Dear Dan,

Mrs. Clinton received your letter regarding an interview with Chelsea and forwarded it along to me. I wish I could write back with better news.

Let me say at the outset that the President, First Lady and Chelsea are deeply grateful that you have shown such understanding of Chelsea's situation and been so respectful of her privacy over the last eight years. They have no doubt that you would conduct such an interview with sensitivity and fairness.

I know, as you said in your letter, that there is no shortage of interest in Chelsea. Indeed, the public is fascinated with her. And I certainly understand that there is a commensurate amount of journalistic interest as well.

The issue simply is that Chelsea isn't doing any interviews right now. So at the moment I can't do more than convey a "maybe down the road" answer.

Still, we appreciate the thoughtfulness of your letter and your effort to outline your intentions so clearly.

I hope you'll let me know if I can be of help on any future stories.

Sincerely,

Lissa Muscatine
Director of Communications and Press Secretary to the First Lady

Dear Mr. Cox,

I am pleased to hear of the McMinn County Democrats' interest in the press and politics. Thank you so much for your kind invitation to speak at your Jackson Day Dinner later this month. Unfortunately, due to hectic schedules and prior commitments, I will be unable to attend.

Good luck on a successful event.

Dear Ms. Muscatine:

I am NOT seeking a job. As a writer (primarily fiction, though I freelance, writing for many political candidates as well as for corporate clients), I wanted to comment on Hillary Clinton's announcement speech.

It was very good. However, the candidate's delivery NEEDS WORK. She cannot keep on with that artificial, stiff style. Why can't you have a good speech coach help her? I'm sure she's a quick study and a willing pupil.

Because I still consider myself a New Yorker (born and bred), even though I've lived here over a dozen years, I care very much what happens to my city. Hillary Clinton will do a wonderful job of representing it and the state—if she can only get elected.

It's hard to tell a candidate ^{she needs} they need to shape up, but it's essential here. The New York Observer article could do it for you. Whatever it takes—please, please, don't let Hillary ever speak like that again.

All good wishes,

Carole L. Glickfeld
