The Goal

- By the year 2000, 2 million additional young people will have access to the five fundamental resources that will maximize their success - an ongoing relationship with a caring adult, safe places and structured activities, a healthy start, marketable skills and opportunities to give back.

Draft - Subject to change
4/7/97

Overall Objectives

- to capture the attention and imagination of the American public about the urgency of the challenge and the powerful potential of the goal and approach of the Summit
- to celebrate commitments made and to motivate commitment makers and other national participants to assume sustained leadership roles
- to support community and state delegations in development of their approach to energize and mobilize their communities to set and achieve local goals

I want to also remind you that in an effort to provide the most up-to-date Summit information, we have decided to set-up weekly conference calls for all Summit conveners. Representatives from the Corporation for National Service, the Points of Light Foundation and the United Way will be present to help answer your questions. All calls will be set up for Wednesdays; there will be two sessions, the first from 11:30 am - 12:30 pm and the second from 1:00 pm - 2:00 pm (EST). Please contact Pat Kim at the Corporation for National Service at (202) 606-5000 x 245 for further information.

Also, plans are continuing for the Summit and our intention is to keep you active during the upcoming event. The first day, Sunday, is designated as a Day of Service. Mayor Rendell of Philadelphia has planned a number of service activities such as an anti-graffiti effort, cleaning a vacant lot, painting murals and building a playground, which may be of interest to you. On Monday, we hope to provide an opportunity for all participating Mayors to share with one another and with other civic and business leaders. During some of the working sessions, we may call on you to provide leadership to the Summit participants. The last day of the Summit, Tuesday, will consist of more working sessions which will provide time for cities and states to work on an implementation plan of the Summit's goals.

Soon, you will receive an invitation packet for the Summit, including logistical information as securing hotel and travel arrangements. These will be mailed once your city submits the names of the ten person delegation. Should you require addition information, please contact Jim Scheibel, Senior Advisor to the CEO, at (202) 606-5000 x180. Thank you.

Sincerely,

James A. Scheibel, Senior Advisor

Dear Mayor

The President's Summit for America's Future will begin in 45 days. I am writing this letter for the purpose of providing you update information on the Summit, encouraging you to focus on the goals of the Summit, and to further define your role in the upcoming event as a critical leader in your community.

As you know, the Summit is aimed at bringing a new level of commitment to citizen service, focused especially on the problems and challenges of children and youth. You will play a key role in your community in preparing for, as well as in helping to define a multi year strategy following the Summit.

Specifically, you along with other Mayors across America will be involved in championing a proposition that America's young people must have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives: that young people have supportive mentoring relationships; access to a safe place to grow; proper healthcare and a healthy start in life; receive an education that prepares them for work; and have an opportunity to give back to their communities through service. We are glad to partner with you in an opportunity to step forward in achieving the above goals as we believe they are goals consistent with your own city's initiatives for children and youth.

We encourage you to focus on the five fundamental resources for children and youth, and develop innovative ways to accomplishing them in your community. We would like to highlight cities and their work through the United States Conference of Mayors and the National League of Cities. Please let us know what your city is doing to address the goals of the Summit and what Summit Commitments you have obtained.

MICHIGAN

Michelle Engler, a native Texan, is the first of Michigan's First Ladies to be a lawyer. She is a member of the Michigan State Bar Association and Texas State Bar Association. Since assuming the role of First Lady in 1991, she has been working to help her husband, Governor John Engler (R), make Michigan a better place to work, live, and raise a family.

As First Lady, Michelle's primary responsibility has been to chair the Michigan Community Service Commission. Believing in the power of Michigan citizens to solve community problems through service, the commission works to encourage all Michigan citizens, especially young people, to make personal commitments to human service.

A state and national advocate for the importance of citizen service, Michelle is a member of the board of directors of the Michigan Nonprofit Association and the Points of Light Foundation.

Michelle has been recognized for her advocacy for women. For her work in promoting breast cancer awareness, she recently received the Award for Leadership from the Karmanos Cancer Institute.

The First Lady is also a recipient of the Northwood Distinguished Women's Award. This award is presented by the Northwood University Board of Trustees to women of "outstanding leadership and achievement" from across the nation. In 1995 she was honored with the Mother of Young Children Award by the Michigan chapter of the American Mothers Organization.

Michelle serves as vice president of the Library of Michigan Foundation Board of Directors, and is a member of the Michigan Cities in Schools Board of Directors, a state affiliate of Cities in Schools, Inc., the nation's largest nonprofit dropout prevention organization. She also has taken a lead role in promoting the Michigan Harvest Gathering, a collaborative effort between the Michigan Department of Agriculture and the private sector to support the Food Bank Council of Michigan. During its first four years, nearly 2 million pounds of food was gathered and more than $1 million was raised to help feed the hungry in Michigan. Her other commitments include the Girlstown Foundation, Artrain, and the Michigan Caring Program for Children.

Michelle received her bachelor's degree in government at the University of Texas and is a graduate of the University of Texas Law School. Prior to her marriage, Michelle DeMunbrun was a partner in the Texas law firm of Narhan, Wood, and Sommers, where she specialized in bankruptcy law and commercial litigation. She is currently on leave from the Grand Rapids law firm of Varnum, Riddering, Schmidt & Howlett, where she worked part time in the Lansing office.

The Englers are the proud parents of one-year-old triplet daughters, Margaret Rose, Hannah Michelle, and Madeleine Jenny, who were born on November 13, 1994.

Re: Agenda for the Presidents' Summit for America's Future

Attached please find a draft of the annotated agenda for the Presidents' Summit for America's Future. It is our best understanding at this time of the status of the agenda.

As you can see, there are a number of opportunities for the governors to play a major role to highlight their accomplishments in this area. There are also many opportunities for governors to work closely with the delegates from their own states and to develop relationships with some of the most prominent corporate executives in the country.

We hope that this answers many of your questions and will help you make your plans. As time goes on, we're sure that you will have many additional questions. Summit staff is working on every detail, from logistics to the agenda. We will be happy to assist you in any way that we can in getting the answers that you need.

Thank you for your patience and thank you to the Planning Task Force and Ray Scheppach for their many helpful suggestions. We have incorporated them into the attached document.

Please feel free to contact us if we can be of assistance.

We look forward to speaking with you and seeing the Governor at the Summit.

Draft Annotated Agenda

Presidents' Summit for America's Future Philadelphia, PA April 27-29, 1997

Below is a draft annotated agenda for the Presidents' Summit for America's Future. As with all events of this magnitude, it is an evolving document. Details are constantly being worked out and refined to insure that the Summit is as productive as possible. Schedules are being confirmed. The specifics of the press coverage are being negotiated.

The Summit is not about a three day conference. It is about a beginning to a long-term process of working together to improve our communities by focusing on children and youth. Governors are central to the long-term success of this project because only governors can marshal the human, corporate and organizational resources necessary to make this work on a state level.

As a result, we are asking governors to play a major role at the Summit itself. Governors will be called on to lead discussions on achieving the Summit's five goals and in heading their state's working sessions on implementation. There will be a number of opportunities for governors to highlight their activities.

Background information:

The Presidents' Summit for America's Future will officially take place in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania from early Sunday evening, April 27, to Tuesday afternoon, April 29. A few preliminary events will take place during the day on Sunday, on what is being called "A Day of Commitments."

While it is hoped that governors will be able to attend the entire Summit, it is understood that schedules may preclude some governors from doing so. With that in mind, the major events requiring governors' participation have been scheduled on one day, Monday, April 28.

The majority of the events will take place at the Philadelphia Convention Center. The opening and closing ceremonies will be at historic Independence Hall.

Hotel rooms have been set aside for the attending governors. Each governor's office will be assigned 5 rooms for the governor, staff, and security.

Transportation for governors to all Summit events will be provided throughout the Summit by the local state police. Chartered buses will provide transportation for staff and delegates.

It is anticipated that all Summit events, except the private reception following the opening ceremony at Independence Hall, will be open to the press.

Delegates:

There will be approximately 1500 delegates to the Summit. The delegates will be chosen as follows:

- Governor's Delegation: The governors and their spouses, plus five individuals of the governors choosing will make up the governors' delegation. It is suggested that one of the five be a member of the state commission on volunteerism. The other four should be community leaders who are committed to assisting the governor in implementing the governor's service agenda.
- Community Delegation: Approximately 120 cities and towns from across America have been chosen as representative communities. These delegations will be comprised of the mayor and his or her spouse, plus 10 individuals. These 10 delegates will be chosen by the conveners: the United Way, the Corporation for National Service, and the Points of Light Foundation.
- Leading corporate CEOs who have made a commitment to achieving specific goals and taken specific steps to achieving those goals, such as a commitment to providing eye care to the needy, expanding corporate community activities and mentoring programs, will be invited.
- Heads of major foundations.
- National not-for-profit leaders who have made commitments.

Presidential Involvement:

President Clinton has confirmed that he will attend the opening ceremonies at Independence Hall. We are working closely with the White House on the President's schedule and are uncertain at this time as to when he will need to depart.

All of the former presidents have been extremely supportive of and involved with the Summit, as have the first ladies. The following will be in attendance at Monday's events:

President Clinton
Former President Bush
Former President Ford
Former President Carter (via satellite if not in person)

Hillary Rodham Clinton
Barbara Bush
Nancy Reagan
Lady Bird Johnson (via satellite)

We are waiting confirmation as to the others.

Some of the former presidents and first ladies may attend Sunday's events. This is unclear at this point and we are working with each of their offices to confirm arrival and departure times.

Chair and Vice Chair:

General Colin Powell is the General Chairman.

Secretary Henry Cisneros is the Vice Chair.

General Powell and Secretary Cisneros will be in attendance throughout the Summit.

Agenda

Sunday, April 27

All Day

“Day of Commitments”

Events are being planned throughout the day to highlight the call to volunteerism. Planned events include building an inner city playground and cleaning up a neighborhood to make it safe for children to play.

Delegates who arrive early will be invited to partake in this event.

It is assumed that governors will not be in attendance. However, we encourage governors to attend and any governor who is interested in doing so would be welcome.

Morning

We have relatively firm commitments from at least two of the Sunday morning news talk shows to broadcast from the Summit. We will be working with the shows to insure that governors are invited to highlight their state's community activities.

Late Afternoon

“Celebration of Commitment”

Final details for the “Celebration of Commitment” are being arranged. The celebration may feature live entertainment, a major well-known speaker to inspire listeners to become involved with their communities, and first-person stories by people who have made a difference by becoming involved.

All Summit delegates will be invited to attend.

There is no specific role for governors planned at this event.

Early Evening

“Host of Philadelphia Reception” sponsored by Philadelphia Mayor Ed Rendell.

The reception will be attended by all the delegates.

This will be an opportunity for the governors to meet with General Powell and Secretary Cisneros, get to know the corporate leaders and foundation heads from across the country, and spend time with the delegates from their own state.

Late Evening: VERY TENTATIVE

Private dinner for governors only.

This is in the discussion stage. When we have confirmation, we will pass it on to you.

Monday, April 28

Early Morning

Good Morning America and the Today Show have shown a great deal of interest in broadcasting live from Independence Hall.

We are working with both shows to have governors as guests.

9 - 11 am

Independence Hall

Opening Ceremonies

Presidents Clinton, Bush and Ford will be in attendance, with President Carter possibly attending or appearing via satellite. Nancy Reagan will represent President Reagan. Lady Bird Johnson will also attend via satellite.

This will be a very large event. All of the participants will attend.

It is anticipated that the opening ceremonies will be covered by live television.

The governors will be seated on stage in front of Independence Hall with the Presidents, General Powell and Secretary Cisneros.

The presidents will sign a Declaration of Commitment.

We are working with the Summit organizers on a public signing ceremony for the governors as well. It may occur at Independence Hall or elsewhere on Monday.

11:00 am

Private Reception

The presidents and First Ladies, governors, major donating CEOs

and the heads of foundations who funded the Summit will attend a small, invitation only private reception.

Appropriate photo opportunities at the reception will be available.

While the private reception is underway, the Summit delegates will return to the convention center.

12:30 pm

Working lunch:

All Summit attendees will attend a working lunch and have an opportunity to participate in panels designed around each of the five goals. There will be separate panels for each goal.

Governors will lead the panel discussions. The panels may also include leading business executives, mayors and foundation heads.

The audience will be comprised of the other attendees, including governors not leading the panel, the governors' delegations, the community delegations, business leaders, foundation presidents and not-for-profit heads.

Governors may choose which of the Summit goal oriented panels they wish to attend.

The panels will offer governors the opportunity to highlight their state programs and success stories from around their states.

2:00 pm

Breakout Sessions

There will be breakout sessions on two tracks.

TRACK 1: The governors and business leaders from across the country will hold panel discussions on how to achieve the five Summit goals in a partnership between state and local government, individuals, business and the not-for-profit community. Governors will have an opportunity to highlight their accomplishments.

TRACK 2: At the same time, the local community delegates will be meeting to discuss how to implement the goals of the Summit.

4:00 pm

Statewide Implementation Meeting

Delegates from each state will join the governor, who will chair a discussion on specific plans to implement the goals of the Summit in their state. Such plans might include a statewide or local Summit, outreach programs to involve other businesses and communities, and activities that will be undertaken by the state, local and business leaders.

The format of these meetings is being finalized. Process design experts have been hired to develop a format for the breakout sessions to best assist delegates in implementing successful volunteer programs.

6:30 pm

Reception

This reception is for all delegates.

This will be an additional chance for the governors to meet with the delegates from their states and to meet with attending CEOs.

Dinner

President's Service Award Dinner

A dinner will be held honoring the President's Service Award winners. President Clinton has been requested to hand out the awards as he has done in past years to the approximately 25 winners. It is unclear at this point whether the President's schedule will enable him to do so. The governor from each winner's home state will present the award along with the President, or if his schedule does not allow, another distinguished guest.

We do not know the names of the winners. They are not chosen by the Summit organizers. We will get that information to you as soon as it is available.

All attendees will be invited to the dinner.

Early Childhood Special

We are aware that the time of the President's Service Award Dinner conflicts with the airing of Rob Reiner's special on early childhood. Unfortunately, these events were scheduled independently and although attempts were made, neither can be moved at this time. Arrangements are being made so all participants will be able to watch the early childhood special on tape delay after the dinner.

Tuesday, April 29

Early Morning

Again we plan to work with the producers of the early morning talk shows which will be broadcast from the Summit to include governors as their guests.

9:00 - 10:00 am

Plenary Session

Secretary Cisneros will moderate the morning plenary session.

Various successful state community service activities will be highlighted. There will be an opportunity for a few governors to highlight their achievements.

This meeting will be open to all delegates.

10:30 - NOON

Final Breakout Session

Each state delegation will meet again to make final plans for state implementation of the Summit's goals.

NOON - 2:00 pm

Closing Luncheon

Colin Powell will be the Keynote Speaker. Each of the delegates will sign the Declaration of Commitment.

2:00 pm

Summit Adjourns

Post Summit

A permanent not-for-profit organization will be established to continue the work of the Summit. This new organization will help fund outstanding volunteer activities on the state and local level.

MEMORANDUM

TO: MARCIA HALE
FROM: GENE SOFER
SUBJECT: FYI: THE SUMMIT
DATE: DECEMBER 17, 1996

*Amo, Emily
we need to talk about this
M.*

The Corporation for National Service and the Points of Light Foundation will sponsor a Summit on service on April 27-29, 1997 in Philadelphia. President Clinton has been invited to participate. Since a number of other elected officials will be involved, the purpose of this memorandum is to alert you that this event will take place, and to bring you up-to-date on contacts that have been made so far. I will call you later this week to discuss this in detail.

The Summit:

The Summit will bring 1500 participants to Philadelphia to develop "strategies that will help create conditions for the success of American youth." Targets will be proposed to offer a national vision for action using community volunteering and citizen service to improve life conditions of American children. A draft description of the Summit is attached.

The President and former Presidents:

Corporation CEO Harris Wofford has spoken to Bruce Reed and Gene Sperling about the President's participation in the Summit. It is my understanding that they support the President's participation and will recommend that he attend. Although former President George Bush has accepted, former Presidents Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford have not decided whether to attend.

Governors:

All governors will be invited to attend the Summit. Each governor will be permitted to bring a small delegation, probably no more than 3-5 people.

Harris spoke to Ray Scheppach last week. Ray offered to form an ad hoc working group of governors - 3 from each party - for the Summit. This group would coordinate participation in the various aspects of the Summit process.

Bob Goodwin, the CEO of the Points of Light Foundation, spoke at the Republican Governors Association about the Summit. Goodwin reported that Governors Engler, Keating, Whitman, Wilson, Bush, and Voinovich expressed interest in the Summit and offered their help. Harris believes that the three Republicans selected for the NGA Working Group will come from this list.

Harris is placing a call to Governor Dean to formally notify the Democratic Governors Association about the Summit. We have faxed the Summit draft description to the DGA Washington office.

My staff is in touch with Governor Miller's Washington office about arranging for Harris to speak to the Governors about the Summit at the NGA Winter Meeting. We appreciate any support you can give us toward that effort.

Mayors:

Teams from 100 communities will be invited. Communities may bring up to ten people representing organizations from the private, public and non-profit sectors, in many cases led by mayors or their representatives. The criteria for community participation and selection are under development..

My staff has provided material to Mayor Daley's Washington staff director about arranging for Harris to address the US Conference of Mayors Winter Meeting about the Summit.

Food Stamps for the Unemployed

The new Federal welfare law ends the guarantee that all poor people will be fed and threatens to deprive some one million poor people of the food stamps that help them survive. The law prohibits able-bodied, childless adults between the ages of 18 and 50 from collecting food stamps for more than three months in any three-year period unless they work at least 20 hours a week. There is no exemption for recipients who look for but can not find work. They are left to shift for themselves without food assistance. Their only hope lies in the fact that the law invites states to seek waivers for recipients who live in areas with high unemployment.

Many states are now applying for waivers, as well they should. The waiver process is no loophole but a humane and sensible safety valve. But many other states have decided to forgo the option of applying for all waivers for which they are qualified. They often justify their inaction on specious philosophical or ethical grounds. But the end result is that they will expose their poorest residents to the threat of needless hunger.

Sponsors of the welfare bill claimed that the time limits would do no great harm because able-bodied recipients could either work in the private sector, accept a workfare slot from their local government or do volunteer work with a local charity, all of which could keep them eligible for food stamps. But only 10 states provide workfare slots for food stamp recipients, and even in these states workfare exists in only a few counties. Few states have organized programs of volunteer work. The problem for food stamp recipients is expected to get worse, because under the new welfare law states are compelled to put single mothers into whatever workfare slots they create, making it harder for childless adults to get workfare.

Congress tried to take some of the sting out of the harsh time limits by providing waivers for areas with unemployment rates above 10 percent and areas without a "sufficient number of jobs," which the Clinton Administration has interpreted to mean an unemployment rate at least 20 percent above the national average. Today, that translates into an unemployment rate of about 7 percent.

Some states, like Mississippi, say that they seek no waivers because it would be wrong to exempt childless adults from food stamp time limits at the same time that they are imposing time limits on cash aid to single mothers. But childless adults already receive less support than single mothers. They generally do not qualify for any cash aid. Imposing hunger on them hardly rights an inequity.

New York is applying for a waiver to exempt communities where unemployment exceeds 10 percent although the Pataki administration says it will not seek all waivers available under the law because that would send the wrong signal to able-bodied recipients — that they remain eligible for a free ride. But Mr. Pataki can obtain a Federal waiver on time limits without altering his plan to impose tight work requirements and provide workfare and volunteer slots. If counties provide all needed workfare or volunteer slots, then New York's childless poor would escape time limits because they would be working. But what happens if counties fail to provide the tens of thousands of slots that will be needed? After all, no state has yet to achieve such a mammoth goal. A Federal waiver would guarantee an undiminished Federal flow of food stamps in case local governments achieve less than what Mr. Pataki's program assumes.

Congress said it would not take food stamps from people who live in areas where jobs are scarce. That is a declaration of decency that the states should uphold.

Letters to the Editor
The New York Times

Dear Editor:

"Food stamps for the Unemployed," your Dec. 26 editorial on the welfare law's provision prohibiting able-bodied childless adults from collecting food stamps unless they work at least 20 hours a week, asks the right question about jobs: "But what happens if counties fail to provide the tens of thousands of slots that will be needed?" The answer is an upsurge of 9-1-1 calls.

Federal and state disinvestment in the nation's poorest and least skill-equipped families will impose harsh and expensive burdens on the nation's cities and towns, the providers of last resort and the home of almost every jobless American.

President Clinton's signature on the welfare bill set in motion fundamental changes affecting hundreds of thousands of families and children. It also had significant consequences for city leaders. Even though few cities currently have direct responsibility for the delivery of welfare services and benefits, these changes in what benefits and resources are available to families at or below the federal poverty level in cities and how they will be delivered are likely to affect municipal credit ratings, services, and revenues.

For cities and towns, especially those with disproportionate numbers who have been eligible for assistance, less income for families translates into sharply reduced business and empty rental buildings, resulting in losses in the property tax rolls.

The law gives states broad authority with regard to the allocation of diminished resources to communities. While the new law does not provide cities a new role in how states will implement these changes, city leaders have a significant stake in how states allocate these reduced federal resources within states and how states implement the new federal law. The impact in our communities will be great.

Most cities have neither the experience nor the resources for the responsibilities that are coming our way by default. There is more passing of the burden here than reform, and that burden will stop at the last level of government serving citizens.

President Clinton has said that the welfare reform bill as enacted into law should be modified before its full implementation.

We agree and ask to have a seat at the table when necessary changes are considered.

Sincerely,

Mark Schwartz

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, based in Princeton, NJ, is the nation's largest philanthropy devoted exclusively to health and health care. It became a national institution in 1972 and concentrates its grantmaking in four areas: assuring access to basic health services; improving the way services are organized and provided for people with chronic health conditions; reducing the harm caused by substance abuse; and helping the nation address the problem of rising health care costs.

The Foundation was created by the late Robert Wood Johnson, who built the family firm, Johnson & Johnson, into a worldwide health and medical care products company.

The Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation

The Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation is a private grantmaking foundation established by Ewing Marion Kauffman, the founder of pharmaceutical manufacturer Marion Laboratories and the original owner of the Kansas City Royals Baseball team.

The foundation is committed to serving organizations and individuals dedicated to the vision of self-sufficient people in healthy communities. The Foundation supports partnerships with selected not-for-profit organizations whose vision, mission and strategic initiatives are consistent with the Foundation's purpose.

The W.K. Kellogg Foundation

The W.K. Kellogg Foundation was established in 1930 to "help people help themselves through the practical application of knowledge and resources to improve their quality of life and that of future generations."

The foundation's programming activities center around the common vision of a world in which each person has a sense of worth; accepts responsibility for self, family, community, and societal well-being; and has the capacity to be productive, and to help create nurturing families, responsive institutions, an healthy communities.

To achieve the greatest impact, the Foundation targets its grants towards specific focal points or areas. These include: health; food systems and rural development; youth and education, and higher education; and philanthropy and volunteerism. When woven throughout these areas, funding also is provided for leadership; information systems/technology; efforts to capitalize on diversity; and family, neighborhood, and community development programming.

David and Lucile Packard Foundation

The David and Lucile Packard Foundation in California was established by its founders as a reflection of their deep interest in philanthropy. Today the Foundation maintains a strong focus on improving the local quality of life for children, youth and families through support for nonprofit and public agencies' endeavors. The Foundation also supports math and science education, conservation, reproductive health, child health and related policy issues locally and nationally.

The Pew Charitable Trusts

The Pew Charitable Trusts, a national philanthropy with a special commitment to Philadelphia, support nonprofit activities in the areas of culture, education, the environment, health and human services, public policy and religion. Through their grant making, the Trusts seek to encourage individual development and personal achievement, cross-disciplinary problem solving and innovative, practical approaches to meeting the changing needs of a global community.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

Five Fundamental Resources for Children and Youth

An Ongoing Relationship with a Caring Adult: Mentor, Tutor, Coach

It is more important than ever for young people to have the sustaining presence of caring adults in their lives. While there are currently hundreds of thousands of mentoring and tutoring relationships, it is estimated that more than 10 million young people would benefit from the intervention of a caring adult. Our goal is to create the additional tutoring and mentoring relationships necessary for a positive impact on the lives of these young people.

Safe Places and Structured Activities During Non-School Hours to Learn and Grow

Young people cannot flourish, develop and properly mature into productive citizens in a climate of fear and chaos. Our goal is to increase safe places and structured activities during non-school hours so that young people can study, play and receive the necessary guidance to reach their full potential in life.

Marketable Skills through Effective Education

Many young people attend school with little or no concept of how their studies will prepare them for a job or economic opportunity. Our goal is to forge new partnerships among businesses, schools and citizen volunteers to provide more young people with mentors, summer jobs, internships, and the essential skills of reading and mathematics.

A Healthy Start

Adequate health care and healthy behaviors are essential to every child's development and well-being. Our goal is to find new ways, in cooperation with government, health care providers and business, to assure that this is achieved.

An Opportunity to Give Back

Often young people are not encouraged, or given the opportunity, to help others. Our goal is to provide young people with the opportunity to serve, so that they become part of the solution and experience first-hand the benefit of being active citizens.

CLINTON, BUSH ANNOUNCE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT ON SERVICE

WASHINGTON, D.C. – President Bill Clinton and former President George Bush, joined by Vice President Al Gore, today announced “The Presidents’ Summit for America’s Future,” aimed at bringing America to a new level of commitment to volunteer service, especially targeting the nation’s young people.

President Clinton, former President Bush and the other former Presidents will serve as honorary Co-Chairs of the Summit, which will be held April 27-29 in Philadelphia. Presidents Clinton, Bush and Ford will attend. President Carter and Lady Bird Johnson, while unable to attend, have pledged their support. President Reagan will be represented by Nancy Reagan.

Gen. Colin Powell will serve as General Chairman. Henry Cisneros, former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, will serve as Vice Chairman.

In announcing the Summit, President Clinton said, “Much of the work of America cannot be done by government, much other work cannot be done by government alone. The solution must be the American people through voluntary service to others.”

In today’s East Room announcement, former President Bush said, “The Philadelphia summit is about getting more people off the sidelines. It is about citizens pulling together, leading by example, and lifting lives.”

Some 50 commitments for specific future actions have already been received from voluntary, religious, and educational organizations, business, media, and local and state governments.

The Presidents’ Summit for America’s Future was conceived by the late Gov. George Romney of Michigan and initiated as a joint effort by two of America’s leading organizations dedicated to service: The Points of Light Foundation and The Corporation for National Service.

General Powell said of the Summit: "I can't think of a better task for my generation. We received so much from our own parents. It is only appropriate that we give back in kind. Our young people are facing unprecedented challenges. They deserve the same kind of support from their country as we received, but it will take extra effort from all of us to make this possible. With the help of millions of Americans, we can, as a nation, turn the tide for America's youth."

Summit partners point to growing evidence that young people today face serious threats to their futures – and even their lives; thus, the urgency leading to the April Summit. Studies show, for instance, that:

- A child is abused every 13 seconds in America, with almost 3 million reports of such abuse filed each year.
- 1 in 9 African-Americans between the age of 12-15 are victims of violent crime.
- The number of children under age six living in poverty has increased 50% since 1979.
- Cigarette and marijuana use is increasing again among high school students.
- Suicide rates for children between 5-14 doubled between 1970-1988.

The Summit is organized on the proposition that America's young people must have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives:

- An ongoing relationship with a caring adult or mentor;
- Safe places to learn and grow;
- A healthy start;
- A marketable skill through effective education;
- An opportunity to give back through community service.

The Summit itself will have three focal points. First, the Presidents and First Ladies will join in the historic call to commitment and to action. Second, local and national leaders from all sectors will announce their organizational commitments to action – mobilizing their people and their abilities for an unprecedented effort to turn the tide for America's youth by the turn of the century. Third, delegations from approximately 100 communities and all 50 states will work together to turn the message of the Summit into concrete plans for action.

In the weeks leading up to the Summit, a national partnership engaging dozens of leaders and organizations from all sectors will develop targets for specific increases in volunteer service and put in place the framework for an extensive follow-up campaign.

Some of the substantial commitments that already have been made include the following:

- Columbia/HCA Healthcare Corporation has committed to immunize one million children by the year 2000. Columbia, its employees and affiliated physicians, will be able to serve the immunization needs from more than 600 hospitals, surgery centers and home care locations.
- LensCrafters will provide one million needy people, especially children, with vision care by the year 2003.
- The 400 local Volunteer Centers affiliated with The Points of Light Foundation will connect one million young people with caring adults or with the opportunity to serve.
- Communities in Schools will expand its programs so that an additional 750,000 young people in need will be better able to successfully learn, stay in school and prepare for life.
- The Greek Orthodox Church in America has committed to assist one needy child per every ten families in the more than 550 Greek Orthodox churches nationwide.
- Big Brothers/Big Sisters has committed to doubling their mentoring relationships, reaching 200,000 matches through the year 2000. Service will become an integral part of the mentoring relationship.
- Shell Oil has made a corporate wide commitment to support all five goals of the Summit at every level of the company through expanded employee volunteering, targeted corporate philanthropy, and promotional support.

Funding for the Summit is being provided by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, the Pew Charitable Trusts, the David and Lucile Packard Foundation, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, and the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

KEY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

When and where will The Presidents' Summit for America's Future be held?

The Summit will take place in Philadelphia, from Sunday, April 27, through Tuesday, April 29. The opening and closing ceremonies will be held at Independence Hall with most of the working sessions to be conducted at Philadelphia's Convention Center.

What are the goals of the Summit?

The Summit's goal is to mobilize millions of citizens and thousands of organizations from all sectors in order to ensure that all of our youth have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives:

- An ongoing relationship with a caring adult: mentor, tutor, coach;
- Safe places and structured activities during non-school hours to learn and grow;
- A healthy start;
- A marketable skill through effective education;
- An opportunity to give back through community service.

Through specific, measurable commitments toward these goals from individual organizations from every sector in America, and through community initiatives, the aim is to turn the tide for America's youth.

The Summit's goal is to make effective citizen service an integral part of the American way of life.

Who is involved in the Summit?

President Clinton and former President Bush will serve as honorary co-chairmen of the Summit. General Colin Powell will serve as General Chairman of the Summit. Former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Henry Cisneros will serve as Vice Chairman. The Summit is being organized at the initiative of the Corporation for National Service and the Points of Light Foundation. Former Senator Harris Wofford heads the former, and Robert Goodwin, who headed President Bush's initiative to aid Black Colleges, directs the latter. Stuart Shapiro, M.D., the former Health Commissioner of Philadelphia, is the Chief Executive Officer of the Summit organizing team. Many national non-profit organizations are already collaborating as partners in the Summit.

What is happening at the Summit?

First, the Presidents and First Ladies will join in the historic call to commitment and to action. Second, local and national leaders from all sectors will announce their organizational commitments to action – mobilizing their people and their abilities for an unprecedented effort to turn the tide for America's youth by the turn of the century. Third, delegations from approximately 100 communities and all 50 states will work together to turn the message of the Summit into concrete plans for action. The delegations will return home and plan their own local Summits that will stimulate further steps to meet the major goals.

How is the Summit being funded?

Funding for the Summit is being provided by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, the Pew Charitable Trusts, the David and Lucile Packard Foundation, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, and the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation.

What are Summit commitments?

Organizations and institutions from the private, nonprofit and public sectors commit to achieving specific goals and taking specific steps to meet those goals. For instance, in some cases, they might pledge increased resources or more volunteers. Some of the first commitments being announced today include:

- Columbia/HCA Healthcare Corporation has committed to immunize one million children by the year 2000. Columbia, its employees and affiliated physicians, will be able to serve the immunization needs from more than 600 hospitals, surgery centers and home care locations.
- LensCrafters will provide one million needy people, especially children, with vision care by the year 2003.
- The 400 local Volunteer Centers affiliated with The Points of Light Foundation will connect one million young people with caring adults or with the opportunity to serve.
- Communities in Schools will expand its programs so that an additional 750,000 young people in need will be better able to successfully learn, stay in school and prepare for life.
- The Greek Orthodox Church in America has committed to assist one needy child per every ten families in the more than 550 Greek Orthodox churches nationwide.
- Big Brothers/Big Sisters has committed to doubling their mentoring relationships, reaching 200,000 matches through the year 2000. Service will become an integral part of the mentoring relationship.
- Shell Oil has made a corporate wide commitment to support all five goals of the Summit at every level of the company through expanded employee volunteering, targeted corporate philanthropy, and promotional support. Before, during and after the Summit, this list will continue to expand.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

SUMMIT COMMITMENTS

as of February 24

Every child in America should have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives: an ongoing relationship with a caring adult - a mentor, tutor, a coach; safe places and structured activities during non-school hours to learn and grow; a healthy start; a marketable skill through effective education; an opportunity to give back through community service.

Commitments are being made to provide these fundamental resources to our nation's youth in each of the categories:

1. An ongoing relationship with a caring adult - - a mentor, tutor, coach.

100 Black Men of America, Inc.

Has committed to mentor 120,000 youth over the next three years. The sixty-eight 100 Black Men chapters provide African-American male mentoring support for young people in "at-risk" situations so that they may reach their fullest academic potential. This commitment represents a doubling of their mentoring relationships.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters

Has committed to doubling their mentoring relationships, reaching 200,000 matches through the year 2000. Service will become an integral part of the mentoring relationship and a key activity for current and future "Bigs and Littles."

OASIS and The May Department Stores Company

Will reach 100,000 children and youth through intergenerational community service programs in twenty-five cities. Sponsored by The May Department Stores Company, OASIS is a national educational program designed to enrich the lives of older adults, with a focus on recruiting, training and supporting volunteers in meaningful community service. Their intergenerational tutoring program will provide one-on-one weekly tutoring to 25,000 students in the first through third grade, will launch a new mentoring-via-computer project to 2,500 youth, present a new interactive series on diversity and self-esteem to 50,000 students, engage 20,000 youth in their interactive Reader's Theater, and involve 2,500 youth in community service by training middle and high school students to teach computer skills to older adults.

One to One/National Mentoring Partnership, Inc.

Will help the nation forge 2,000,000 new mentoring relationships over the next five years and will support national and local leaders who have already made mentoring a priority and mobilize others to do the same. It plans to educate Americans and their organizations about responsible mentoring and what they can do to make it available to every child in this country. It will serve as a resource to mentoring initiative nationwide, and will teach children how to find caring and trustworthy adults to mentor them and adults how to connect with opportunities to mentor children; e.g. Twin cities - 100,000 mentoring relationships, Greater Kansas City YouthFriends - 1,000 caring adult relationships.

NFL Players Association

Is launching a pro-athlete mentoring program for Native American teens in partnership with the Johns Hopkins Center for Indian Health. Over the next 3 years, it will recruit retired and active NFL players to serve as mentors for Indian youth, launch a reservation-based peer leadership and healthy lifestyles curriculum, as well as in-school motivational sessions with NFL players, and an annual summer camp.

Three Television Networks

Have committed to the goals of the summit. ABC's campaign, Children First, is a multi-million dollar investment in programming and PSA's that will help recruit thousands of churches and synagogues as sponsors of mentoring projects for young people. HBO and CBS will provide programming and broadcast PSA's to promote the growth of the mentoring movement. The Harvard School of Public Health is spearheading these commitments, and is also committed to mobilizing the Hollywood creative community.

Tucson, Arizona

Will connect every youth in need to an adult who can serve as a positive role model, giving youth hope, pushing them to be independent, and expecting them to succeed. Led by the Volunteer Center of Tucson, partners include city, county, police department, higher education, businesses, non-profits, and neighborhood associations. The goal is to serve 2,000 additional youth by the year 2000 and to engage 3,000 adults in mentoring programs.

Jewish Social Justice Center

Will mobilize 100,000 volunteer tutors and aids in eight target cities.

National Council of Volunteer Centers

committed Volunteer Centers that are members of the Point of Light Foundation will develop 400 new collaborations on new or expanded youth initiatives connecting one million young people with caring adults and/or with the opportunity to serve.

United States Army

The Army commits to taking the lead in encouraging a joint effort among the military services to expand opportunities for active duty, reserve and retired military personnel to volunteer their time as mentors and tutors in schools in their local communities

National Association for Equal Opportunity in Higher Education

Fully supporting the Summit goals, N.A.F.E.O. is pledging that 50% of the student enrollment (approximately 140,000 students) of the 117 historically and predominantly Black Colleges and Universities across the country will engage in Volunteer Community Service Projects in local communities with an emphasis on tutoring and mentoring.

8th Grade class of Julian D. Coleman Academy of International Studies, Indianapolis, Indiana

Have committed to tutoring younger students in the John Hope Elementary School in academic subjects in order to prepare them for a successful transition into middle school. Tutoring will occur twice monthly, focusing on mathematics, language and arts.

Texas State Comptrollers Office/Family Pathfinders Division

Committed to matching 1,000 families on public assistance with teams of volunteers who will assist the families to become independent from welfare by the year 1999. This will be accomplished by working in partnership with Volunteer Centers, interfaith coalitions, religious judicatory organizations and civic clubs in the major metropolitan areas and with individual congregations the clubs in the small towns and rural areas.

The Pillsbury Company

Is launching "Caring Adults and Kids," a comprehensive commitment to help economically disadvantaged young people build and sustain relationships with caring adults. It plans to direct $1.75 million in grants to mentoring organizations in 1997 alone. In addition to funding, Pillsbury volunteers will provide 50,000 hours of quality one-to-one mentoring to 250 young people in ten communities across the US through their new School-Plus Mentoring program.

Seventh-Day Adventist Church

Will initiate one hundred pilot tutoring projects that will place 3000 trained tutors through their network of community-based centers in ten cities in its first year.

The Salvation Army

Will launch a new mentoring relationship program with a focus on single parents and children. Planning is underway to set specific regional goals for community collaborations and partnerships for this model intergenerational program.

ASPIRA

Will train an additional 2,000 Puerto Rican and other Latino parents by the year 2000 in parent involvement and leadership skills, and encourage them to advocate for the overall academic and personal growth of their children.

II. Safe places and structured activities during non-school hours to learn and grow.

The YMCA of the USA

Will focus on providing a safe place for children and youth to gather in the over ,2000 YMCA's in the US, but also will provide additional caring and supportive adults. Over the next three years, we will increase the number of YMCA volunteers to 572,000. This will mean recruiting 190,500 additional volunteers to help teach the values of Caring, Honesty, Respect, and Responsibility as mentors, tutors, coaches, skill instructors, and fund raisers.

Kimberly-Clark Corporation

Will invest $2 million to support community playgrounds built by thousands of employees, family members, and neighborhood volunteers in 30 cities across the United States in 1997. Creating safe and imaginative places for children to play and learn will be the heart of K-C's 125th Anniversary Celebration. To facilitate this project, the company has forged an innovative alliance with KaBOOM!, a national non-profit leader in coordinating community-built playgrounds.

Boys and Girls Clubs of America

Will increase the number of youth served by at least an additional 500,000 young people – 100,000 a year over the next five years, and is organizing the adequate financial and human resources at the national and local levels to do so.

National Crime Prevention Council

Create the online Crime Prevention Resource Center with support from the Allstate Foundation to serve as an electronic community resources center for victims and communities hurt by crime. The resource will feature educational games and activities for children, materials and best practices for adults who work with youth, training on neighborhood action to prevent crime. The NCPC is also committing to enroll 100,000 more youth in 20 new sites in its Youth as Resources program, which helps young people design and carry out service projects that address social problems, resolve community issues, and improve their communities. And the NCPC, in partnership with Ameritech, will hold a national conference on Preventing Crime to share with mayors, police chiefs, citizen practitioners, youth, and others the best and latest information and programming to make communities safer and more vital.

American Association of Museums

Provide safe places for children to learn and grow through programming delivered both on-site and in schools and community centers. Museums counted forty-eight million acts of service to school children. The American Association of Museums commits to double the number of young people engaged over the next five years.

The National Exchange Club

Will launch a new national partnership with the U.S. Junior Chamber of Commerce to convene issues forums in communities across the United States to support the development of safe places for all youth. The Clubs will help communities identify issues, develop strategic action plans, and develop successful programs and services to ensure safe places to gather, learn, work, and live.

III. A healthy start.

LensCrafters

Will provide one million needy people, especially children, with free vision care by the year 2003.

Columbia/HCA Healthcare Corporation

Has committed to immunize one million children by year 2000. Columbia, its employees and affiliated physicians, will be able to serve the immunization needs from the more than 600 hospitals, surgery centers, and home care locations.

IV. A marketable skill through effective education.

Junior Achievement

Will lead an effort to introduce an additional 2 million young people to economic opportunity through education, including the connection for many of them with summer jobs and internships by the year 2000.

Pfizer, Inc.

Will build math and science skills by linking schools in all of the Company's 17 domestic locations and in 10 locations around the world to each other and to Pfizer scientists. Scientists will serve as tutors as well as provide guidance for those seeking a career in math and science.

Scholastic Books

Will donate one million books to the America Reads project which will mobilize volunteers to ensure that every child can read by the third grade and continues to read to learn thereafter.

General Federation of Women's Clubs

Pledges to establish and support with volunteers tutoring and literacy projects in each community represented by their 6,500 clubs across the country by the year 2000.

United Way of America

Will elevate their current efforts to improve healthy early childhood develop and school success for the nation's children to an organization-wide priority focus area. The United Way of America will support the development and implementation of 50 additional local United Way collaborative community initiatives to help children enter school ready to learn and succeed in school.

V. An opportunity to give back through community service.

Steering Committee of College Presidents

Through the leadership of the President of San Francisco State University, 21 university presidents have committed 50% or more of their increase in work-study funds to community service initiatives and other university resources to support the America Reads Challenge. Members of the steering committee have also committed to each recruit five other university presidents.

Girl Scouts of the U.S.A

Will dedicate 8.5 million hours of community service by scouts beginning this year, their 85th anniversary, and continuing through the year 2,000. The hours will be devoted to achieving the five resources for, and in this case with, America's youth.

The Youth Volunteer Corps of America

Will double the number of teenage Youth Volunteers to 40,000 will contribute more than a half a million hours a year of quality volunteer service nationwide.

The Bonner Foundation

Will engage its 1,500 students in 22 colleges and universities in a national goal of giving back to others through effective citizen service, targeting the integration of students, faculty, and community members in creating a culture of service for campuses throughout the nation. Projects include establishing community service centers on all Bonner campuses, increasing the mentoring and tutoring hours of scholars, and developing more training and internships.

Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U.S.

Will through their posts, recognize young people and adult youth leaders for their service to their communities through a new youth service award program; work with the Department of Veterans Affairs to recruit young people to volunteer in VA hospitals; and mobilize its members to assist military installations with their volunteer needs.

University of Notre Dame Alumni Association

Will target the improvement and involvement of youth, especially those in low income neighborhoods, in all of its more than 10 annual national alumni service programs as well as through the alumni association's 200 plus local clubs who perform several hundred neighborhood projects a year. The Alumni, through the University's Center for Social Concerns, will convene an annual seminar for other colleges and universities interested in service learning to build stronger programs and more participation in community service for and with young people.

Girls, Inc.

Will encourage girls at 1,000 delivery sites to enhance their community action efforts.

Maryland Youth Service Action Committee

Will develop in the twelve months following the Summit a statewide network of 300+ youth service and leadership organizations across Maryland and encourage each of these to adopt community service as part of their mission.

Women in Community Service

Will form 50 Community Resource Councils to mobilize local leaders across the country to reduce the number of women and children living in poverty by creating service programs to promote self-reliance and economic independence.

Campus Outreach Opportunity League (C.O.O.L.)

Will encourage students on at least 100 college campuses to partner with local secondary school students for an annual day of service.

Youth Service America

Will work toward increasing the percentage of teenagers volunteering in their communities from 59 percent in 1996 to 75 percent by the year 2000, building participation through National Youth Service Day and SERVENet, the comprehensive service hubsite on the world wide web.

Catholic Campus Ministries

Will recruit volunteers to provide 5 million hours of service by Catholic students and faculty on campuses across the nation by the year 2000.

Michigan Nonprofit Association

Will engage 50,000 young people in community problem solving through volunteerism over the next 5 years in the state of Michigan. This is a Connect America partnership in cooperation with Volunteer Centers and Campus Compact higher education institutions in the state.

VI. Many organizations and corporations have committed to focus on more than one fundamental resource. Far reaching commitments include:

The IBM Company

Partnering with United Way of America and AmeriCorps*VISTA, IBM will launch a Technology corps in at least ten US cities to help not-for-profit organizations use up-to-date technology and provide higher quality services to people in need.

AmeriCorps*VISTA members will provide free technology planning, staff training, and donations of equipment and software serving 2,000 not-for-profit organizations. By the year 2,000, agencies served will include day care centers, community centers, and senior citizens centers.

Shell Oil Company

Committed to a national leadership role in Connect America, a national coalition of some 30 major organizations that share a commitment to citizen service as a way to bring Americans together across their differences. Shell has made a corporate -side commitment to support all five goals of the summit at every level of the company through expanded employee volunteering, targeted corporate philanthropy and promotional support.

Greek Orthodox Church in America

Will commit to assisting one needy child per every ten families in the more than 550 Greek Orthodox communities nationwide. It will help these needy children in each of our communities gain access to a healthy start in life,; caring adult relationships; safe to gather, learn and grow; education that provides marketable skills; and opportunities to give back to the community.

Communities in Schools

The largest stay-in-school network is committed to expanding its coordination of community resources and partnerships with the public so that an additional 750,000 young people in need will have access to all five goals enabling them to successfully learn, stay in school, and prepare for life.

BJ's Wholesale Club

Will partner with a public school in each of its markets for a total of 100 schools by the year 2000. This is a comprehensive relationship with students, faculty, parents, and administrators that includes fundraising assistance, product donations, volunteer support, and awards programs. BJ's also is expanding its program that engages school aged children in community service projects to reach 300 schools and more than 100,000 kids in hundreds of community service projects. The Clubs donate supplies for the service project, and, upon completion, then makes a cash donation to the school.

The New York Volunteer for Youth Campaign

Will recruit and train 25,000 volunteers to provide intense, one-to-one help to 25,000 young people to improve school performance, increase self esteem, and prevent crime. The Campaign is a collaborative of the city's major youth organizations, government, business, and foundations responding to research that shows that eighty percent of NYC youth in one-to-one, volunteer-youth relationships stay out of trouble with the law, do better in school, and increase self esteem.

National Urban Rural Fellows, Inc.

Will incorporate community service into its model leadership training program. From now until the year 2000, Urban Fellows will serve as youth mentors and tutors in the communities in which they are assigned. Fellows will inform and educate each of their communities about the importance and valuable contribution of minority volunteerism which enhances effective education. Plans include engaging all seven hundred graduates, many serving as elected officials, senior executives and entrepreneurs, to create and implement policies that support the five resources for America's youth.

National Council of Negro Women

Will mobilize its 36 national affiliates and 250 community-based sections to deliver the five resources for young people including: deploy an additional 1,000 individuals to provide one-on-one mentoring and tutoring relationships; provide specialized training and internships, especially to stimulate interest and skills in math and science; encourage family volunteering as a part of the Black Family Reunion Celebrations all across the country; and hold Leadership Roundtables in twenty cities to address issues which impact the lives of families and communities, including grassroots strategies to achieve the five resources for children.

AmeriCorps Alums

Will encourage all association members to commit at least 10 hours per month to ongoing service leadership. Local alumni leaders across the country will coordinate with local service providers to provide volunteer people power. The service leadership opportunities will focus on the five summit goals, with preference given to programs supporting ongoing relationships with young people.

VII. Organizations and associations can also support the goals of the Summit by providing critical support for coordination, communication, and operations:

Grantmaker Forum on Community and National Service

Will develop and implement a strategy designed to increase the number and quality of foundation and corporate investments in the field of community and national service. The Forum will work with family foundations, community foundations, private foundations, corporate giving programs, and federated giving programs to create more and better opportunities to engage young people in meaningful service to their communities.

DePauw University, The George Washington University, University of Denver, Morehouse College, University of Notre Dame

Pledge to coordinate and host 30 local Summits by September 1998, as members of the University Summit Advisory Board. Will host a local Summit on their campus and recruit five other universities to host Summits on their campuses.

Council of Chief State School Officers

Will work with states to increase the number that include and support service learning as a key strategy for building civic responsibility, improving the quality of life in our communities, and improving academic achievement for all students. Over the next three years, CCSSO will provide resources and technical assistance to help more states develop their policies and practices, reaching twenty-five states by the year 2000.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

The Points of Light Foundation

Founded in May 1990, The Points of Light Foundation's mission is to engage more people more effectively in volunteer service to help solve serious social problems. The Foundation seeks to help Americans connect with one another through service as a new way to combat the sense of disconnection that is fragmenting our communities. The Foundation is working with 30 other national organizations through Connect America to get 10 million Americans to "commit to connect" through service in the next five years.

The Foundation is the national champion and resource organization for its 400+ member Volunteer Centers and for businesses committed to engaging their workers in volunteer service. It manages Make A Difference Day, National Volunteer Week, the President's Service Awards, the Awards for Excellence for business and the National Community Service Conference. Its Youth Ambassadors mobilize other young people to become community problem solvers. The Points of Light Institute offers products, membership services and training for thousands of local volunteer leaders worldwide.

Corporation for National Service

National service is a movement that provides opportunities for Americans of all ages and backgrounds to help solve community problems through service. Created in 1993 by Congress, the President, and community groups nationwide, the Corporation for National Service is a public-private partnership that oversees three national service initiatives:

AmeriCorps engages 25,000 citizens in a year of full-time, results-driven service sponsored by local and national nonprofits, AmeriCorps*VISTA, and AmeriCorps* NCCC. In return, AmeriCorps members earn education awards to help pay for college or pay back student loans. AmeriCorps members help communities meet critical challenges in the areas of education, public safety, human needs, and the environment.

National Senior Service Corps engages a half million Americans age 55 and older in results-driven service as Foster Grandparents, Senior Companions, and RSVP volunteers. The Senior Corps taps the vast wealth of experience, skills, and talents of older citizens to meet community challenges.

Learn & Serve America engages over one million students from kindergarten through college in community projects that integrate service and learning. Learn & Serve America builds on the grassroots service-learning movement by promoting service as a learning opportunity and providing models and resources to schools, universities, and community groups. Students use academic skills to solve real-world problems, and learn the value of service, citizenship, and responsibility.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

COMMUNITY "TEAMS" PARTICIPATING IN THE SUMMIT

The partnership that will emerge from the Summit needs to be with every community in America. To start this process, "teams" of ten citizens from 112 communities from all 50 states are being invited to participate in the Philadelphia event.

The local teams will share "best practices" and begin to develop concrete action plans to achieve broader citizen engagement and additional local commitments to turn the tide for America's youth. As part of their work, these local teams will take the first steps in planning their own local and regional Summits to be held soon after they return home. It is anticipated that the Summit will also result in suggestions on ways that communities can better communicate with each other allowing "communities of interests and action" focused on the Summit goals to grow and deepen locally throughout the country.

Communities invited to attend the Summit will include the 50 largest cities; the largest city in those states that do not contain one of those fifty; plus a group of smaller or rural communities recommended by the Summit funders.

Local designees of the Points of Light Foundation and the Corporation for National Service, in partnership with local United Ways, will be responsible for assembling a delegation with the characteristics described in the attached paper. In this process, they will consult widely with others throughout their community.

Because of space constraints in Philadelphia, a limited number of individuals will be able to attend the Summit from any one community. However, all of those who are part of the convening process in the local community should be included in the efforts that grow out of the Summit.

Acting More Strategically

The challenge to every local community is to map out and act upon the distinctive combinations of local assets that will help it achieve the goals that it seeks. Therefore, our hope is that the team will consist of individuals who, working together, can significantly advance citizen action or are already doing so because they combine the neighborhood or grass-roots people, institutional power and the administrative authority of the community.

Our plan is to bring a new and increased focus to the role of citizen service, particularly as it can help ensure that all of our youth have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives: an ongoing relationship with a caring adult, safe places to learn and grow, a healthy start, a marketable skill through effective education, and an opportunity to give back through community service.

The Summit will affirm the work already being done by individuals and organizations and help stimulate new efforts for others. Within some community teams, the Summit will enhance what individuals are already thinking and what they are already doing. For others, it will be the jump-start they need. For all participants, it will be a way of building on the current wave of community and neighborhood-based innovation in America. The Summit process will assist communities and organizations in thinking and acting more strategically about achieving those goals.

But we must also look differently at one another and at our organizations. Any inventory of the true resources and the potential activities of a community will reveal surprising strengths. In the end, it may be the contribution of those who are most often overlooked that provides the difference between accomplishing any of these goals and accomplishing none.

Our Most Valuable Resource -- Ordinary Citizens

Whatever the goal, whatever the strategy, communities are discovering not only that new resources must be generated and that all groups must collaborate more effectively, but that the single most important available resource – ordinary citizens with talents that can make a difference – often is not being tapped to its full potential. Indeed, study after study makes clear that the average American is prepared to do more, if only someone would ask and would engage them effectively.

Communities that commit to the campaign will benefit by learning about “best practice communities” and “best practice programs” particularly those that mobilize more citizens and engage them in efforts that have proven effective in helping young people. By joining in this concerted effort, we expect that local organizers will gain access to valuable tools for helping our young people. The Summit should provide strategic organizing tools essential for creating and sustaining action. In addition, participating communities may gain access to resources made available by national organizations, foundations, corporations and others – tangible commitments to support a vigorous process for engaging citizens.

ATTACHMENT

Characteristics and Make-Up of Community Delegations

Community delegations should be made up of ten people who:

- Have achieved success in effective citizen service.
- Are committed to the idea that each person regardless of status in community, age, gender, race, religious or institutional affiliation or background has a place at the table and something to contribute to the community.
- Are experienced in creating opportunities for others to contribute to solutions, not just do it themselves.
- Know their community and the key players.
- Are able to leave their institutional “hats” at the door.
- Are not harnessed by the “business as usual” way of operating.
- Have a record of “getting things done.”
- Above all, are trusted by others in their community.

In addition, community delegations should be selected with the following things in mind:

- The team should look like the community it represents, recognizing the diversity in the age, race, economic backgrounds and physical ability of its members. It should also include people under age 25.
- The mayor must be invited to serve on the team or to designate a special representative.
- At least two of the individuals should be doing work in the community that addresses the overarching goal of achieving better conditions for children and youth and creating opportunities for other citizens to be involved in this work.

- The balance of the team should represent interests that can increase the volume and effectiveness of citizen engagement. The team will be enhanced by including members of religious groups, educators (elementary, secondary and higher education), business and labor (a large employer and small business), neighborhood leaders (such as homeowner associations or neighborhood councils), social service delivery agencies, philanthropic groups (community, private or corporate foundations), media, and professional public sector managers.
- All team members should either be in positions to advance citizen action or already be doing so, either through work at the neighborhood or grassroots level or from a position of institutional power or administrative authority in the community.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

ORGANIZERS' MISSION STATEMENT

On Monday morning, April 28, the President of the United States and former President Bush will stand with other former Presidents together on the steps of Independence Hall in Philadelphia. Together, as Honorary Co-Chairs of The Presidents' Summit for America's Future, they will issue a call to action through service.

General Colin Powell, the former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, will serve as General Chairman of the Summit and the campaign that will follow. Henry Cisneros, former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, will serve as Vice Chairman.

The promise of America rests in the commitment, creativity and energy of its people to respond to our shared problems and to envision a shared future. Every day, Americans are doing that work – helping one another, addressing serious social problems, building stronger communities. Somewhere in America, in some way, solutions are being found to the problems we face.

But, unfortunately, our problems are vast and complex. There is a growing sense of disconnection. Too many of our people have been left out of the mainstream, and too many of our communities are fragmented along racial, ethnic, religious or economic lines. We find ourselves feeling that what divides us from one another is more powerful than the glue that holds us together in communities and as a nation.

The impact of this is greatest on America's young people. In small towns as well as big cities, far too many young people are growing up without the kind of adult role models and relationships needed for success. Far too many do not have adequate safe places to learn and grow, are not getting a healthy start, or the kind of education that creates real opportunities. And too many are unaware that giving through community service can make a difference in the lives of others and can be an enriching experience.

That is why priority must be given to expanded and more effective citizen service and new commitments from our nation's most important institutions. We must ensure that all of our youth have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives:

- an ongoing relationship with a caring adult: mentor, tutor, coach;
- safe places and structured activities during non-school hours to learn and grow;
- a healthy start;
- a marketable skill through effective education;
- an opportunity to give back through community service.

Certainly, all Americans can agree that we are all capable of doing more to achieve these goals.

The Presidents' Summit for America's Future will be both a celebration of our nation's heritage of volunteer citizen service and a call to action. It will be a call to commitment – for Americans to pledge to serve; for each of us to put our individual gifts to work for the common good; for us to renew the sense of civic responsibility that has served us well throughout our history as a nation.

The Summit will be the beginning of a new effort. In the weeks ahead, a national partnership will engage leaders from business, labor, the media, religious and educational institutions, and the voluntary sector. They will develop specific numerical targets in making available the five fundamental resources for our children against which we can measure our progress, through the year 2000. The partnership will also develop appropriate mechanisms so the momentum generated by the Summit will be sustained.

The Summit itself will have three focal points. First, the Presidents and First Ladies will join in the historic call to commitment and to action. Second, local and national leaders from all sectors will announce their organizational commitments to action – mobilizing their people and their abilities for an unprecedented effort to turn the tide for America's youth by the turn of the century. Third, delegations from approximately 100 communities and all 50 states will work together to turn the message of the Summit into concrete plans for action.

The Points of Light Foundation and the Corporation for National Service have taken the lead in building a working partnership with many of the nation's leading nonprofit organizations and businesses. Funding is being provided by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, the Pew Charitable Trusts, the David and Lucile Packard Foundation, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, and the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation.

The spirit of the Summit transcends the individual concerns of its sponsoring organizations. Americans need not be separated by their differences. Through service, we can build strong connections with one another. And together, we can fulfill the American promise for all of our people.

Re: Agenda for the Presidents' Summit for America's Future

Attached please find a draft of the annotated agenda for the Presidents' Summit for America's Future. It is our best understanding at this time of the status of the agenda.

As you can see, there are a number of opportunities for the governors to play a major role to highlight their accomplishments in this area. There are also many opportunities for governors to work closely with the delegates from their own states and to develop relationships with some of the most prominent corporate executives in the country.

We hope that this answers many of your questions and will help you make your plans. As time goes on, we're sure that you will have many additional questions. Summit staff is working on every detail, from logistics to the agenda. We will be happy to assist you in any way that we can in getting the answers that you need.

Thank you for your patience and thank you to the Planning Task Force and Ray Scheppach for their many helpful suggestions. We have incorporated them into the attached document.

Please feel free to contact us if we can be of assistance.

We look forward to speaking with you and seeing the Governor at the Summit.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

Draft Annotated Agenda

Presidents' Summit for America's Future

Philadelphia, PA

April 27-29, 1997

Below is a draft annotated agenda for the Presidents' Summit for America's Future. As with all events of this magnitude, it is an evolving document. Details are constantly being worked out and refined to insure that the Summit is as productive as possible. Schedules are being confirmed. The specifics of the press coverage are being negotiated.

The Summit is not about a three day conference. It is about a beginning to a long-term process of working together to improve our communities by focusing on children and youth. Governors are central to the long-term success of this project because only governors can marshal the human, corporate and organizational resources necessary to make this work on a state level.

As a result, we are asking governors to play a major role at the Summit itself. Governors will be called on to lead discussions on achieving the Summit's five goals and in heading their state's working sessions on implementation. There will be a number of opportunities for governors to highlight their activities.

Background information:

The Presidents' Summit for America's Future will officially take place in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania from early Sunday evening, April 27, to Tuesday afternoon, April 29. A few preliminary events will take place during the day on Sunday, on what is being called "A Day of Commitments."

While it is hoped that governors will be able to attend the entire Summit, it is understood that schedules may preclude some governors from doing so. With that in mind, the major events requiring governors' participation have been scheduled on one day, Monday, April 28.

The majority of the events will take place at the Philadelphia Convention Center. The opening and closing ceremonies will be at historic Independence Hall.

Hotel rooms have been set aside for the attending governors. Each governor's office will be assigned 5 rooms for the governor, staff, and security.

Transportation for governors to all Summit events will be provided throughout the Summit by the local state police. Chartered buses will provide transportation for staff and delegates.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

It is anticipated that all Summit events, except the private reception following the opening ceremony at Independence Hall, will be open to the press.

Delegates:

There will be approximately 1500 delegates to the Summit. The delegates will be chosen as follows:

- Governor's Delegation: The governors and their spouses, plus five individuals of the governors choosing will make up the governors' delegation. It is suggested that one of the five be a member of the state commission on volunteerism. The other four should be community leaders who are committed to assisting the governor in implementing the governor's service agenda.
- Community Delegation: Approximately 120 cities and towns from across America have been chosen as representative communities. These delegations will be comprised of 10 individuals including mayors who may be accompanied by their spouses. The 9 delegates other than the mayor will be chosen by the conveners: the United Way, the Corporation for National Service, and the Points of Light Foundation.
- Leading corporate CEOs who have made a commitment to achieving specific goals and taken specific steps to achieving those goals, such as a commitment to providing eye care to the needy, expanding corporate community activities and mentoring programs, will be invited.
- Heads of major foundations.
- National not-for-profit leaders who have made commitments.

Presidential Involvement:

President Clinton has confirmed that he will attend the opening ceremonies at Independence Hall. We are working closely with the White House on the President's schedule and are uncertain at this time as to when he will need to depart.

All of the former presidents have been extremely supportive of and involved with the Summit, as have the first ladies. The following will be in attendance at Monday's events:

President Clinton
Former President Bush
Former President Ford
Former President Carter (via satellite if not in person)

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

Hillary Rodham Clinton
Barbara Bush
Nancy Reagan
Lady Bird Johnson (via satellite)

We are waiting confirmation as to the others.

Some of the former presidents and first ladies may attend Sunday's events. This is unclear at this point and we are working with each of their offices to confirm arrival and departure times.

Chair and Vice Chair:

General Colin Powell is the General Chairman.

Secretary Henry Cisneros is the Vice Chair.

General Powell and Secretary Cisneros will be in attendance throughout the Summit.

Agenda

All Day

Events are being planned throughout the day to highlight the call to volunteerism. Planned events include building an inner city playground and cleaning up a neighborhood to make it safe for children to play.

Delegates who arrive early will be invited to partake in this event.

It is assumed that governors will not be in attendance. However, we encourage governors to attend and any governor who is interested in doing so would be welcome.

We have relatively firm commitments from at least two of the Sunday morning news talk shows to broadcast from the Summit. We will be working with the shows to insure that governors are invited to highlight their state's community activities.

“Celebration of Commitment”

Final details for the “Celebration of Commitment” are being arranged. The celebration may feature live entertainment, a major well-known speaker to inspire listeners to become involved with their communities, and first-person stories by people who have made a difference by becoming involved.

All Summit delegates will be invited to attend.

There is no specific role for governors planned at this event.

"Host of Philadelphia Reception" sponsored by Philadelphia Mayor Ed Rendell.

The reception will be attended by all the delegates.

This will be an opportunity for the governors to meet with General Powell and Secretary Cisneros, get to know the corporate leaders and foundation heads from across the country, and spend time with the delegates from their own state.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

Late Evening: VERY TENTATIVE

Private dinner for governors only.

This is in the discussion stage. When we have confirmation, we will pass it on to you.

Monday, April 28

Early Morning

Good Morning America and the Today Show have shown a great deal of interest in broadcasting live from Independence Hall.

We are working with both shows to have governors as guests.

9 - 11 am

Independence Hall

Opening Ceremonies

Presidents Clinton, Bush and Ford will be in attendance, with President Carter possibly attending or appearing via satellite. Nancy Reagan will represent President Reagan. Lady Bird Johnson will also attend via satellite.

This will be a very large event. All of the participants will attend.

It is anticipated that the opening ceremonies will be covered by live television.

The governors will be seated on stage in front of Independence Hall with the Presidents, General Powell and Secretary Cisneros.

The presidents will sign a Declaration of Commitment.

We are working with the Summit organizers on a public signing ceremony for the governors as well. It may occur at Independence Hall or elsewhere on Monday.

11:00 am

Private Reception

The presidents and First Ladies, governors, major donating CEOs

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

and the heads of foundations who funded the Summit will attend a small, invitation only private reception.

Appropriate photo opportunities at the reception will be available.

While the private reception is underway, the Summit delegates will return to the convention center.

12:30 pm

Working lunch:

All Summit attendees will attend a working lunch and have an opportunity to participate in panels designed around each of the five goals. There will be separate panels for each goal.

Governors will lead the panel discussions. The panels may also include leading business executives, mayors and foundation heads.

The audience will be comprised of the other attendees, including governors not leading the panel, the governors' delegations, the community delegations, business leaders, foundation presidents and not-for-profit heads.

Governors may choose which of the Summit goal oriented panels they wish to attend.

The panels will offer governors the opportunity to highlight their state programs and success stories from around their states.

2:00 pm

Breakout Sessions

There will be breakout sessions on two tracks.

TRACK 1: The governors and business leaders from across the country will hold panel discussions on how to achieve the five Summit goals in a partnership between state and local government, individuals, business and the not-for-profit community. Governors will have an opportunity to highlight their accomplishments.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

TRACK 2: At the same time, the local community delegates will be meeting to discuss how to implement the goals of the Summit.

4:00 pm

Statewide Implementation Meeting

Delegates from each state will join the governor, who will chair a discussion on specific plans to implement the goals of the Summit in their state. Such plans might include a statewide or local Summit, outreach programs to involve other businesses and communities, and activities that will be undertaken by the state, local and business leaders.

The format of these meetings is being finalized. Process design experts have been hired to develop a format for the breakout sessions to best assist delegates in implementing successful volunteer programs.

6:30 pm

Reception

This reception is for all delegates.

This will be an additional chance for the governors to meet with the delegates from their states and to meet with attending CEOs.

Dinner

President's Service Award Dinner

A dinner will be held honoring the President's Service Award winners. President Clinton has been requested to hand out the awards as he has done in past years to the approximately 25 winners. It is unclear at this point whether the President's schedule will enable him to do so. The governor from each winner's home state will present the award along with the President, or if his schedule does not allow, another distinguished guest.

We do not know the names of the winners. They are not chosen by the Summit organizers. We will get that information to you as soon as it is available.

All attendees will be invited to the dinner.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

Early Childhood Special

We are aware that the time of the President's Service Award Dinner conflicts with the airing of Rob Reiner's special on early childhood. Unfortunately, these events were scheduled independently and although attempts were made, neither can be moved at this time. Arrangements are being made so all participants will be able to watch the early childhood special on tape delay after the dinner.

Tuesday, April 29

Early Morning

Again we plan to work with the producers of the early morning talk shows which will be broadcast from the Summit to include governors as their guests.

9:00 - 10:00 am

Plenary Session

Secretary Cisneros will moderate the morning plenary session.

Various successful state community service activities will be highlighted. There will be an opportunity for a few governors to highlight their achievements.

This meeting will be open to all delegates.

10:30 - NOON

Final Breakout Session

Each state delegation will meet again to make final plans for state implementation of the Summit's goals.

NOON - 2:00 pm

Closing Luncheon

Colin Powell will be the Keynote Speaker. Each of the delegates will sign the Declaration of Commitment.

2:00 pm

Summit Adjourns

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

Post Summit

A permanent not-for-profit organization will be established to continue the work of the Summit. This new organization will help fund outstanding volunteer activities on the state and local level.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

Governor's Program Preference Form

The Summit is organized on the proposition that America's young people must have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives:

- 1) An ongoing relationship with a caring adult-- a mentor, tutor, coach
- 2) Safe places to learn and grow and structured activities during non-school hours
- 3) A healthy start
- 4) A marketable skill through effective education
- 5) An opportunity to give back through community service

During the Summit, there will be an opportunity for the Governor to participate in a panel designed around one of these five goals. Please indicate on this form which goal the Governor is most interested in addressing. To the extent that it is possible, his/her selection will be accommodated.

CLINTON, BUSH ANNOUNCE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT ON SERVICE

WASHINGTON, D.C. – President Bill Clinton and former President George Bush, joined by Vice President Al Gore, today announced “The Presidents’ Summit for America’s Future,” aimed at bringing America to a new level of commitment to volunteer service, especially targeting the nation’s young people.

President Clinton and the former Presidents will serve as honorary Co-Chairs of the Summit, which will be held April 27-29 in Philadelphia. Presidents Clinton, Bush and Ford will attend. President Carter and Lady Bird Johnson, while unable to attend, have pledged their support. President Reagan will be represented by Nancy Reagan.

Gen. Colin Powell will serve as General Chairman. Henry Cisneros, former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, will serve as Vice Chairman.

In announcing the Summit, President Clinton said, “Much of the work of America cannot be done by government, much other work cannot be done by government alone. The solution must be the American people through voluntary service to others.”

In today’s East Room announcement, former President Bush said, “The Philadelphia summit is about getting more people off the sidelines. It is about citizens pulling together, leading by example, and lifting lives.”

Some 50 commitments for specific future actions have already been received from voluntary, religious, and educational organizations, business, media, and local and state governments.

The Presidents’ Summit for America’s Future was conceived by the late Gov. George Romney of Michigan and initiated as a joint effort by two of America’s leading organizations dedicated to service: The Points of Light Foundation and The Corporation for National Service.

General Powell said of the Summit: "I can't think of a better task for my generation. We received so much from our own parents. It is only appropriate that we give back in kind. Our young people are facing unprecedented challenges. They deserve the same kind of support from their country as we received, but it will take extra effort from all of us to make this possible. With the help of millions of Americans, we can, as a nation, turn the tide for America's youth."

Summit partners point to growing evidence that young people today face serious threats to their futures – and even their lives; thus, the urgency leading to the April Summit. Studies show, for instance, that:

- A child is abused every 13 seconds in America, with almost 3 million reports of such abuse filed each year.
- 1 in 9 African-Americans between the age of 12-15 are victims of violent crime.
- The number of children under age six living in poverty has increased 50% since 1979.
- Cigarette and marijuana use is increasing again among high school students.
- Suicide rates for children between 5-14 doubled between 1970-1988.

The Summit is organized on the proposition that America's young people must have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives:

- An ongoing relationship with a caring adult or mentor;
- Safe places to learn and grow;
- A healthy start;
- A marketable skill through effective education;
- An opportunity to give back through community service.

The Summit itself will have three focal points. First, the Presidents and First Ladies will join in the historic call to commitment and to action. Second, local and national leaders from all sectors will announce their organizational commitments to action – mobilizing their people and their abilities for an unprecedented effort to turn the tide for America's youth by the turn of the century. Third, delegations from approximately 100 communities and all 50 states will work together to turn the message of the Summit into concrete plans for action.

In the weeks leading up to the Summit, a national partnership engaging dozens of leaders and organizations from all sectors will develop targets for specific increases in volunteer service and put in place the framework for an extensive follow-up campaign.

Some of the substantial commitments that already have been made include the following:

- Columbia/HCA Healthcare Corporation has committed to immunize one million children by the year 2000. Columbia, its employees and affiliated physicians, will be able to serve the immunization needs from more than 600 hospitals, surgery centers and home care locations.
- LensCrafters will provide one million needy people, especially children, with vision care by the year 2003.
- The 400 local Volunteer Centers affiliated with The Points of Light Foundation will connect one million young people with caring adults or with the opportunity to serve.
- Communities in Schools will expand its programs so that an additional 750,000 young people in need will be better able to successfully learn, stay in school and prepare for life.
- The Greek Orthodox Church in America has committed to assist one needy child per every ten families in the more than 550 Greek Orthodox churches nationwide.
- Big Brothers/Big Sisters has committed to doubling their mentoring relationships, reaching 200,000 matches through the year 2000. Service will become an integral part of the mentoring relationship.
- Shell Oil has made a corporate wide commitment to support all five goals of the Summit at every level of the company through expanded employee volunteering, targeted corporate philanthropy, and promotional support.

Funding for the Summit is being provided by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, the Pew Charitable Trusts, the David and Lucile Packard Foundation, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, and the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

KEY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

When and where will The Presidents' Summit for America's Future be held?

The Summit will take place in Philadelphia, from Sunday, April 27, through Tuesday, April 29. The opening and closing ceremonies will be held at Independence Hall with most of the working sessions to be conducted at Philadelphia's Convention Center.

What are the goals of the Summit?

The Summit's goal is to mobilize millions of citizens and thousands of organizations from all sectors in order to ensure that all of our youth have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives:

- An ongoing relationship with a caring adult or mentor;
- Safe places to learn and grow;
- A healthy start;
- A marketable skill through effective education;
- An opportunity to give back through community service.

Through specific, measurable commitments toward these goals from individual organizations from every sector in America, and through community initiatives, the aim is to turn the tide for America's youth.

The Summit's goal is to make effective citizen service an integral part of the American way of life.

Who is involved in the Summit?

President Clinton and the former Presidents will serve as honorary co-chairmen of the Summit. General Colin Powell will serve as General Chairman of the Summit. Former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Henry Cisneros will serve as Vice Chairman. The Summit is being organized at the initiative of the Corporation for National Service and the Points of Light Foundation. Former Senator Harris Wofford heads the former, and Robert Goodwin, who headed President Bush's initiative to aid Black Colleges, directs the latter. Stuart Shapiro, M.D., the former Health Commissioner of Philadelphia, is the Chief Executive Officer of the Summit organizing team. Many national non-profit organizations are already collaborating as partners in the Summit.

What is happening at the Summit?

First, the Presidents and First Ladies will join in the historic call to commitment and to action. Second, local and national leaders from all sectors will announce their organizational commitments to action – mobilizing their people and their abilities for an unprecedented effort to turn the tide for America's youth by the turn of the century. Third, delegations from approximately 100 communities and all 50 states will work together to turn the message of the Summit into concrete plans for action. The delegations will return home and plan their own local Summits that will stimulate further steps to meet the major goals.

How is the Summit being funded?

Funding for the Summit is being provided by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, the Pew Charitable Trusts, the David and Lucile Packard Foundation, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, and the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation.

What are Summit commitments?

Organizations and institutions from the private, nonprofit and public sectors commit to achieving specific goals and taking specific steps to meet those goals. For instance, in some cases, they might pledge increased resources or more volunteers. Some of the first commitments being announced today include:

- Columbia/HCA Healthcare Corporation has committed to immunize one million children by the year 2000. Columbia, its employees and affiliated physicians, will be able to serve the immunization needs from more than 600 hospitals, surgery centers and home care locations.
- LensCrafters will provide one million needy people, especially children, with vision care by the year 2003.
- The 400 local Volunteer Centers affiliated with The Points of Light Foundation will connect one million young people with caring adults or with the opportunity to serve.
- Communities in Schools will expand its programs so that an additional 750,000 young people in need will be better able to successfully learn, stay in school and prepare for life.
- The Greek Orthodox Church in America has committed to assist one needy child per every ten families in the more than 550 Greek Orthodox churches nationwide.
- Big Brothers/Big Sisters has committed to doubling their mentoring relationships, reaching 200,000 matches through the year 2000. Service will become an integral part of the mentoring relationship.
- Shell Oil has made a corporate wide commitment to support all five goals of the Summit at every level of the company through expanded employee volunteering, targeted corporate philanthropy, and promotional support. Before, during and after the Summit, this list will continue to expand.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

SUMMIT COMMITMENTS

January 24, 1997

Every child in America should have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives: an ongoing relationship with a caring adult or mentor; safe places to learn and grow; a healthy start; a marketable skill through effective education; and an opportunity to give back through community service.

Commitments are being made to provide these fundamental resources to our nation's youth in each of the above categories. Some of these are:

I. An ongoing relationship with a caring adult or mentor.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters

Has committed to doubling their mentoring relationships, reaching 200,000 matches through the year 2000. Service will become an integral part of the mentoring relationship and a key activity for current and future "Bigs and Littles."

One to One/National Mentoring Partnership, Inc.

Will help the nation forge 2,000,000 new mentoring relationships over the next five years and will support national and local leaders who have already made mentoring a priority and mobilize others to do the same. It plans to educate Americans and their organizations about responsible mentoring and what they can do to make it available to every child in this country. It will serve as a resource to mentoring initiatives nationwide, and will teach children how to find caring and trustworthy adults to mentor them and adults how to connect with opportunities to mentor children; e.g. Twin cities - 100,000 mentoring relationships, Greater Kansas City YouthFriends - 1,000 caring adult relationships.

NFL Players Association

Is launching a pro-athlete mentoring program for Native American teens in partnership with the Johns Hopkins Center for Indian Health. Over the next 3 years, it will recruit retired and active NFL players to serve as mentors for Indian youth, launch a reservation-based peer leadership and healthy lifestyles curriculum, as well as in-school motivational sessions with NFL players, and an annual summer camp.

Three Television Networks

Have committed to the goals of the summit. ABC's campaign, Children First, is a multi-million dollar investment in programming and PSA's that will help recruit thousands of churches and synagogues as sponsors of mentoring projects for young people. HBO and CBS will provide programming and broadcast PSA's to promote the growth of the mentoring movement. The Harvard School of Public Health is spearheading these commitments, and is also committed to mobilizing the Hollywood creative community.

Tucson, Arizona

Will connect every youth in need to an adult who can serve as a positive role model, giving youth hope, pushing them to be independent, and expecting them to succeed. Led by the Volunteer Center of Tucson, partners include city, county, police department, higher education, businesses, non-profits, and neighborhood associations. The goal is to serve 2,000 additional youth by the year 2000 and to engage 3,000 adults in mentoring programs.

Jewish Social Justice Center

Will mobilize 100,000 volunteer tutors and aids in eight target cities.

National Council of Volunteer Centers

Committed Volunteer Centers that are members of The Points of Light Foundation will develop 400 new collaborations on new or expanded youth initiatives connecting one million young people with caring adults and/or with the opportunity to serve.

National Association for Equal Opportunity in Higher Education

Fully supporting the Summit goals, N.A.F.E.O. is pledging that 50% of the student enrollment (approximately 140,000 students) of the 117 historically and predominantly Black Colleges and Universities across the country will engage in Volunteer Community Service Projects in local communities with an emphasis on tutoring and mentoring.

8th Grade Class of Julian D. Coleman Academy of International Studies, Indianapolis, Indiana

Have committed to tutoring younger students in the John Hope Elementary School in academic subjects in order to prepare them for a successful transition into middle school. Tutoring will occur twice monthly, focusing on mathematics, language and arts.

Texas State Comptrollers Office/Family Pathfinders Division

Committed to matching 1,000 families on public assistance with teams of volunteers who will assist the families to become independent from welfare by the year 1999. This will be accomplished by working in partnership with Volunteer Centers, interfaith coalitions, religious judicatory organizations and civic clubs in the major metropolitan areas and with individual congregations and clubs in the small towns and rural areas.

The Pillsbury Company

Is launching "Caring Adults and Kids," a comprehensive commitment to help economically disadvantaged young people build and sustain relationships with caring adults. It plans to direct $1.75 million in grants to mentoring organizations in 1997 alone.

II. Safe places to learn and grow.

The YMCA of the USA

Will focus on providing a safe place for children and youth to gather in the over 2,000 YMCA's in the US, but also will provide additional caring and supportive adults. Over the next three years, we will increase the number of YMCA volunteers to 572,000. This will mean recruiting 190,500 additional volunteers to help teach the values of Caring, Honesty, Respect, and Responsibility as mentors, tutors, coaches, skill instructors, and fund raisers.

Kimberly-Clark Corporation

Will invest $2 million to support community playgrounds built by thousands of employees, family members, and neighborhood volunteers in 30 cities across the United States in 1997. Creating safe and imaginative places for children to play and learn will be the heart of K-C's 125th Anniversary Celebration. To facilitate this project, the company has forged an innovative alliance with KaBOOM!, a national non-profit leader in coordinating community-built playgrounds.

III. A healthy start.

LensCrafters

Will provide one million needy people, especially children, with free vision care by the year 2003.

Columbia/HCA Healthcare Corporation

Has committed to immunize one million children by the year 2000. Columbia, its employees and affiliated physicians, will be able to serve the immunization needs from the more than 600 hospitals, surgery centers, and home care locations.

IV. A marketable skill through effective education.

Junior Achievement

Will lead an effort to introduce an additional 2 million young people to economic opportunity through education, including the connection for many of them with summer jobs and internships by the year 2000.

AT&T

Has committed $150 million to connect the country's 110,000 public and private elementary and secondary schools on the Information Superhighway by the year 2000. This commitment represents AT&T's single largest commitment to education and will make available some of its newest services and extensive education support to every school in the United States.

V. An opportunity to give back through community service.

United States Army

The Army commits to taking the lead in encouraging a joint effort among the military services to expand opportunities for active duty, reserve and retired military personnel to volunteer their time as mentors and tutors in schools in their local communities.

Major United Way Agencies

Nineteen of the nation's largest nonprofit agencies who are all key participants in the United Way system, are Summit partners, along with United Way of America. A collaboration among United Ways, local designees of the Points of Light Foundation and the Corporation for National Service will be responsible for assembling local delegations. Among the organizations that will contribute to the selection process will be members of Leadership 18 including: Girl Scouts of USA, American Red Cross, Big Brothers and Big Sisters of America, Boy Scouts of America, Campfire Boys and Girls, Boys and Girls Clubs of America, Catholic Charities USA, Child Welfare League of America, Council of Jewish Federations, Family Service America, Girls Incorporated, Goodwill Industries, International, National Mental Health Association, National Urban League, Salvation Army, YMCA of the USA, YWCA of the USA, United Neighborhood Centers of America, and the Visiting Nurses Association.

Steering Committee of College Presidents

Through the leadership of the President of San Francisco State University, 21 university presidents have committed 50% or more of their increase in work-study funds to community service initiatives and other university resources to support the America Reads Challenge. Members of the steering committee have also committed to each recruit five other university presidents.

VI. Many organizations and corporations have committed to focus on all five goals or fundamental resources. Far reaching commitments include:

The IBM Company

Partnering with United Way of America and AmeriCorps*VISTA, IBM will launch a Technology Corps in at least ten US cities to help not-for-profit organizations use up-to-date technology and provide higher quality services to people in need.

AmeriCorps*VISTA members will provide free technology planning, staff training, and donations of equipment and software serving 2,000 not-for-profit organizations. By the year 2,000, agencies served will include day care centers, community centers, and senior citizen centers.

Shell Oil Company

Committed to a national leadership role in Connect America, a national coalition of some 30 major organizations that share a commitment to citizen service as a way to bring Americans together across their differences. Shell has made a corporate-wide commitment to support all five goals of the Summit at every level of the company through expanded employee volunteering, targeted corporate philanthropy and promotional support.

DePauw University, The George Washington University, University of Denver, Morehouse College, University of Notre Dame

Pledge to coordinate and host 30 local Summits by September, 1998, as members of the University Summit Advisory Board. Will host a local Summit on their campus and recruit five other universities to host Summits on their campuses.

Greek Orthodox Church in America

Will commit to assisting one needy child per every ten families in the more than 550 Greek Orthodox communities nationwide. It will help these needy children in each of our communities gain access to a healthy start in life; caring adult relationships; safe places to gather, learn and grow; education that provides marketable skills; and opportunities to give back to the community.

Communities in Schools

The largest stay-in-school network is committed to expanding its coordination of community resources and partnerships with the public so that an additional 750,000 young people in need will have access to all five goals enabling them to successfully learn, stay in school, and prepare for life.

AmeriCorps Alums

Will encourage all association members to commit at least 10 hours per month to ongoing service leadership. Local alumni leaders across the country will coordinate with local service providers to provide volunteer people power. The service leadership opportunities will focus on the five summit goals, with preference given to programs supporting ongoing relationships with young people.

Additional commitments have been made by the following organizations:

The General Federation of Women's Clubs
American Booksellers Association
Minneapolis Star Tribune
National Urban Fellows
Boys and Girls Clubs of America
The National Exchange Club
Women in Community Service
The Youth Volunteer Corps of America
Prudential
University of Notre Dame
Veterans of Foreign Wars
Maryland Youth Service Action Committee
The Bonner Foundation
Volunteers of America
Girls, Inc
Campus Outreach Opportunity League (COOL)
Grantmaker Forum on Community and National Service
The City of Philadelphia
Youth Service America
Girl Scouts of the U.S.A.
Boy Scouts of America

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

ORGANIZERS' MISSION STATEMENT

On Monday morning, April 28, the President of the United States and former Presidents will stand together on the steps of Independence Hall in Philadelphia. Together, as Honorary Co-Chairs of The Presidents' Summit for America's Future, they will issue a call to action through service.

General Colin Powell, the former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, will serve as General Chairman of the Summit and the campaign that will follow. Henry Cisneros, former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, will serve as Vice Chairman.

The promise of America rests in the commitment, creativity and energy of its people to respond to our shared problems and to envision a shared future. Every day, Americans are doing that work – helping one another, addressing serious social problems, building stronger communities. Somewhere in America, in some way, solutions are being found to the problems we face.

But, unfortunately, our problems are vast and complex. There is a growing sense of disconnection. Too many of our people have been left out of the mainstream, and too many of our communities are fragmented along racial, ethnic, religious or economic lines. We find ourselves feeling that what divides us from one another is more powerful than the glue that holds us together in communities and as a nation.

The impact of this is greatest on America's young people. In small towns as well as big cities, far too many young people are growing up without the kind of adult role models and relationships needed for success. Far too many do not have adequate safe places to learn and grow, are not getting a healthy start, or the kind of education that creates real opportunities. And too many are unaware that giving through community service can make a difference in the lives of others and can be an enriching experience.

That is why priority must be given to expanded and more effective citizen service and new commitments from our nation's most important institutions. We must ensure that all of our youth have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives:

- an ongoing relationship with a caring adult or mentor;
- safe places to learn and grow;
- a healthy start;
- a marketable skill through effective education;
- an opportunity to give back through community service.

Certainly, all Americans can agree that we are all capable of doing more to achieve these goals.

The Presidents' Summit for America's Future will be both a celebration of our nation's heritage of volunteer citizen service and a call to action. It will be a call to commitment -- for Americans to pledge to serve; for each of us to put our individual gifts to work for the common good; for us to renew the sense of civic responsibility that has served us well throughout our history as a nation.

The Summit will be the beginning of a new effort. In the weeks ahead, a national partnership will engage leaders from business, labor, the media, religious and educational institutions, and the voluntary sector. They will develop specific numerical targets in making available the five fundamental resources for our children against which we can measure our progress, through the year 2000. The partnership will also develop appropriate mechanisms so the momentum generated by the Summit will be sustained.

The Summit itself will have three focal points. First, the Presidents and First Ladies will join in the historic call to commitment and to action. Second, local and national leaders from all sectors will announce their organizational commitments to action -- mobilizing their people and their abilities for an unprecedented effort to turn the tide for America's youth by the turn of the century. Third, delegations from approximately 100 communities and all 50 states will work together to turn the message of the Summit into concrete plans for action.

The Points of Light Foundation and the Corporation for National Service have taken the lead in building a working partnership with many of the nation's leading nonprofit organizations and businesses. Funding is being provided by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, the Pew Charitable Trusts, the David and Lucile Packard Foundation, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, and the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation.

The spirit of the Summit transcends the individual concerns of its sponsoring organizations. Americans need not be separated by their differences. Through service, we can build strong connections with one another. And together, we can fulfill the American promise for all of our people.

Why Service Matters

There are problems government can't solve, so it's up to the rest of us—before it's too late. BY COLIN POWELL

NOT LONG AGO, I VISITED a Boys and Girls Club in a poor area in Florida. I was talking to a group of kids sitting on the floor around me about my own childhood. My family wasn't rich; in fact, we lived in a tenement in the Bronx. But, I told the group, my parents had created an enveloping family environment that gave sustenance, structure and discipline to our lives. We were taught to believe in ourselves. As I spoke, a 9-year-old boy raised his hand. "General," he asked, "do you think if you didn't have two parents you would have made it?"

That kid cut me right to the quick. He was saying, "This isn't my world you're talking about. Can I still make it?" My answer was: "Yes, you can." That boy may not have had what I had growing up, but, I said, "there are people here who care for you, who will mentor you, who will watch over you and teach you right from wrong."

As I began traveling around the country in retirement, my own interests turned inward,

Call to arms: 'I have seen divides that are deeply troubling'

from national security and cold war to what is going on here at home. I have seen social, cultural and racial divides that are deeply troubling. These are problems government can't solve, so it's up to us to get on with it. Last Friday we started: I had the unusual privilege of standing in the White House beside two of the presidents I had served—Bill Clinton and George Bush. One had defeated the other at the polls, but old rivalries are giving way to a common purpose. We were together to announce the Presidents' Summit for America's Future, which will be held in Philadelphia on April 27–29. Presidents Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter and First Ladies Hillary Clinton, Lady Bird Johnson and Nancy Reagan will be present to welcome the delegations from every state and hundreds of volunteer groups. The goal is not just to celebrate "service" but to encourage corporations and nonprofits to further mentoring, skill training, child health care, service to community and safe places for children.

It won't be easy. In my travels, I have met many youngsters. Too many of them are in despair. I saw for myself during 35 years in the military what happens when you take young people, provide a nurturing, structured environment and give them leaders to look up to. I've since wondered what would happen if only we could make that model available to every kid.

I find that so many people are anxious to do more, if only we can help them channel their time, energy and treasure. There's no reason every company in the country can't take one kid, 10 kids or 100 kids and teach them about the workplace. There's also a place for local government. Look at California, where Gov. Pete Wilson has created a program to recruit 250,000 mentors for at-risk youngsters by 2000. Each of us who has been blessed must reach down or reach back and lift up somebody in need.

POWELL, the former chairman of the Joint Chiefs, is general chairman of the Presidents' Summit for America's Future.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

February 10, 1997

Honorable (Governor's Name)

State of (State)

(Address)

(City, State, Zip)

Dear Governor (Name),

At the White House on Friday, January 24th, President Clinton and former President Bush jointly announced plans for a nationwide mobilization - a campaign through the year 2000 and beyond - for a new level of commitment to meeting the challenges facing our nation's children and youth. The effort will be formally launched at the Presidents' Summit for America's Future to be held in Philadelphia April 27th through April 29th.

I have agreed to be Chairman of the Summit and the multi-year effort that will come after the Summit. We will build on this in the years ahead so that when the turn of the century comes our work will have taken on concrete forms and we will see positive results from our efforts. Henry Cisneros, the former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, will be Vice Chairman. The Points of Light Foundation and the Corporation for National Service are the initiating organizations of the Summit.

The Summit is organized on the proposition that America's young people must have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives:

- An ongoing relationship with a caring adult -- a mentor, tutor, coach;
- Safe places and structured activities during non-school hours to learn and grow;
- A healthy start;
- A marketable skill through effective education;
- An opportunity to give back through community service.

Governor Engler, at the National Governors' Association Winter Meeting, described the Summit as an "unprecedented opportunity" that will call on all Americans to reach a new level of commitment for our nation's children and youth.

Governor Carper also encouraged all governors to attend the Summit. He noted that the Summit and its follow-on activities will support the ongoing efforts of the governors to increase citizen engagement on behalf of children and youth, saying, "We have played a lead role on these issues for years."

The Summit itself will have three focal points. First, the Presidents and First Ladies will join in the historic call to commitment and to action. Second, local, state and national leaders from all sectors will announce their organizational commitments to action - mobilizing their people and their abilities for an unprecedented effort to turn the tide for America's youth and offering Governors an opportunity to highlight their states' records in service. Third, delegations from approximately 100 communities and all 50 states will work together to turn the message of the Summit into concrete plans for action. A copy of one of the letters inviting community participation in the Summit and a list of the initial communities being invited are attached.

I invite you to attend The Presidents' Summit. In Philadelphia, Governors will have the opportunity to announce commitments already made as well as future commitments that will help all young people have access to the five fundamental resources that they need. Governors will also be given the opportunity to visit with the Presidents and First Ladies, corporate chief executive officers and other leaders attending the Summit to share information about innovative programs and initiatives from your state.

I also ask that you assemble and lead a five person delegation of your choice to the Summit. We would encourage you to select individuals who are in positions to promote access to the five fundamental resources for children and youth that are the focus of the Summit. Further, I encourage you to consider that at least one of the members of your delegation be drawn from your state commission on national and community service – presumably the state commission chair or executive director. I understand that your state commission is now developing its own unified state plan for service. Other members of your delegation might include representatives of state agencies relating to children and youth, communities of faith, state legislators, state volunteer organizations, higher education institutions, and labor and business leaders. These state-wide delegations will be in the position to support future actions that will occur after April that will encourage this effort statewide and in communities that do not come to Philadelphia.

Within the next week a team from the Summit will be contacting your chief of staff to discuss your participation in the Summit and the partnership to follow. If a member of your staff has questions, please ask them to contact Marci Levin at 202-606-5000, extension 274.

Your leadership and support is essential to the success of this national effort. I look forward to seeing you at the Summit and to our common effort to make America a better place for all of our children and youth.

Sincerely,

COLIN L. POWELL
General, U.S. Army (RET)

Characteristics and Make up of Community Delegations

Community delegations should be made up of up to 10 people who:

- have achieved success in effective citizen service;
- are committed to the idea that each person regardless of status in community, age, gender, race, religious or institutional affiliation or background has a place at the table and something to contribute to the community;
- are experienced in creating opportunities for others to contribute to solutions, not just do it themselves;
- know their community and the key players;
- are able to leave their institutional “hat” at the door;
- are not harnessed by the “business as usual” way of operating;
- have a record of “getting things done”; and
- above all, are trusted by others in their community.

In addition, community delegations should be selected with the following things in mind:

- The team should look like the community it represents recognizing diversity of age, race, economic background and physical ability, and include young people under age 25.
- The mayor must be invited to serve on the team or designate a representative.
- At least two of the individuals should be doing work in the community that addresses the overarching goal of achieving better conditions for children and youth and creating opportunities for other citizens to be involved in this work.
- The balance of the team should include some of the following perspectives that would be most beneficial in increasing the volume and effectiveness of citizen engagement in their communities: communities of faith, educators (elementary, secondary and higher education), businesses (large and small) and labor, neighborhood leaders (such as homeowner associations or neighborhood councils), social service delivery agencies, philanthropic groups (community, private or corporate foundations), media, and professional public sector managers.
- All team members should either be in positions to advance citizen action or already be doing so, either through work at the neighborhood or grassroots level or from a position of institutional power or administrative authority in the community.

The Summit's goal is to make effective citizen service an integral part of the American way of life.

Who is involved in the Summit?

President Clinton and former President Bush are honorary co-chairmen of the Summit. General Colin Powell is General Chairman of the Summit. Former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Henry Cisneros is Vice Chairman. Former Presidents Ford, Carter and Reagan have all pledged their active support and President Ford has agreed to attend the Summit, as has Nancy Reagan, representing President Reagan. The Summit is being organized at the initiative of the Corporation for National Service and the Points of Light Foundation.

What will happen at the Summit?

The Presidents and First Ladies will join in a historic call to commitment and to action. Leaders from all sectors will announce their organizational commitments to action – mobilizing their members and their abilities for an unprecedented effort to turn the tide for America's youth by the turn of the century. Delegations from approximately 100 communities and from all 50 states will work together to develop concrete plans for action. The community delegations will return home and plan their own local Summits that will stimulate further steps to meet the major goals.

Will Governors have a role at the Summit?

Every attending Governor will play a prominent role at the Summit. Each Governor is being invited to select – and head – a five-person state-wide delegation. While the agenda is still in its planning stages, Governors will have prominent roles along with the Presidents, First Ladies, mayors, and leaders of corporations, national organizations and foundations.

Why should a Governor attend?

The Summit will offer Governors an opportunity to highlight their states' record in citizen service, especially programs and plans targeting the nation's youth. The Summit will, as President Clinton remarked at the January 24, 1997 Press Announcement, "...shine a spotlight on what is working somewhere in America so that it can be adopted everywhere in America." Each Governor will play a leadership role at the Summit, and in the efforts to follow.

Is this a one-time event?

This is the launch of a multi-year effort. Those attending will be called upon to go back to their homes and communities and hold a Summit of their own. Governors may decide to hold a state-wide Summit. At the White House, President Bush said, "The Philadelphia summit is about getting more people off the sidelines. It is about citizens pulling together, leading by example, and lifting lives."

General Powell noted that in the years ahead we will build on what begins at the Summit so that as the turn of the century comes our work will have "...taken on concrete forms and we will see positive results from our efforts."

Why Service Matters

There are problems government can't solve, so it's up to the rest of us—before it's too late. BY COLIN POWELL

NOT LONG AGO, I VISITED a Boys and Girls Club in a poor area in Florida. I was talking to a group of kids sitting on the floor around me about my own childhood. My family wasn't rich; in fact, we lived in a tenement in the Bronx. But, I told the group, my parents had created an enveloping family environment that gave sustenance, structure and discipline to our lives. We were taught to believe in ourselves. As I spoke, a 9-year-old boy raised his hand. "General," he asked, "do you think if you didn't have two parents you would have made it?"

That kid cut me right to the quick. He was saying, "This isn't my world you're talking about. Can I still make it?" My answer was: "Yes, you can." That boy may not have had what I had growing up, but, I said, "there are people here who care for you, who will mentor you, who will watch over you and teach you right from wrong."

As I began traveling around the country in retirement, my own interests turned inward,

Call to arms: 'I have seen divides that are deeply troubling'

from national security and cold war to what is going on here at home. I have seen social, cultural and racial divides that are deeply troubling. These are problems government can't solve, so it's up to us to get on with it. Last Friday we started: I had the unusual privilege of standing in the White House beside two of the presidents I had served—Bill Clinton and George Bush. One had defeated the other at the polls, but old rivalries are giving way to a common purpose. We were together to announce the Presidents' Summit for America's Future, which will be held in Philadelphia on April 27–29. Presidents Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter and First Ladies Hillary Clinton, Lady Bird Johnson and Nancy Reagan will be present to welcome the delegations from every state and hundreds of volunteer groups. The goal is not just to celebrate "service" but to encourage corporations and nonprofits to further mentoring, skill training, child health care, service to community and safe places for children.

It won't be easy. In my travels, I have met many youngsters. Too many of them are in despair. I saw for myself during 35 years in the military what happens when you take young people, provide a nurturing, structured environment and give them leaders to look up to. I've since wondered what would happen if only we could make that model available to every kid.

I find that so many people are anxious to do more, if only we can help them channel their time, energy and treasure. There's no reason every company in the country can't take one kid, 10 kids or 100 kids and teach them about the workplace. There's also a place for local government. Look at California, where Gov. Pete Wilson has created a program to recruit 250,000 mentors for at-risk youngsters by 2000. Each of us who has been blessed must reach down or reach back and lift up somebody in need.

POWELL, the former chairman of the Joint Chiefs, is general chairman of the Presidents' Summit for America's Future.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

February 7, 1997

The Honorable (Mayor's Name)
Office of the Mayor
City Hall
(City, State, Zip)

Dear Mayor (Mayor's Name):

I have agreed to become Chairman of the Presidents' Summit on America's Future and a multi-year effort that will follow. Plans for the Summit were announced on Friday, January 24th, at the White House by President Clinton and former President Bush. The Summit, which will be held in Philadelphia April 27 - April 29, 1997, is aimed at bringing America to a new level of commitment to volunteer service especially targeting the challenges facing our nation's children and youth. Henry Cisneros, former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, will serve as Vice Chairman.

The Summit is organized on the proposition that America's young people must have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives:

- An ongoing relationship with a caring adult -- a mentor, tutor, coach;
- Safe places and structured activities during non-school hours to learn and grow;
- A healthy start;
- A marketable skill through effective education; and
- An opportunity to give back through community service.

The Summit itself will have three focal points. First, the Presidents and First Ladies will join in the historic call to commitment and to action. Second, local, state, and national leaders from all sectors will announce their organizational commitments to action - mobilizing their people and their abilities for an unprecedented effort to turn the tide for America's youth. Third, delegations from approximately 100 communities and all 50 states will work together to turn the message of the Summit into concrete plans for action.

I invite you to attend The Presidents' Summit with representatives of your community. As you will see from the attached letter, the process of convening the community delegation is the responsibility of the three individuals who are identified. In each case we are asking the chief officer of the local United Way and the designees of the two initiating organizations for the Summit, the Points of Light Foundation and the Corporation for National Service, to work together to convene a delegation. They will contact your office in the next two weeks to seek your advice on assembling the delegation. If you have any questions about your participation please contact Jim Scheibel, former Mayor of St. Paul, at 202-606-5000, extension 180.

Characteristics and Make up of Community Delegations

Community delegations should be made up of up to 10 people who:

- have achieved success in effective citizen service;
- are committed to the idea that each person regardless of status in community, age, gender, race, religious or institutional affiliation or background has a place at the table and something to contribute to the community;
- are experienced in creating opportunities for others to contribute to solutions, not just do it themselves;
- know their community and the key players;
- are able to leave their institutional “hat” at the door;
- are not harnessed by the “business as usual” way of operating;
- have a record of “getting things done”; and
- above all, are trusted by others in their community.

In addition, community delegations should be selected with the following things in mind:

- The team should look like the community it represents recognizing diversity of age, race, economic background and physical ability, and include young people under age 25.
- The mayor must be invited to serve on the team or designate a representative.
- At least two of the individuals should be doing work in the community that addresses the overarching goal of achieving better conditions for children and youth and creating opportunities for other citizens to be involved in this work.
- The balance of the team should include some of the following perspectives that would be most beneficial in increasing the volume and effectiveness of citizen engagement in their communities: communities of faith, educators (elementary, secondary and higher education), businesses (large and small) and labor, neighborhood leaders (such as homeowner associations or neighborhood councils), social service delivery agencies, philanthropic groups (community, private or corporate foundations), media, and professional public sector managers.
- All team members should either be in positions to advance citizen action or already be doing so, either through work at the neighborhood or grassroots level or from a position of institutional power or administrative authority in the community.

United Way Designee
Designee's Organization
Corporation for National Service Designee
Designee's Organization
Points of Light Designee
Designee's Organization

Dear Designees:

At the White House on Friday, January 24th, President Clinton and former President Bush jointly announced plans for a nationwide mobilization - a campaign through the year 2000 and beyond - for a new level of commitment to volunteer service focused primarily on the challenges facing our nation's children and youth. The effort will be formally launched with a Summit to be held in Philadelphia April 27th through April 29th.

I have agreed to be Chairman of the Summit and, more importantly, the multi-year effort that will come after the Summit. We will build on this in the years ahead so that when the turn of the century comes our work will have taken concrete form and we will see positive results. Henry Cisneros, the former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, will be Vice Chairman. I am writing to invite you to join this work and to play a key role in your community in preparing for the Philadelphia Summit.

The Start-up Summit

The Summit is organized on the proposition that America's young people must have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives:

- An ongoing relationship with a caring adult -- a mentor, tutor, coach;
- Safe places and structured activities during non-school hours to learn and grow;
- A healthy start;
- A marketable skill through effective education; and
- An opportunity to give back through community service.

While these conditions exist for many children and young people, in millions of lives they do not. All of us can and must do more to change that.

A large number of national corporations and other organizations, for example, are being invited to make new or expanded commitments to mobilize their people and abilities where they operate. Sample commitments were made public at the White House announcement of the Summit and are described in the enclosed material. Many additional national commitments will be announced at the Summit itself, and many more will be sought and secured following the Philadelphia event.

However, most achievements, just like most of the work to be done, will be the result of commitments made and acted upon in local communities. The only way to achieve the scale of change that will turn the tide across America is for individual community strategies to be defined and driven locally in every community in America. These objectives for children and young people will be primarily pursued by building on communities' own strengths. I ask you to help start that process.

The Request

I ask you to participate in convening individuals in your community who can move most effectively to achieve those five resources that we seek for all children and youth in every community. For each resource area, people should be brought together to decide what concrete steps ought to be taken. What kinds of commitments are needed in terms of the level and number in order to turn the tide for the children and youth in the community? Who is in the best position to organize these commitments? What groups need to work together? What kinds of specific targets should be set for the community for each of these resources? How can we track our progress? What are some of our "best practices" that can be shared and what do we want to learn from others?

In an effort to share the answers to these questions among communities and to provide every community with ideas for approaching the organizing challenge, teams from approximately 100 communities and all 50 states are being invited to the Philadelphia Summit in April. The initial list is enclosed. Your community is invited to participate in the Summit as one of these communities. Therefore, you are also being asked to accept responsibility for assembling a team of up to ten people to come to Philadelphia. Most of the delegates should be chosen from those who have convened to achieve the five resources. An outline of the suggested characteristics and make up of the community delegation is attached.

The two initiating organizations of the Summit, The Points of Light Foundation and the Corporation for National Service, have agreed to join with The United Way in the convening of interested parties from the public, private and non-profit sectors for the purpose of assembling a delegation. If you each accept the request to be the designee representing one of the three organizations, I ask that you three arrange to meet as soon as possible to determine how you will proceed as a team with these tasks and then do so. I am writing separately to the Mayor, inviting his/her participation in the Summit and requesting that he/she work with you as you carry out your responsibility. The Mayor will also be receiving a copy of this letter.

In the weeks ahead leading up to the Summit, a national partnership will engage leaders from business, labor, the media, religious and educational institutions, and the voluntary sector. They will develop specific numerical targets in making available the five fundamental resources for our children against which we can measure our progress through the year 2000. This partnership will also develop a range of strategies for assisting communities as they plan their follow-up strategies. Your community's own thinking will help inform this process.

Acting More Strategically

The challenge to every local community is to map out and act upon the distinctive combinations of local assets that will help it achieve the goals that it seeks. Therefore, our hope is that many of those who step forward will be, working together, in a position to act strategically because they combine the elements often necessary to move a community in new directions: neighborhood or grass-roots people, institutional power and administrative authority within the community. Therefore, my hope is that the people who step forward to become further engaged will want to work together to significantly advance citizen action and develop focused commitments to ensure that every young American has access to the five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives.

The campaign organizing process and the Summit itself will affirm the work already being done by individuals and organizations and help stimulate new efforts for others. Within some communities it will enhance what individuals are already thinking and what they are already doing. For others, it will be the jump-start they need. For all participants, it will be a way of building on the current wave of community and neighborhood-based innovation in America.

But we must also look differently at one another and at our organizations. Any inventory of the true resources and the potential activities of a community will reveal surprising strengths. In the end, it may be the contribution of those who are most often overlooked that provides the difference between accomplishing any of these goals and accomplishing none.

Communities that commit to the campaign will benefit by learning about "best practice communities" and "best practice programs", particularly those that mobilize more citizens and engage them in efforts that have proven effective in helping young people. By joining in this concerted effort, we expect that local organizers will gain access to valuable tools for helping children and young people. In addition, participating communities may gain access to resources made available by national organizations, foundations, corporations and others - tangible commitments to support a vigorous process for engaging citizens in targeted ways for youth. As one way of pursuing these different approaches, each community at the Summit will be asked to convene its own local Summit when the team returns home.

Next Steps

Please discuss among yourselves the request that you convene others, and let us know that you are beginning the process of assembling the Summit team and organizing for the longer term. I hope that you will accept the responsibility. I would appreciate one of you calling Rhonda Taylor at 202-606-5000, extension 282, as soon as possible to advise us of your decision and to designate among yourselves the contact person for us to communicate with between now and the Summit. We would ask that you select the entire team by March 1st so that they might receive a formal invitation. Some scholarship funds are available for team members who would otherwise not be able to attend the Summit. We will send you additional information next week. To discuss any questions that you may have, please also call Rhonda Taylor.

Thank you for the important work you already are doing and for your help in this new undertaking. I and the many others who are joining this great effort look forward to working with you.

Sincerely,

COLIN L. POWELL
General, U.S. Army (RET)

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

Five Fundamental Resources for Children and Youth

An Ongoing Relationship with a Caring Adult

It is more important than ever for young people to have the sustaining presence of caring adults in their lives. While there are currently hundreds of thousands of mentoring and tutoring relationships, it is estimated that more than 10 million young people would benefit from the intervention of a caring adult. Our goal is to create the additional tutoring and mentoring relationships necessary for a positive impact on the lives of these young people.

Safe Places to Learn and Grow

Young people cannot flourish, develop and properly mature into productive citizens in a climate of fear and chaos. Our goal is to increase safe places and structured activities during non-school hours so that young people can study, play and receive the necessary guidance to reach their full potential in life.

Marketable Skills through Effective Education

Many young people attend school with little or no concept of how their studies will prepare them for a job or economic opportunity. Our goal is to forge new partnerships among businesses, schools and citizen volunteers to provide more young people with mentors, summer jobs, internships, and the essential skills of reading and mathematics.

A Healthy Start

Adequate health care and healthy behaviors are essential to every child's development and well-being. Our goal is to find new ways, in cooperation with government, health care providers and business, to assure that this is achieved.

An Opportunity to Give Back

Often young people are not encouraged, or given the opportunity, to help others. Our goal is to provide young people with the opportunity to serve, so that they become part of the solution and experience first-hand the benefit of being active citizens.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

The Points of Light Foundation

Founded in May 1990, The Points of Light Foundation's mission is to engage more people more effectively in volunteer service to help solve serious social problems. The Foundation seeks to help Americans connect with one another through service as a new way to combat the sense of disconnection that is fragmenting our communities. The Foundation is working with 30 other national organizations through Connect America to get 10 million Americans to "commit to connect" through service in the next five years.

The Foundation is the national champion and resource organization for its 400+ member Volunteer Centers and for businesses committed to engaging their workers in volunteer service. It manages Make A Difference Day, National Volunteer Week, the President's Service Awards, the Awards for Excellence for business and the National Community Service Conference. Its Youth Ambassadors mobilize other young people to become community problem solvers. The Points of Light Institute offers products, membership services and training for thousands of local volunteer leaders worldwide.

Corporation for National Service

National service is a movement that provides opportunities for Americans of all ages and backgrounds to help solve community problems through service. Created in 1993 by Congress, the President, and community groups nationwide, the Corporation for National Service is a public-private partnership that oversees three national service initiatives:

AmeriCorps engages 25,000 citizens in a year of full-time, results-driven service sponsored by local and national nonprofits, AmeriCorps*VISTA, and AmeriCorps* NCCC. In return, AmeriCorps members earn education awards to help pay for college or pay back student loans. AmeriCorps members help communities meet critical challenges in the areas of education, public safety, human needs, and the environment.

National Senior Service Corps engages a half million Americans age 55 and older in results-driven service as Foster Grandparents, Senior Companions, and RSVP volunteers. The Senior Corps taps the vast wealth of experience, skills, and talents of older citizens to meet community challenges.

Learn & Serve America engages over one-million students from kindergarten through college in community projects that integrate service and learning. Learn & Serve America builds on the grassroots service-learning movement by promoting service as a learning opportunity and providing models and resources to schools, universities, and community groups. Students use academic skills to solve real-world problems, and learn the value of service, citizenship, and responsibility.

THE PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT FOR AMERICA'S FUTURE

COMMUNITY "TEAMS" PARTICIPATING IN THE SUMMIT

The partnership that will emerge from the Summit needs to be with every community in America. To start this process, "teams" of ten to twelve citizens from each of approximately 100 communities from all 50 states are being invited to participate in the Philadelphia event.

The local teams will share "best practices" and begin to develop concrete action plans to achieve broader citizen engagement and additional local commitments to turn the tide for America's youth. As part of their work, these local teams will take the first steps in planning their own local and regional Summits to be held soon after they return home. It is anticipated that the Summit will also result in suggestions on ways that communities can better communicate with each other allowing "communities of interests and action" focused on the Summit goals to grow and deepen locally throughout the country.

Communities invited to attend the Summit will include the 50 largest cities; the largest city in those states that do not contain one of those fifty; plus a group of smaller or rural communities recommended by the Summit funders. A limited number of additional communities that have exemplary programs or special circumstances may be added.

Local designees of the Points of Light Foundation and the Corporation for National Service, in partnership with local United Ways, will be responsible for assembling a delegation with the characteristics described in the attached paper. In this process, they will consult widely with others throughout their community.

Because of space constraints in Philadelphia, a limited number of individuals will be able to attend the Summit from any one community. However, all of those who are part of the convening process in the local community should be included in the efforts that grow out of the Summit.

Acting More Strategically

The challenge to every local community is to map out and act upon the distinctive combinations of local assets that will help it achieve the goals that it seeks. Therefore, our hope is that the team will consist of individuals who, working together, can significantly advance citizen action or are already doing so because they combine the neighborhood or grass-roots people, institutional power and the administrative authority of the community.

Our plan is to bring a new and increased focus to the role of citizen service, particularly as it can help ensure that all of our youth have access to five fundamental resources that can help them lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives: an ongoing relationship with a caring adult, safe places to learn and grow, a healthy start, a marketable skill through effective education, and an opportunity to give back through community service.

The Summit will affirm the work already being done by individuals and organizations and help stimulate new efforts for others. Within some community teams, the Summit will enhance what individuals are already thinking and what they are already doing. For others, it will be the jump-start they need. For all participants, it will be a way of building on the current wave of community and neighborhood-based innovation in America. The Summit process will assist communities and organizations in thinking and acting more strategically about achieving those goals.

But we must also look differently at one another and at our organizations. Any inventory of the true resources and the potential activities of a community will reveal surprising strengths. In the end, it may be the contribution of those who are most often overlooked that provides the difference between accomplishing any of these goals and accomplishing none.

Our Most Valuable Resource -- Ordinary Citizens

Whatever the goal, whatever the strategy, communities are discovering not only that new resources must be generated and that all groups must collaborate more effectively, but that the single most important available resource – ordinary citizens with talents that can make a difference – often is not being tapped to its full potential. Indeed, study after study makes clear that the average American is prepared to do more, if only someone would ask and would engage them effectively.

Communities that commit to the campaign will benefit by learning about “best practice communities” and “best practice programs” particularly those that mobilize more citizens and engage them in efforts that have proven effective in helping young people. By joining in this concerted effort, we expect that local organizers will gain access to valuable tools for helping our young people. The Summit should provide strategic organizing tools essential for creating and sustaining action. In addition, participating communities may gain access to resources made available by national organizations, foundations, corporations and others – tangible commitments to support a vigorous process for engaging citizens.

SUMMIT SPONSORS

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, based in Princeton, NJ, is the nation's largest philanthropy devoted exclusively to health and health care. It became a national institution in 1972 and concentrates its grantmaking in four areas: assuring access to basic health services; improving the way services are organized and provided for people with chronic health conditions; reducing the harm caused by substance abuse; and helping the nation address the problem of rising health care costs.

The Foundation was created by the late Robert Wood Johnson, who built the family firm, Johnson & Johnson, into a worldwide health and medical care products company.

The Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation

The Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation is a private grantmaking foundation established by Ewing Marion Kauffman, the founder of pharmaceutical manufacturer Marion Laboratories and the original owner of the Kansas City Royals Baseball team.

The foundation is committed to serving organizations and individuals dedicated to the vision of self-sufficient people in healthy communities. The Foundation supports partnerships with selected not-for-profit organizations whose vision, mission and strategic initiatives are consistent with the Foundation's purpose.

The W.K. Kellogg Foundation

The W.K. Kellogg Foundation was established in 1930 to "help people help themselves through the practical application of knowledge and resources to improve their quality of life and that of future generations."

The foundation's programming activities center around the common vision of a world in which each person has a sense of worth; accepts responsibility for self, family, community, and societal well-being; and has the capacity to be productive, and to help create nurturing families, responsive institutions, and healthy communities.

To achieve the greatest impact, the Foundation targets its grants towards specific focal points or areas. These include: health; food systems and rural development; youth and education, and higher education; and philanthropy and volunteerism. When woven throughout these areas, funding also is provided for leadership; information systems/technology; efforts to capitalize on diversity; and family, neighborhood, and community development programming.

David and Lucile Packard Foundation

The David and Lucile Packard Foundation in California was established by its founders as a reflection of their deep interest in philanthropy. Today the Foundation maintains a strong focus on improving the local quality of life for children, youth and families through support for nonprofit and public agencies' endeavors. The Foundation also supports math and science education, conservation, reproductive health, child health and related policy issues locally and nationally.

The Pew Charitable Trusts

The Pew Charitable Trusts, a national philanthropy with a special commitment to Philadelphia, support nonprofit activities in the areas of culture, education, the environment, health and human services, public policy and religion. Through their grant making, the Trusts seek to encourage individual development and personal achievement, cross-disciplinary problem solving and innovative, practical approaches to meeting the changing needs of a global community.
