By the year

2001

There will be more than two billion teenagers on Earth.

Five hundred times larger than the “baby boom” in the US after World War II, they will be a driving force for change. Their choices in life will shape much of the 21st Century.

How many will hold a vision of hope and possibility?

The answer depends on the support we extend to the next generation and on our commitment of service to the Earth we all share—to protect and renew the environment that sustains us.

LINKING SAN FRANCISCO

Linking San Francisco is a great example of how the private sector has worked with service organizations in San Francisco. The program works with K-12 youth in the San Francisco Unified School District.

Businesses have been solicited to contribute people, resources and funding. Currently six foundations are supporters: Walter and Evelyn Haas Jr., Walter and Alise Haas Fund, Peter and Miriam Haas Fund, Stuart Foundation, Koret Foundation, Mary Crocker Trust, and the McKesson Foundation. The Haas family (read Levi Strauss) developed the vision for Linking San Francisco.

Three corporations have also committed to the project. Wells Fargo Bank and Bank of America have contributed resources and people and Pacific Telesis has donated resources, people and $15,000. Monetary donations total $85,000 which covers about 40% of the budget. Because the program does not begin until the fall, many relationships are still in the process of being developed with law, accounting and public relations firms.

ESPRIT Corporation

Esprit has been a partner in launching our summer of service program. In addition to this effort, Esprit has several other employee volunteer programs: they will leverage 10 hours of volunteer time per month for employees, donate $1,000 to support programs of employee interest, and hold four events per year where employees are paid to participate.

Re: Site visit for National Volunteer Week
April 19, 1993

On the following two pages are four site suggestions from San Francisco State University. The college has an excellent reputation for community service and the entire staff of their community involvement center has made a special effort to develop some good options for your visit.

Major Robert Gordon has informed me that the best time to take a break in your schedule is Thursday between 11:30 and 1:30. Three of the suggestions made by SFSU have fallen into that time frame. I gave a copy of the options to Robert before he left for California.

Ray Cortinez from Education looked into other possibilities for you. He spoke with Marcia Hunt who provided me with information about a Spring Valley Elementary School where 16 students from a private high school come to tutor the elementary school students. The contact at the Elementary School is Loni Chin at 415-749-3535.

Please let me know if I can help with anything else. I will let Steve Cochrane at SFSU, or Marcia Hunt from the San Francisco School District know about the status of your visit unless you would like to make the arrangements yourself.

Dear Ms. Sanone:

On behalf of Robert Corrigan, President of San Francisco State University, and our students, faculty, staff and administration, I thank you for inviting the Community Involvement Center (CIC) to provide information and referrals to Dr. Webster, Assistant Secretary, Department of Education. Of the many possibilities for such referrals, we have selected a range of conveniently located and highly interesting volunteer sites which demonstrate the dedication of our university to improving the quality of life in our city.

I must acknowledge the CIC Staff of student volunteers and interns for the attention they have given to this matter. CIC is an eighteen year old service-learning program administered by some fifty students and enthusiasm is running high these days as more attention is paid to their work. The results we see here attest not only to their commitment, but also to the quality and effectiveness of their service and that of students throughout our campus.

We have summarized the data on one accompanying page. Three of the four sites selected involve work with school age children in instructional settings, covering a wide range in ages, cultural, socio-economic backgrounds and physical abilities. The programs are highly innovative in design and provide a rich example of how the university is positively impacting the community at many levels. Many of our values and priorities are apparent here: enabling under-represented youths to reach college, respecting and treasuring the environment, developing future leaders with a service ethic, encouraging volunteerism at all levels of education, and even being creative with abandoned military structures. You will note that two of these operations were actually started by SFSU, one by a student in the Community Involvement Center and another by a professor in the School of Education. We have included the fourth agency which deals with victims of AIDS because it represents a powerful concern and care of our university and fully engages a wide spectrum of our campus population in its volunteer activity. Please contact me when CIC can be of further assistance. Our FAX number is 415-338-0552.

Sincerely,

Steven H. Cochrane, SFSU Faculty
