Proposed U.S. goals for UNOSOM

SOMALIA PUBLIC AFFAIRS ASSESSMENT/CHALLENGES

Reports from the Inter-Agency Assessment Team on Somalia have indicated that problems in the UNOSOM II public affairs operation and additional public affairs efforts are needed.

Organizational Concerns: The current staff in Mogadishu is grossly mismatched with the needs facing this initiative. It is headed by a Director of Public Information/Spokesman and subdivided into three sections - military, political and humanitarian. In addition to lacking long term vision of the long term proactive issue management, UNOSOM Public Affairs is barely reacting to events. The lack of internal information has contributed to a morale problem between UNOSOM II and relief workers. This is a possible contributor to negative news stories about the humanitarian progress within the country.

The humanitarian and political branches are so small that there is little ability to do anything more than reactive public affairs.

The military branch should be headed by a non-US person to better represent the multi-national composition of the operation and to lessen the perception that the military operation is strictly a US operation. The section is seriously undermanned and is unable to carry out any planning activities either for upcoming military interventions or for military humanitarian activities in the outlying areas which are conducted by non-US forces. It is imperative that this aspect of the organization have adequate staff to ensure accuracy of reports.

Issues: News coverage has clearly shifted from the humanitarian aspects of the operation to military/combat related activities.

The press corps in Somalia have been in the region a long time and have covered the humanitarian assistance/development stories at least once. The military activities -- including the hunt for Aideed and the continuous fire fights -- continue to be the major stories.

US PUBLIC AFFAIRS EFFORTS

Message:

The US supports the UN and UNOSOM in the monumental and historic task of nation-building in Somalia, that the relief effort was a success and is over, that rehabilitation and reconstruction has begun and is proceeding apace, and that neither the US nor the UN will be deterred by thugs and murderers from their mission of helping the Somali people rebuild their nation.

Although the USG should not be out front in the UN public affairs effort, it must deal with both domestic and foreign public affairs issues on its role in UNOSOM.

Given the deaths of four American soldiers, the US has maintained a very high public affairs profile over the last week.

Secretary Christopher appeared on CNN "The World Today" on August 12.

Ambassador David Shinn, State Department Special Coordinator for Somalia, appeared on MacNeil-Lehrer and Nightline, gave an on-the-record press briefing carried live by C-SPAN and quoted on several network news show, and gave an op-ed piece to Gannett News Service and gave a number of background and on-the-record interviews to publications, i.e., New York Times and U.S. News and World Report.

U.S. Ambassador to the UN, Madeleine Albright, has appeared on a number of television shows and had an op-ed piece in the 8/10 New York Times

RECOMMENDATIONS:

1. TIME LINE

A. Short Term:

- Mogadishu: Pressure the UN to recruit qualified public affairs officers from other countries to send to Mogadishu, to signal the multi-national composition of UNOSOM.
- Point 1: In addition, continue to work with the UN to actively recruit qualified USG officers to assist UNOSOM personnel as second/third line in the public affairs field.
- Point 2: Task US ambassadors in troop donor nations to ask host country governments to encourage recruitment of public affairs officials to send to Somalia.

- Point 3: Recommend to troop-contributing countries that they send military public affairs officers with their troops to be seconded to UNOSOM public affairs. It would be good for the "complexion" of UNOSOM and good training/experience for the officers.
- Point 4: Urge installation of a satellite dish on embassy/university compound for use of disseminating UNOSOM message to conduct a proactive public affairs operation.
- UN New York: Send a team of public affairs officers (State, USIA, DoD) to UNNY to help the public affairs office organize a strategy for a public affairs effort on Somalia specifically. Advantages: No increased American presence in Somalia.

B. Long Term:

- Strongly encourage USG assistance/expertise to UNNY to help it
 - A) completely reorganize its entire public affairs apparatus, or
 - B) Suggest to the UN that it hire a public relations firm to help it completely reorganize its entire public affairs apparatus and teach it how to conduct public relations in a changed, post-Cold War world.

2. SPECIFIC Issues:

- A. Aideed: Admiral Howe's public focus on arresting Aideed has given Aideed a huge public affairs advantage. No matter that Aideed is a murderer and a thug, he can outwit the US military and UNOSOM forces and still remain at large.

He should focus less on arresting Aideed and more on the success of the relief effort and the ongoing rehabilitation and reconstruction efforts, Aideed would lose some power in the press.

Admiral Howe discussing rehabilitation and reconstruction would also put a much-needed spotlight on those efforts, which have been sadly underreported. Installation of a satellite dish on the embassy/university compound should be strongly considered.

B. HUMANITARIAN ASPECTS:

The UNOSOM operation is currently reactive and not able to significantly encourage coverage. Drop in visits by Admiral Howe and USUN Albright do not send the positive message of the humanitarian success story.

A major speech by a top level Administration official who has visited the area would send a potent message to the international and US domestic media.

3. IMPLEMENTATION

State Department Activities:

- Continue high-profile media outreach, including on-the-record and background print and electronic media interviews by prominent State Department officials, including Assistant Secretary George Moose, Ambassador Shinn, Ambassador Albright, Assistant Secretary Doug Bennet.
- We have been in touch with Chet Crocker and other prominent Africanist academics to consider doing a series of op-eds on Somalia.
- Put together a chronology of Aideed's atrocities against UNOSOM peacekeepers, relief workers and journalists. It will strengthen the case for arresting this thug and murderer. Or expand the chronology to include all those killed by lawless elements in Somalia (like Shaun Devereaux, the WFP official killed in Kismayo in January).

USAID Activities:

- Ask Brian Atwood or Carol Lancaster to do an op-ed on the success of the relief effort and the beginning reconstruction and rehabilitation effort in Somalia (Renee Bafalis, AID/XA, will do).
- Arrange an on-the-record briefing by Bill Garvelink, OFDA, and someone from AFR to discuss the end of relief and the beginning of reconstruction.
- Offer USAID officials like Administrator Atwood, Ms. Lancaster, AA/AFR John Hicks, D/AA-AFR Dick Cobb, Acting AA/FHA Lois Richards, OFDA's Bill Garvelink, for electronic and print media on-the-record and background interviews.
- Call Dr. Bob Arnott, health consultant for CBS, and suggest he return to Somalia and revisit villages he covered during the famine. Ask him to look for particular children he featured last fall to check their progress (particularly the 14-year old boy who was given up for dead and nearly buried before he made a noise).

Department of Defense

- Make DoD officials including Under Secretary Wisner, A/S Freeman available for on-the-record and background interviews.
- Mount an aggressive hometown media program. Offer seats aboard transports going into Somalia to hometown media escorted by a unit PA. Unit would take care of hometown media.
- Arrange for media, escorted by a public affairs officer, to accompany visiting dignitaries on visits to Somalia.
- Increase numbers of DoD PA second/third level support people in Somalia. Under no circumstances is the goal to raise the US profile.
- Assign internal information and combat camera teams to the UNOSOM military public affairs office. Charge that team with visiting outlying areas developing stories, videotapes and photographs for UNOSOM PA office and DoD to distribute to external news media.

U.S. Information Agency

- In conjunction with USIS/Nairobi, DoD, USAID and USIS/Mogadishu, offer an airplane for a press excursion from Kenya to Somalia commemorating the one-year anniversary of the start of Operation Provide Relief (next week). Make sure to include African journalists on the airplane. Trip would go to outlying areas as well, like Baidoa ("City of Death") and other cities in the "starvation triangle."
- In conjunction with DoD, look into doing a flight from Europe for foreign journalists. However, this would have to wait until there were sufficient PA personnel on the ground to shepherd them around.
- Continue covering the story via the Wireless File, VOA, Worldnet and through policy guidance.

Disunity Hampering U.N. Somalia Effort

By DONATELLA I

Special to The New York Times

MOGADISHU, Somalia, July 11 — Disarray in the United Nations military operation here is fueling instability in the city and hampering relief efforts, United Nations military officials say.

They say that troop contingents are following orders from their capitals and not from the United Nations Central Command, and that concern about casualties is making commanders reluctant to mount major operations in Mogadishu.

The officials say that in the last few weeks the authority of the United Nations military command has been undermined by an Italian general who has undertaken operations unilaterally, without informing United Nations officials, and who continues to negotiate with supporters of a fugitive Somali clan leader as the United Nations tries to isolate him.

A Share of Command

Italian military officials acknowledge that there have been disagreements arising from different nations' respective tactics. Tension has also grown as the Italians have asked for one of the top three military positions and insist that they will get it, but senior United Nations officials say they have been repeatedly refused. The military commander is Gen. Cevus Bir, a Turk. The deputy commander is an American and the chief of staff is a Pakistani.

Italian military officials have accused the United Nations command here of not cooperating with the Italian troops and have said the operation is run entirely by the United States military.

"We have a lot of national capitals calling shots," said a senior official.

Officials say many governments committed troops expecting the mission in Somalia to be solely a relief operation and are now unwilling to put their troops at risk in an enforcement mission. The deepening rifts and the increasing independence of each contingent is significantly slowing down military and humanitarian operations in the capital, United Nations and relief officials say.

Although United Nations soldiers have recently resumed limited patrols and checkpoints, security in Mogadishu continues to deteriorate. The patrols are the first highly visible military presence in Mogadishu since June 17, when the United Nations mounted a large ground operation to destroy the power base of a clan leader, Gen. Mohammed Farah Aidid, who has since gone into hiding.

U.N. troops take orders from their national capitals.

The United Nations says General Aidid is responsible for an ambush of Pakistani troops on June 5 in which 24 soldiers were killed.

But General Aidid's supporters still control areas of the city. In some neighborhoods today, Somalis were armed with assault rifles. Eight United Nations soldiers were wounded in two days, and Somali gunmen, occasionally using mortars, have besieged the United Nations headquarters.

Movement in and out of the compound is mostly limited to helicopters, and all United Nations soldiers are now required to wear their flak jackets within the compound.

Pakistani and Italian troops, about 5,000 soldiers, are the backbone of the security force and they have also suffered the heaviest casualties. Twenty-six Pakistanis and 3 Italians have been killed, and dozens wounded. The Pakistanis say they are waiting for armored cars and the Italians insist on negotiating with the Somalis before taking part in operations, officials say.

"The Pakistanis and the Italians won't go out there because someone in Islamabad and Rome said don't go out there and lose more troops," said Michael McDonough, head of the relief group Irish Concern. "There is no central command here. People are doing what their governments tell them to."

Stress on Negotiations

Italian officers say the only way to achieve peace and to continue the relief operation is to negotiate with Somalis like General Aidid's supporters and not to attack.

The United Nations will not negotiate with General Aidid's forces.

The Italian military officials say that because of their close ties to Somalia, a former Italian colony, they have a special understanding and relationship with Somalis.

Gen. Bruno Lol, the Italian commander, rarely comes to command meetings.

At times, the independence has almost proved disastrous. On July 2, about 600 Italian soldiers were ambushed by Somalis just after they completed a weapons search. Three Italians were killed and 30 wounded.

After two hours of heavy fighting, the Italian commander called for support from the Americans. Until then, the United Nations central command did not know of the Italian operation.

Relief officials say that the Italians are the only part of the United Nations force that is regularly communicating with Somali factions here, and that this is winning the trust of many Somalis who are suspicious of the United Nations.

And General Lol, unlike other United Nations commanders, is very visible.

When the general and his troops returned to where they had been ambushed, they were thronged by many cheering Somalis but also many who were cheering.

General Lol walked among the crowd, and then addressed the Somalis with a microphone in hand.

"Today, we've established the principle that we can negotiate," he said. "We need to make an effort of goodwill. It is necessary for both sides to stop shooting."
