Dear Janet:

With this year's elections in Bosnia and Herzegovina about to be complete, we are now beginning to focus our attention on a post-election strategy to further consolidate implementation of the Dayton Accords and thereby create the conditions for a reduction in our military presence. A fundamental component of our post-election strategy will be continued efforts to enhance public security through the reform and restructuring of the local police, judiciary and penal system.

Bob Gelbard, the President's Special Representative for Implementation of the Dayton Peace Accords, has spoken to Louis Freeh about additional FBI support for restructuring the local police in Bosnia and increasing their ability to counter organized crime, corruption and drugs and arms trafficking. The FBI has sent several teams to Bosnia to conduct assessments, but has not yet moved beyond assessments to the provision of training and other forms of support. The FBI can play an important role in strengthening law enforcement capabilities in Bosnia, and I would ask that you work with Bob to determine what additional support can be provided.

Without progress in improving public security in Bosnia and establishing the rule of law, it will be difficult to achieve progress in other aspects of Dayton, including the return of refugees to minority areas. Your support is therefore important to Dayton's success.

Sincerely,

Samuel R. Berger

Dear Bob:

With this year's elections in Bosnia and Herzegovina about to be complete, we are now beginning to focus our attention on a post-election strategy to further consolidate implementation of the Dayton Accords and thereby create the conditions for a reduction in our military presence. A fundamental component of our post-election strategy will be continued efforts to enhance public security through the reform and restructuring of the local police, judiciary and penal system.

Bob Gelbard, the President's Special Representative for Implementation of the Dayton Peace Accords, has spoken to Ray Kelly about how Customs can contribute to this effort by helping to create a functioning customs service in Bosnia with enforcement capabilities. You have already seconded a senior Customs agent to the State Department to advise him and General Clark on this subject. I would ask that you now work with Bob to make experienced customs personnel available to the European Union's Customs and Fiscal Assistance Office in Bosnia and to consider other forms of possible support.

Without progress in improving public security in Bosnia and establishing the rule of law, it will be difficult to achieve progress in other aspects of Dayton, including the return of refugees to minority areas. Your support is therefore important to Dayton's success.

Dear Sandy:

Thank you for your letter requesting U.S. Customs support for creating a functioning customs administration in Bosnia.

I concur with your assessment of the importance of establishing an effective customs administration in Bosnia, both to enhance public security and to provide a reliable source of revenue to support other functions of the government. To this end, the U.S. Customs Service is currently participating in the Southeast European Cooperative Initiative (SECI), which is aimed at improving regional co-operation in the Balkan area, including Bosnia and Herzegovina. One of SECI's primary objectives is the enhancement of border control operations of member states.

Because Customs' funding is not authorized to be used for foreign training and assistance, and Congress has in the past been reluctant to provide funding for such purposes, Customs' involvement in projects such as this depends on funding from other federal agencies, donor organizations, or the recipient nations. For example, Customs' involvement in the SECI is funded by the State Department, with the World Bank providing financial support for infrastructure development.

I have asked Under Secretary for Enforcement, James E. Johnson, and Customs Commissioner, Raymond W. Kelly, to explore with Bob Gelbard both the nature of support that Customs can provide and the need for funding from an appropriate source.

Sincerely,

Robert E. Rubin

P. J. - Sandy, I think there will be OK, if the funding can be found, as per the above.
