Dear Mr. President:

I was glad to hear you are coming to New Jersey to talk about the importance of volunteer service. We have incorporated volunteer Service-Learning in our academic programs for almost five years. This is part of a comprehensive placement program. Linda Mass, Director of Service-Learning, one of the members of my staff, will hear you speak on Monday.

Community colleges offering volunteer programs can make a significant impact because we have such an extensive community base. I hope you have time to review the enclosed materials and welcome you to discuss how our program, recognized along with universities such as Stanford as outstanding, can show how this model can be replicated in colleges throughout the country.

Attached are information sheets about our program as well as specific volunteer positions. Feel free to contact me or Linda Mass if you have any other questions.

Sincerely,

Harvey Schmelter-Davis
Director, Career Services

SERVICE-LEARNING

WHAT IS SERVICE-LEARNING?

The Service-Learning program at Brookdale gives students the opportunity to use knowledge gained in the classroom in a community service project. Students learn about community needs and help others in a professional setting.

Service-Learning allows students to look critically at what they have learned in the context of what they are actually experiencing. As a result, study takes on new relevance and intellectual challenge.

The program has many roles. It can be:

1. An option for honors or high honors.
2. An integral part of a course.
3. An independent or personal project.
4. A resource for college clubs.
5. An advocate and informational contact for volunteerism.

WHY IS SERVICE-LEARNING FOR YOU?

While helping others as part of a learning experience, students and community members also derive significant practical benefits from taking part in Service-Learning. Participants are able to explore career possibilities in a non-threatening environment with a limited-hours requirement. Working with people in various settings allows participants to develop lifelong and relevant problem-solving skills. Service-Learning can also be an exploratory co-op experience.

Service-Learning helps students:

1. Reflect on their own background and culture in relation to others.
2. Gain competence through the practice of social and technical skills.

CONTACT:

Linda Mass, Director, Service-Learning
Career Services
(908) 224-2792

3. Increase independence by learning to manage study.

HOW DOES SERVICE-LEARNING WORK?

Students involved in a Service-Learning project generally give 30 volunteer hours over the course of a semester. The hours and time frame are flexible and determined jointly with teachers. The Service-Learning staff interviews students to determine their area of interest, time constraints and location desired. A volunteer project is always geared to a student's needs, convenience and level of experience.

In conjunction with their instructor, students:

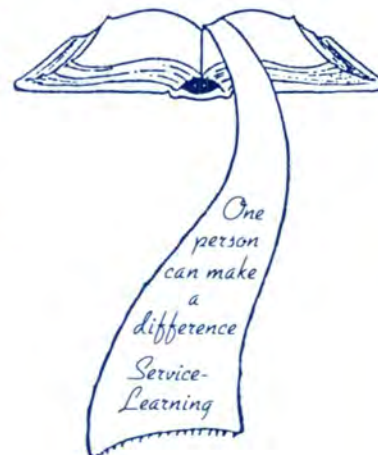

1. Shape the direction of their study.
2. Determine what work will be done.
3. Form a criterion for evaluation.

WHERE CAN SERVICE LEARNING TAKE YOU?

Service-Learning volunteers are currently working in projects which entail:

- ☐ Outreach and friendly visits to the elderly in nursing homes
- ☐ Working with the learning disabled and emotionally handicapped in school settings
- ☐ Working as a teacher's aide with children in day care, Head Start and latchkey programs
- ☐ Assisting the chronically mentally ill in community agencies and boarding homes.
- ☐ Recreational program assistance in community centers
- ☐ Participation in a program focused on substance abuse
- ☐ Functioning as a tutor and role model for youth in a correctional facility or program

A DEPARTMENT OF CAREER SERVICES AT BROOKDALE

A MESSAGE FROM THE DIRECTOR

HAPPY NEW YEAR!
January 1993

As we begin our second semester of the 1992-1993 school year, I am very excited about the growing attention and recognition placed on community service and its value to students from kindergarten through college, both statewide and nationally.

Close to home, the Service-Learning program at Brookdale Community College is busy taking on the challenge of mentor to Raritan Valley Community College in the establishment of their Service-Learning program. The staff at Raritan Valley Community College are anxious to begin placing students in community service activities that will enhance and strengthen their academic studies.

I would like to welcome the addition of Cheryl Lonon to the Service-Learning staff and look forward to building a stronger, more effective program with her help.

This fall we recruited over 300 students and placed 227 in volunteer service for high honor projects in courses such as sociology, psychology, communications, political science, and education. The feedback from the various community agencies that have benefitted from our students' service has been tremendous. There is much need in Monmouth County for individuals to become closely involved with their communities to begin to address the concerns of its citizens. Our students, through Service-Learning, are given the opportunity to participate and experience just how they can make a difference.

REFLECTIONS

"The people I met were a wonderful group. I learned much sociologically, and I learned more personally."

Sociology student, Red Bank Senior Center

"I think hands-on work stays with you a lot longer than a textbook chapter. I learned a great deal about politics and campaigning ..." Political Science student, Senator Kyrillos' office.

"I felt that I was helping the children, and I also got self-gratification." Sociology student, Bright Futures

"It gave me great insight and a better understanding about disadvantaged children."
Psychology student, Head Start

"It enhanced my learning by showing me how important our role is with our ocean and the earth."
Environmental Science student, American Littoral Society.

SERVICE-LEARNING

AT BROOKDALE

WHAT?

Service-Learning Program gives students the opportunity to use knowledge gained in the classroom in a community service project. Students learn about community needs and help others in a professional setting.

SERVICE LEARNING CAN BE:

An option for high honors.

An integral part of a course.

An independent or personal project.

An advocate and information contract for volunteerism.

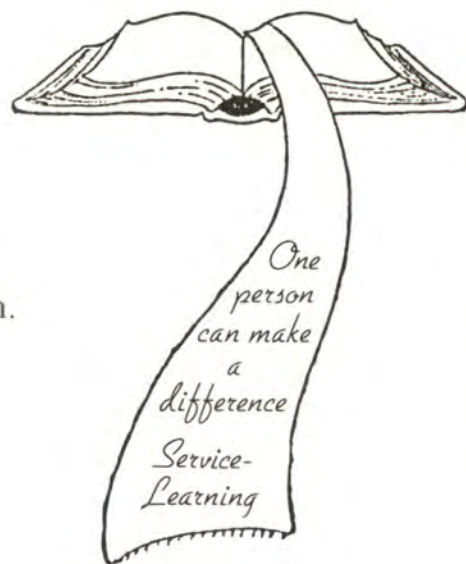

WHY?

Gain competence through the practice of social and technical skills.

Develop lifelong and relevant problem-solving skills.

Increase self-esteem by providing a valuable service to others.

Explore career possibilities.

WHAT FACULTY AND STUDENTS SAY:

[Frank Rother] (Faculty) — "Community Service-Learning experiences allow students to link classroom theory with experiential practice. Students become enthusiastic about learning through real life applications of techniques and models practiced in class. Student volunteers, clients, and society benefit from community service."

[Linda Servidio] (Faculty) — "There's no question that students learned a great deal. In addition, I felt that it taught students a level of accountability, making them responsible for part of their learning. As a result, they become active participants in the learning process, in effect, seeking learning."

[Jaspreet Singh] (Student) — "Any student, who will in the future work in this kind of program, can tell you it's one experience that is unforgettable."

[Annette Errico] (Student) — "The most enjoyable experience has been the hands-on experience and the people I met."

HOW?

Students generally give 30 volunteer hours over the semester. A volunteer project is always geared to a student's needs, convenience, and level of experience.

IN CONJUNCTION WITH THEIR INSTRUCTOR, STUDENTS:

Shape the direction of their study.

Determine what work will be done.

Form a criterion for evaluation.
