spirit that is brightening the future of this nation.

To the government and people of the Czech Republic, I convey my deepest appreciation for their warm welcome.

FIRST LADY HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
STATEMENT UPON ARRIVAL IN POLAND
KRAKOW, POLAND
JULY 2, 1996

I am honored to have this opportunity to visit Poland again and to bring from America a message of hope and solidarity to the Polish people.

During my stay, I will have the privilege of visiting the ancient city of Krakow and the modern capital of Warsaw, where I hope to learn more about Poland's courageous efforts to build a new and democratic nation. Today and tomorrow I will meet with government leaders, intellectual heroes, and men and women in non-governmental organizations whose work is dedicated to strengthening the foundations of Polish democracy.

I also will visit Auschwitz and Birkenau. These two places are history's most terrible examples of the consequences of intolerance and anti-Semitism. And they should stand in our memory as a warning of what can happen to any society when tolerance, compassion and justice are extinguished by zealots who preach ethnic, religious and racial hatred.

I look forward with great anticipation to this visit and to gaining a deeper appreciation of Poland's inspiring embrace of democracy and freedom. To President and Mrs. Kwasniewski, the Polish government and the Polish people, I offer thanks for extending me such a gracious welcome.

FIRST LADY HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
ARRIVAL STATEMENT IN HUNGARY
BUDAPEST, HUNGARY
JULY 6, 1996

I am delighted to be able to spend this weekend in Budapest and to bring to the Hungarian people a message of admiration and encouragement from America.

We admire your leadership in bringing democratic and economic reforms to Central Europe and in laying the foundation of civil society in Hungary. This country is well on its way to regaining its rightful place in the Western family of democratic nations.

While I am here I will have the opportunity to meet with government leaders, representatives of non-governmental organizations, women from all areas of Hungarian life, members of the Roma community, and citizens working to build a strong democracy in Hungary.

I look forward to learning more about the progress that has been made here, as well as the obstacles that still remain. I thank the government and people of Hungary for extending a warm welcome to me in the beautiful city of Budapest.

PHOTOCOPY

EVENT DESCRIPTION:
A ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION WITH REPRESENTATIVES OF THE ROMA COMMUNITY

CONTEXT:

The First Lady will participate in a group discussion with Roma (Gypsy) women, primarily single mothers but also including representatives from NGOs and the local government, living in the poorest area of Budapest. Hungary's large (400-500,000) Roma community faces widespread discrimination, has limited educational opportunities, and suffers exceedingly high unemployment (60 percent overall, approaching 100 percent in some depressed areas).

The meeting will be held at the Daily Help Service Foundation, located in Budapest's poverty-stricken Eighth District. The foundation provides legal and family counseling, activities for children, parenting classes, job placement and referral, assistance in dealing with local government, as well as the distribution of subsidized food and clothing. The beneficiaries are mostly members of the Eighth District's large Roma community, though many non-Roma also participate. The foundation is independently financed through grants and donations. It recently received a grant from the U.S. Government-financed Democracy Networks program. It is the only foundation in Hungary offering these kinds of services to the Roma community.

GREETERS:

Zsuzsa Simon, Director, Daily Help Service Foundation
Brigitta Shalae (child greeter)

KEY PARTICIPANTS:

Women

1. Zsuzsa Simon, 46, Director of Daily Help Service Foundation. A social worker by training, she supervises the programs offered by the Foundation.
2. Ilona Zambo, 49, founder and president of the Gypsy Mother's Association, a national organization aimed at protecting the rights of Roma women and children.
3. Erika Zambo, 27, member of the Gypsy Mother's Association and employee of the Eighth District Local Council. She will travel to the U.S. later this month to participate in USIA's International Visitor program.
4. Eva Csiki, 22, university student.
5. Angela Kocze, 26, sociology student who also works with the Autonomia Foundation, an NGO representing the Roma community.

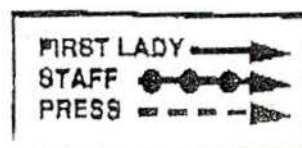

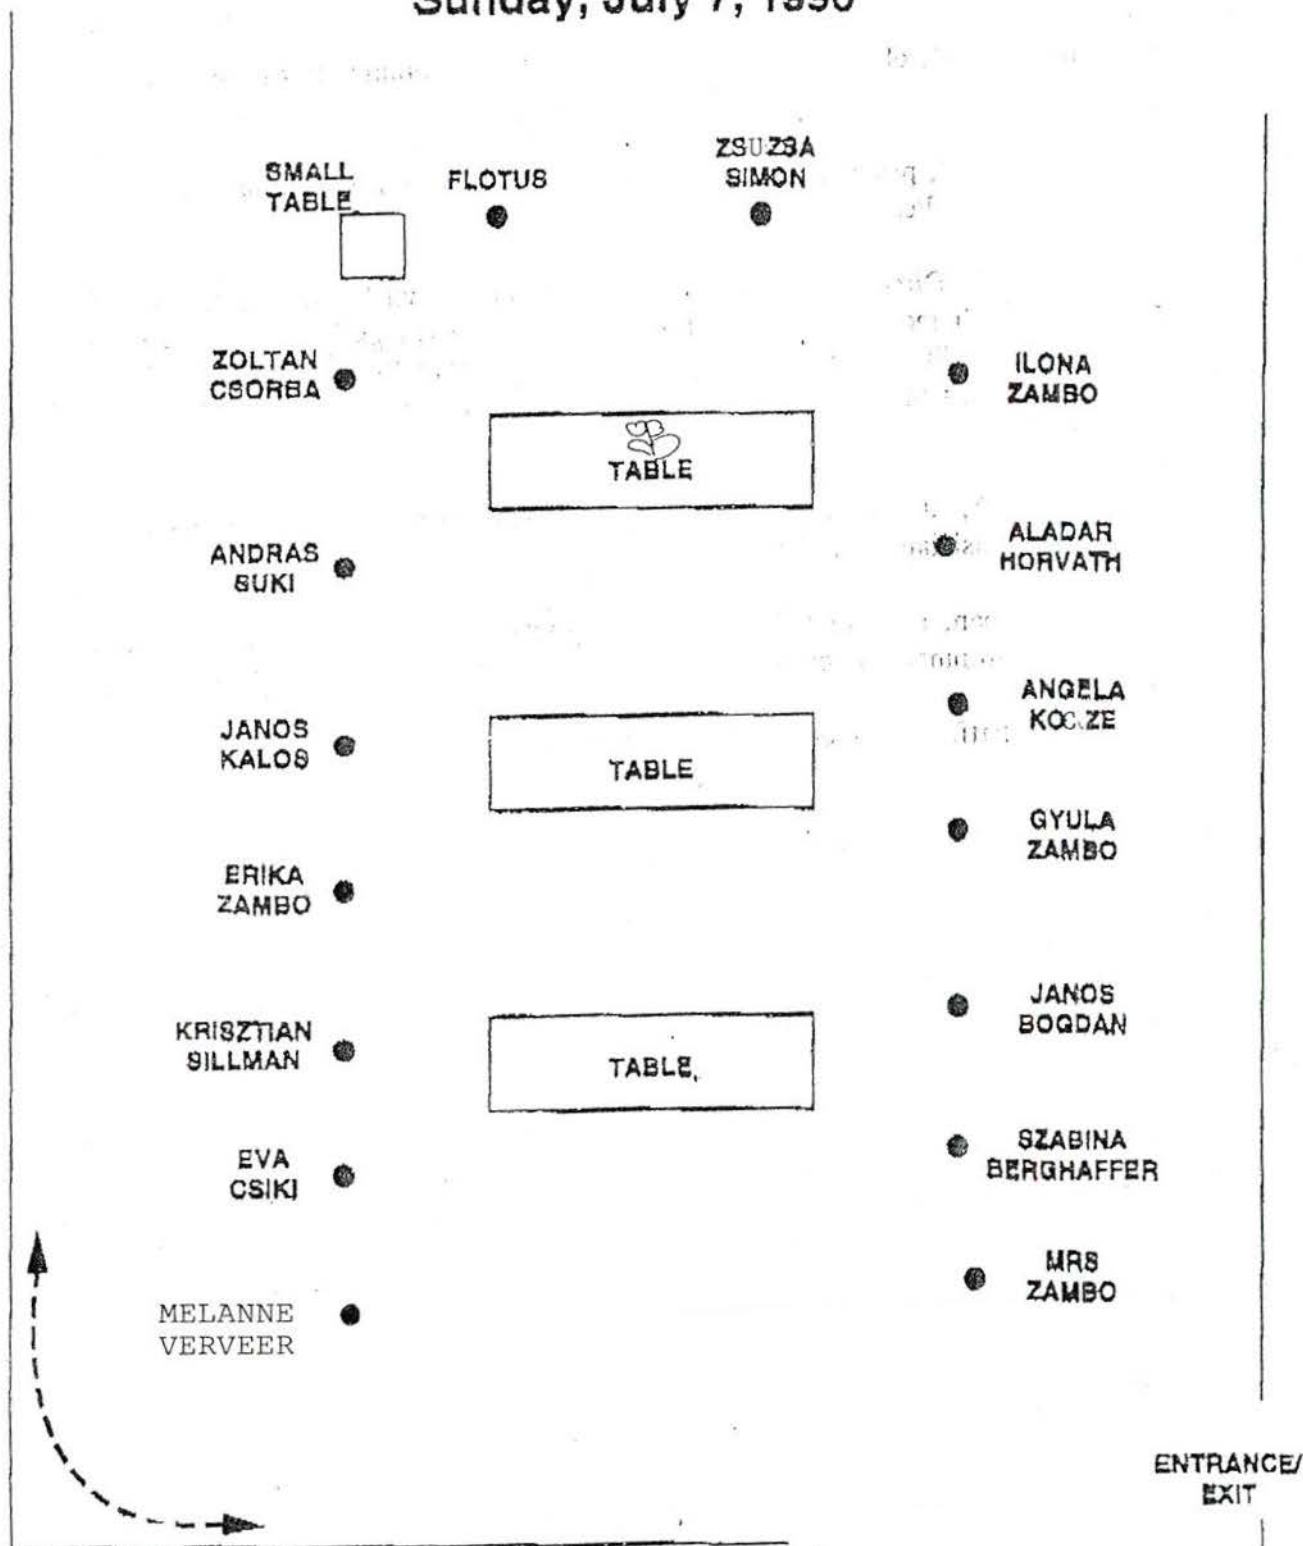

Men

1. Zoltan Csorba, 32, elected representative of the Roma community of the Eighth District.
2. Janos Bogdan, 33, principal of the Gandhi Secondary School for Roma children in the provincial city of Pecs.
3. Aladar Horvath, Director of the Foundation for Roma Civil Rights and former Member of Parliament. He is also the president of the Hungarian Roma Parliament, a separate umbrella organization coordinating the work of Romani NGOs. Mr. Horvath took part in the International Visitor program in 1995.

Children

1. Janos Kalas, 15, student at one of the worst schools in Budapest. He comes from a long line of musicians and plays the violin.
2. Krisztian Sillman, 14. His father passed away when Krisztian was very young, and his home environment is very difficult.
3. Szabina Berghaffer, 13, oldest of four children. Her mother is single.

FIRST LADY HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
TIME FOR KIDS SPECIAL ELECTION ISSUE

- 1) When I first came to the White House, I had all sorts of ideas about what the First Lady's job would be like. While it's been a wonderful three-and-a-half years, it's nothing like what I imagined. From hosting big dinners for foreign presidents to meeting foster children who are waiting to be adopted to helping my daughter Chelsea with her homework, each day offers different and interesting experiences. What I've learned over the years is that every First Lady must balance her public commitments and family life according to her own talents, experiences, and interests. And I have tried to do what I think is right for me and for my family and in the process help my husband.
- 2) I hope to keep working for and with children across the country and around the world. There is nothing more important than making sure our children are ready for the challenges of the future -- and that means every child. I would like to encourage more people to help guarantee that every child in America is healthy, educated and loved.
- 3) The job of President is very difficult and requires a special temperament. I don't think it's a job for me.
- 4) I've spent a great deal of time reading about the former First Ladies -- and I've even visited with some of them to seek advice about the job and about living in the White House. Each of my predecessors has made significant contributions to the role of First Lady and our country, and all of them have inspired me in some way. Perhaps Eleanor Roosevelt has inspired me most. I have always admired her courage to speak her mind, her commitment to helping the less fortunate, and her grace under pressure.

Points for the First Lady to use if asked about Russian election

- Presidential election held today is important sign of Russia's continued democratic development. Wonderful to see millions of Russians going to polls to complete the process begun on June 16.
- As ballots being tallied, congratulate all who participated in election for exercising constitutional right to choose their leader.
- My husband's Administration has strongly supported political reform in Russia and applauds the changes that empower Russian people to elect president in contested election.
- While election for Russians to decide, many Americans closely following count. No surprise about that -- what happens in Russia matters to us and to you.

EBC-EHOLD CLINTON-WHITEWATER (TRANSMISSION EMBARGO)F

Whitewater probers head toward Clinton -- magazine

(Eds: transmission embargo: not to move on wire until 9 a.m. Sunday, July 7)

NEW YORK, July 7 (Sunday) (Reuter) - Whitewater prosecutors discussed naming President Clinton as an unindicted co-conspirator in the trial of his former business partners and may now be heading toward the President himself, the New Yorker Magazine reported Sunday.

An article by James Stewart, author of the best-selling book about the Whitewater scandal "Blood Sport," said that prosecutors in the trial of Jim and Susan McDougal discussed naming Clinton as an unindicted co-conspirator so that they could introduce testimony from their chief witness damaging to the president.

Stewart's article concludes, "... it is becoming increasingly clear that (Independent Counsel Kenneth) Starr's investigation, in its pursuit of a number of Clinton cronies, is heading toward the president himself."

But Stewart said it was "highly unlikely" that Starr would recommend charges against Clinton or First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton before the November election even if he had grounds for doing so.

In an interview with Stewart, Starr said he planned to abide by the traditional practise of the Justice Department and take into account the effect of any charges on the electoral process. "That's a powerful counsel for restraint," he told Stewart, adding, "We want the facts. It's in the interests of the nation."

The trial of the McDougals and another business partner, Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker, ended with the three being found guilty on varying charges of fraud and conspiracy.

The McDougals were found guilty of fraudently obtaining a $300,000 loan for an advertising agency Mrs McDougal ran. The money instead went to the Whitewater real estate investment the McDougals had with the President and his wife.

Stewart said the chief prosecution witness, David Hale, the owner of a company that brokered government loans to small businesses, wanted to testify about an alleged conversation he had with Clinton in which the president, then governor of Arkansas, is supposed to have told him to make the loan "to help Jim and I out."

To get that conversation admitted into the trial would have required prosecutors to have named Clinton as an unindicted co-conspirator, Stewart said.

Stewart added, "But, besides being politically explosive, naming the president (as an unindicted co-conspirator) would have required prosecutors to present a 'preponderance of evidence' linking Clinton to the alleged conspiracy."

This was a step that Stewart quotes one prosecutor, Ray Jahn, as saying, "we weren't prepared to take."

Stewart said McDougal's loyalty to Clinton "seem to be wavering" and quoted McDougal as saying, "There's no reason to do anything for the Clintons, because they're not going to do a damn thing for us."

Stewart added that McDougal said he had been "holding back" something -- information that he can use when all other options have been exhausted. But Stewart added, "The importance of that information, if it has any, remains to be seen."

Starr's office is currently conducting a second Whitewater-related trial in Little Rock, this one of two bankers accused of making an illegal loan to Clinton's 1990 gubernatorial campaign.

WHITEWATER/FBI FILES/ALDRICH BOOKQuestions and Answers

Q: What do you make of this FBI files issue?

A: The President and I am appalled at the invasion of privacy that resulted in 1993 when the White House obtained FBI reports on people who no longer work there. The President has apologized to those whose privacy has been violated. No one is more determined than he is to get to the bottom of this. The White House is cooperating with the Independent Counsel investigation and the ongoing congressional inquiries. We have taken action to make sure that this will never happen again -- not in this administration and not in any future administration.

Background: The Senate and the House are expected to hold additional days of hearings on this issue in the coming weeks. The Independent Counsel continues to examine the incident.

Q: Did the White House improperly obtain Chris Emory's background file, including IRS related information, as part of an effort to have him fired?

I don't know anything about background investigations of Mr. Emory. [REDACTED]

Background: Documents produced by Anthony Marceca -- that we cannot vouch for -- suggest that at least Marceca understood that Emory was due for his 5 year reinvestigation. When an employee is reinvestigated, he or she also executes a Tax Check Waiver that permits the IRS to answer certain questions about the tax status of the employee. Mr. Emory is reported to have said that he voluntarily signed the IRS waiver form.

Q: Do you know Craig Livingstone's mother?

A: No. To my knowledge, I have never met Mrs. Livingstone.

Background: Mrs. Livingstone confirmed that she has never met you.

Q: What is your reaction to Anthony Marceca's invoking of the 5th Amendment before the Senate on Friday?

A: Although Mr. Marceca had the right to do what he did today, the President and I are disappointed that the public's right to know all the facts has been partly blocked for the time being. The President has instructed the White House staff to cooperate fully to provide the complete facts to the public.

*See attached

Q: Do you think it is appropriate to require White House employees to answer questions regarding their political affiliation?

A: Many White House employees work in close contact with the President and other high level White House aides. The information they see on a daily basis is often of a highly confidential and sensitive nature. It is not at all surprising that before allowing people a certain level of access that you would attempt to gauge their trustworthiness. Remember, all the employees of the White House serve at the pleasure of the President.

Q: What do you think about the new book by former FBI agent Gary Aldrich?

A: It is sad just how far the right wing will go to make a dollar, but after what I have seen from the extreme right since my husband was elected nothing surprises me any more.

Q: Do you think Mr. Aldrich should be called to testify before Congress?

A: That is not really a question for me to decide on.

Q: What are your thoughts about Bruce Lindsey being named an unindicted co-conspirator?

A: Bruce Lindsey has said under oath he has done nothing wrong, and we do not doubt his word. For more than a year, Mr. Lindsey has cooperated with the Independent Counsel and Congress by responding to each and every question about the 1990 Gubernatorial Campaign and Perry County Bank. And he will continue to cooperate by testifying in the ongoing trial in Little Rock.

Background: The President discussed Mr. Lindsey on June, 19: "He was thoroughly investigated and not charged with ample opportunities. I've got lots of confidence in him. I'm confident he didn't do anything wrong."

Q: What role will the President play in the Hill and Branscum trial?

A: The President has always said he will provide whatever information the Court deems necessary. Americans understand that in this case -- as in the case that concluded in May -- the prosecution is NOT seeking the President's testimony. Instead, his testimony is being requested by one of the defendants, who believes he has relevant information to offer.

Background:
on Sunday.

The President will be testifying at 2:00 p.m.

Q: Why did you fire Mr. Emory?

A: First, the White House Ushers work at the Pleasure of the President. As with all members of the residence staff, this kind of flexibility seems especially important when it comes to the home of the President -- where the President's family, friends and guests share some of their most personal and private times.

(OPTIONAL)

While I think it is always inappropriate to discuss personnel matters publicly, I will say this, we did restructure the office. We were interested in selecting another usher with some specific expertise in the food and beverage area.

About the campaign: (polls etc.)

It's my understanding that our campaign is right on track . Most polls agree that the President is leading by about 14 points, which is a very strong margin .

Actually, the numbers that are most important are the economic indicators. (released Friday June 5 --you may want to add data from official report. or:) We've seen once again this week that the President's economic policies are working: employment is up, wages are up and unemployment is down.

I think people appreciate my husband's leadership on the economy. He is working hard to make a difference on the issues that matter in people's lives . That's why the poll numbers are positive.

But the polls dipped last week:

I understand that most polls now reflect a consensus that the President's lead is about 14 points, and according to the campaign team, that 's been a steady lead. (But I want to repeat, the most important indicators are the economic numbers.)

But isn't /don't you expect the bad news (files, etc.) to take a toll :

As my husband has said , this was an error which has now been corrected. People have seen and heard for themselves the testimony that this transfer of files was the result of errors. I don't think it will have a long lasting impact.

Your role in the campaign::

I know that I've been out on the campaign trail quite a bit -- and I have many more invitations waiting when I get home.

My experience on the campaign trail this year has been wonderful -- seeing old friends , and so many new people, too, who are active in this election. There's an air of excitement and commitment . People understand that this is a very important election .

As I travel around the country, people will tell me how much difference this administration has made in their lives: because of Family and Medical Leave, for example. Direct Student Lending. The Brady Bill. How much they appreciate the President standing up for the environment.

You know, we have our twenty-first wedding anniversary coming up, which means I've been campaigning for the President for more than twenty years . I've never been so proud of his achievements. So I'm looking forward to this campaign.

Questions about are you an asset or not ,etc.:

I think I'll let my participation in the campaign speak for itself. Come along and join us .

Other political news: tobacco -Dole--Democrats take tobacco money too:

The issue here is about policy. The President has said to the tobacco companies, you shouldn't market to children. That was not an easy political step to take, but it was the right thing to do.

RE: Q and A for Press Wrap-up
DATE: July 8, 1996

Attached are possible questions you may be asked at the press wrap-up on Wednesday. The first set of questions relate to the trip, while the last grouping of Q and A's pertains to Washington related news.

Trip Questions:

1. Your stops on this trip have included meetings with NGO representatives, women's groups, health care providers and educators. How do these visits assist you in your work back home?
2. This is your seventh foreign trip which makes you the most travelled First Lady in U.S. history. What do you think the benefits of these trips are?
3. Do the type of events you do overseas differ from the events you take part in at home?
4. There has been a lot of discussion throughout the trip regarding the importance of NGOs to these emerging democracies. This matter was particularly sensitive in Slovakia. Do you think those governing officials got your message?

Follow-up: Do you think it is appropriate for the First Lady to dabble in foreign policy?

5. You stressed in your Radio Free Europe speech the importance of tolerance for differing points of view and for minorities. Do you think it is a bit hypocritical for the U.S. to be lecturing these countries on these matters?
6. During some of your stops, particularly in Hungary (ROMA event), you visited with individuals living on public assistance and in public housing. These people "appeared" to be living in better circumstances than Americans who receive similar government assistance. How do you feel about that?
7. Why do you think it was important for you to visit Auschwitz?
8. You were greeted in Krakow by some negative remarks from supporters of the Dole campaign. How did that make you feel?
9. We have been traveling for eleven days now and have visited eight countries. Are these kind of trips worth the cost to the tax payers?
10. At your first stop in Romania you visited a pediatric AIDS facility and an elementary school, but you made no stop at an orphanage. Why?
11. You and Ambassador Albright did tag team work in the Czech Republic and Slovakia. Do you think that kind of approach is successful?
12. You are so well received when you make these trips abroad. Does it bother you to have to face the criticism back home?
13. Some people would say your timing for this trip came coincidentally after you received a barrage of bad press back home.

What is your response to that viewpoint?
