June 28, 1996

Dear Mr. President:

I write this letter with both gratitude and sadness. I am grateful for having had the honor of serving an appointment in your administration. However, I am saddened by having to leave your employ for familial reasons.

I am a lawyer from Californian who, like so many others, left his family to answer the call to public service. For the last three and a half years, I have served as Counselor and Senior Assistant for Counterproliferation Policy in the Office of the Secretary of Defense. Having worked on your campaign in 1992 as a member of Mrs. Clinton's staff and been part of your national security team during the past term, I cannot imagine any vocation that would be as personally and professionally rewarding as the responsibilities I have carried out over the last four years. I am proud of my public service, as well as my participation in the political process, and I want to thank you for allowing me to be a part of history.

I know you are extremely busy, but I would be forever grateful if you would be so kind as to personally sign the enclosed photograph taken at a White House Christmas function last year. I would be grateful to Mrs. Clinton if she would do the same. I hope I am not pushing my luck by asking for a separate picture of yourself signed for my twin brother Rick. But, frankly, he is a big supporter of yours and his love and encouragement allowed me to answer the call the last four years.

I am sorry that I will be returning soon to California. Rest assured that I will do whatever I can on your behalf in that crucial state during this pivotal time in your presidency. Again, I thank you for the opportunity to serve my country and I am proud that it was on your watch.

Always at your service,

Mickey Brandis

Dear Bill,

Attached is a letter from a DoD colleague of mine -- a political appointee who is leaving government. I would normally not forward something like this to you, but thought in this case you may want to sign the picture he enclosed (taken with you and Hillary) as a farewell pat-on-the-back since he worked on the campaign. Thanks.

Hope the G-7 turned out to your liking. Sorry about the news from Saudi Arabia. Hard to see how we could have done any more to protect the poor airmen in that apartment complex (where, by the way, brother Rod lived for awhile during Desert Storm). Your Mideast policy is superb, so I'm sure that the overall stability that exists in the region will prevail. Take care of yourself on the campaign trail.

Dear President Clinton:

"W-2" has been popular:
AFDC to enter employment, and characterization is a fraud. In the W-2 waiver application, Wisconsin discriminates any obligation to provide jobs, child care, health care, or any benefits whatsoever: "Notwithstanding fulfillment of the eligibility requirements for any component of Wisconsin Works, an individual is not entitled to services or benefits under Wisconsin Works."

receiving reals that this

W-2 is thus unlike any waiver previously approved by the Department of Health and Human Services. It provides no safety net for Wisconsin women and families walking the tightrope between self-sufficiency and poverty. Under W-2, the state may deny assistance to a family even if the parent is willing and able to work, but cannot find a job, or cannot afford the child care or transportation she needs to go to work. And any services or assistance Wisconsin chooses to provide may be terminated at any time -- not just at the end of the 60-month time limit.
Although HHS has allowed states to impose many new conditions on welfare eligibility, it has never allowed states to eliminate a guarantee of benefits for those who meet all the new requirements.

Wisconsin's full waiver application makes clear the many reasons W-2 must not be approved:

I. W-2 WILL NOT PROVIDE JOBS TO ALL PARENTS WILLING TO WORK

Under W-2, Wisconsin need not provide jobs for those who want to work but cannot find jobs on their own. W-2 requires that all current welfare recipients move into employment, but no one is assured placement into job activities. Although Wisconsin currently plans to create some state-sponsored jobs, the state is under no obligation to provide jobs, even if an applicant meets all eligibility requirements. Although Wisconsin currently enjoys low unemployment rates overall, that could change, leaving thousands of Wisconsin residents unable to find employment.

Certain areas of Wisconsin, such as Milwaukee County, already face high concentrations of AFDC recipients who will not be able to find employment locally. For example, in central city Milwaukee, over 18,000 currently unemployed AFDC recipients would join over 9,000 current job seekers in an area where employers reported about 2,000 full-time job openings in May 1995. Those welfare recipients who are willing and able to work, but for whom there is no job, would presumably be cut off the welfare rolls.

Under W-2, some women will undoubtedly receive state-sponsored jobs. But nothing in W-2 requires the state to maintain such jobs. And all families will lose all benefits -- and all state-sponsored employment -- after 60 months. After 60 months, even the children of women who have worked continuously in their job placements will not receive any assistance -- and women will be left to continue to raise their children with zero income.

II. W-2 PUNISHES WOMEN WHO HAVE BEEN DISCRIMINATED AGAINST

A woman who leaves a job because of sexual harassment or some other form of illegal sex discrimination and cannot find other employment immediately may be denied any help from the state. Under W-2, an applicant must meet certain non-financial criteria to be eligible for subsidized jobs. For example, the applicant must have made a good faith effort to look for a job and cannot have refused a bona fide offer of employment within 180 days (6 months) of application. But the terms "good faith effort" and "bona fide offer of employment" are undefined. There are no provisions exempting applicants who may have good cause, such as harassment or discriminatory treatment, to refuse an offer of employment or to leave a job.

III. W-2 ALLOWS EMPLOYERS TO DISCRIMINATE AGAINST W-2 WORKERS

Once women are employed through Wisconsin's W-2 program, especially in subsidized employment, community service, or W-2 transition positions, they may not be covered by fair employment laws such as the minimum wage laws, Family and Medical Leave Act and sexual harassment laws. Wisconsin gives employers license to discriminate against workers hired through the state's W-2 program, making W-2 employees second-class workers.

IV. W-2 HAS NO FAIR HEARING PROCESS FOR FAMILIES DENIED VITAL BENEFITS

W-2 participants have no fair hearing rights. Instead, W-2 provides that a participant may petition the local W-2 agency or the state to review the termination of benefits -- but the state is only required to review denial of benefits based on financial eligibility. Thus a woman whose benefits are terminated because she leaves a job placement because she is being sexually harassed or must care for a seriously ill child has no right to a fair hearing -- and once her benefits are terminated, her family will fall deeper into poverty.

V. W-2 PUTS BATTERED WOMEN AT GREATER RISK

By sanctioning women who fail to find and keep jobs, and by placing a "drop-dead" time limit on women who use W-2's services, Wisconsin fails to recognize that domestic abuse frequently creates major barriers to women seeking independence.

Domestic violence threatens the lives of many current AFDC recipients. Recent research by the Taylor Institute in Chicago shows women who enter the workforce risk triggering domestic violence. Studies show that 50-80 percent of current AFDC recipients in job training programs have experienced abuse -- and often abuse is designed to sabotage the woman's work. For example, the studies tell the following stories: a woman with a blackened eye is too embarrassed to go to a job interview, all-night arguments make another woman late to work every morning, and a woman who is stalked at work is discharged because her employer believes her presence risks workplace safety. Economic dependence is one of the tools that abusers use to keep women from leaving a violent situation: they will not "allow" a woman to work and earn her own money.

Under W-2, many women will experience increased violence when they begin to seek work. Yet women who fail to find or keep jobs because of abuse-related problems will be punished under W-2. They may not be eligible for subsidized jobs or other benefits if they have recently refused employment out of fear for their safety, or miss work because of injuries. They may be sanctioned if they lose state-subsidized jobs because of ongoing abuse. If sanctioned, they will receive no fair hearing in which to explain their case. And even if some battered women receive services under W-2, when the 60-month time limit has run, the most vulnerable women -- still unable to maintain employment because of abuse -- will lose all benefits and services, and remain economically dependent on their abuser. W-2 in effect dismantles a safety net that is particularly critical to the survival of battered women.

VI. W-2 WILL NOT PROVIDE THE TRAINING WOMEN NEED TO FIND JOBS THAT CAN SUPPORT THEIR FAMILIES

W-2 does not provide job training or education; it requires immediate placement in low-wage or make-work jobs. Most welfare recipients need education and training to qualify for jobs that would allow them to leave welfare permanently and become economically independent. Women who are able to participate in programs, for example, that provide skills for non-traditional jobs such as construction or the trades are able to get higher-paying jobs. However, W-2 not only fails to provide such opportunities, it may force some women to leave training programs they are now in to take low-wage, dead-end jobs.

According to Wisconsin's Legislative Fiscal Bureau, W-2 would only allow 3,500 parents to continue in post-secondary or vocational education through July 2007. Ten thousand parents now enrolled would lose the chance to complete their training.

VII. W-2 WILL NOT ASSURE THE CHILD CARE MOTHERS NEED TO BE ABLE TO WORK

Child care will not necessarily be available for working mothers under W-2. W-2 will dramatically increase the demand for child care by sending thousands of single parents into the workforce. But W-2 eliminates the current guarantee that working welfare recipients receive child care. W-2 will require all recipients, including those with incomes below poverty, to pay for child care. The co-payments rise sharply with income and will make child care unaffordable for many families. Many families will not be able to find any child care -- the Planning Council of Milwaukee says there are currently only six child care providers for every 100 infants.

Wisconsin will also lower child care standards -- and mothers will pay more even for this lower-quality child care. In an inadequate attempt to address the problem of child care shortages and unaffordable care, Wisconsin has created a new category of unlicensed, untrained child care known as "provisionally certified providers." However, according to the Center for Law and Social Policy, because of the new fee schedule W-2 creates, many working parents with income just above the poverty line would have to pay four times as much as they do now for this new lower quality care and up to 10 times as much as they do now for licensed care.

Mothers of infants as young as 12 weeks old will be required to leave home to work -- and will face the worst of the child care shortages. Child care shortages will be particularly bad for the youngest infants: 28% of all licensed child care centers in Milwaukee county do not accept infants under age one.

VIII. W-2 WILL ELIMINATE GUARANTEED HEALTH CARE COVERAGE FOR WOMEN AND THEIR CHILDREN

Mothers and children are not guaranteed health coverage under W-2. The W-2 proposal repeals the current Medicaid program and replaces it with the Wisconsin Works Health Plan, which eliminates the guarantee of health care for all people who meet the eligibility criteria.

Wisconsin is the first state to request elimination of the guarantee of health care coverage for welfare families and transitional coverage for families that leave the rolls. The Wisconsin Legislative Fiscal Bureau estimates that 30% of the families currently receiving Medicaid will lose their health care coverage. For example, under current federal law, all children under 19 years of age whose families are below the poverty line will be phased into Medicaid coverage. The Wisconsin plan eliminates this coverage for children 12 years old or older.

Working mothers and their children will lose insurance under W-2. Individuals whose employers offer health coverage will be automatically ineligible for the W-2 health plan, even if the coverage is unaffordable; employers may require their workers to pay up to one-half of the premium, as well as deductibles and co-payments. Families are also disqualified if they had access to employer health coverage in any of the 18 months prior to their application for W-2 health coverage. Thus a parent who switches jobs -- from an employer who offers health coverage to one who does not -- may make her family ineligible for the W-2 Health Plan.

Families eligible for the W-2 Health plan will be required to pay a premium for health care which will be unaffordable for many. Every participant in the W-2 Health Plan will be required to pay premiums -- even children and pregnant women. The premiums will start at $20, even for the poorest families.

IX. W-2 WILL MAKE WORKING FAMILIES POORER.

Mothers who comply fully with work placement requirements will be poorer than under current law. The minimum health and child care co-payments for a mother with two children will be $75 a month, even for a family receiving only $518 a month (52% of the federal poverty line). That family will be $57 worse off each month than under current AFDC rules.

In addition, families with a disabled parent will be made poorer. In families where a parent receives SSI, assistance will be cut to $77 per child, a 28% reduction in total assistance for a family with two children.

In general, as earnings increase, families will be worse off under W-2. As income rises, required co-payments for child care and medical coverage rise sharply, and other assistance is cut back. Some families face implicit marginal tax rates higher than 100 percent. The Wisconsin Legislative Fiscal Bureau concluded that a parent of two children in Milwaukee would have lower disposable income when earning $12 an hour ($11,852) than when earning $4.25 an hour ($15,179).

In conclusion, Wisconsin's waiver request dismantles the safety net women and their families need. It eliminates fundamental guarantees of assistance, health care, and fairness. It is inconsistent with the basic principles articulated by this Administration in its actions on waivers and proposed legislation. It must be denied.

Thank you for your careful consideration of these comments.

Sincerely,

Judy

Mr. President

Wisconsin's poorest families need the protection that a true safety provides. I fear W-2 tears it to shreds. I hope your staff negotiates modifications that will provide these families with the economic security they so sorely need to be personally responsible in their own lives.

Subject : A Proposal

Dear Mr. President:

As we have previously discussed, during the nearly three years of my involvement with the Federal structure I became increasingly convinced that there was at least $50B and possibly as much as $100B per year that could be saved simply by putting proven professional management practices in place. I also believe that this could be accomplished without cutting any Federal programs and without a forced RIF of any Federal workers. Not that these programs should not be revised - they should - but as you have been trying - reviewed in total and on their merits - which yields very different and much sounder results than reviews that have only cost cutting as an objective.

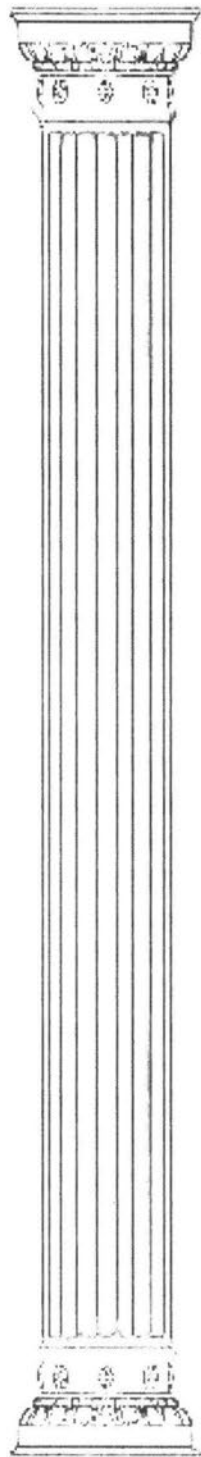

In the four months since I left I have continued to test this premise by reviewing the changes I made at G.S.A.; looking more closely at the recommendations and results of the National Performance Review; talking with a number of people back in Washington as well as testing public reaction via several speeches, newspaper articles as well as radio and television appearances, I am more convinced than I was while in Washington that not only are the savings real but that there is an approach that could begin to capture them while at the same time more clearly differentiating yourself - at least fiscally - from your opponents.

Recommendation

1) The National Performance Review has been universally praised as an excellent analysis of not only the operating problems of the Federal Government but also more importantly, because it identified hundreds of specific actions needed to make the necessary improvements. Although we have done a creditable job of achieving some of the changes and savings I believe that we have at least a 50% "yield loss" because of the implementation process. You will probably be told by most Washington people that the reason for the high yield loss is the nature of the political process and it's aversion to change compounded by the extra ordinarily divisive partisan atmosphere currently in the town. Although that obviously plays a role, I am convinced that the lions share of lost opportunity comes from the fact that the vast majority of the well intended men and women responsible for implementation action have little or no real experience or training in how to go about it. That includes Congressmen and Senators, Congressional and White House Staff, Cabinet Secretaries and career workers. There are very few anywhere who are trained and experienced in professional management tools and techniques. Although some will take it to be, this is not a criticism of these people. They are experts in their respective policy fields - but not in professional management of large complex organizations. I am not competent to develop health care, housing, or educational policy because I lack the background and expertise. Why do we assume that those who are policy experts automatically also somehow have the necessary professional management skills to implement those policies?

I speak with some confidence not only because of the significant changes and savings we achieved at the G.S.A. but also by the way we achieved them with quiet but active bipartisan support in congress and with significant support of the Federal workers inside the agency. These improvements were also not the result of any great flashes of genius or heroic efforts. They flowed from using some of the most basic tools I have come to know over 35 years in my profession i.e. management. There are hundreds of men and women who could achieve the same if we could just get them into the process.

Recommendation

1) Ask 5-10 recognized senior professional managers to check out this premise - Don't take my word for it - but don't react only to the Washington advice either. People I would suggest would include Paul Allaire, John Bryan, Lee Iacocca, Jack Welch, Bob Allen. (Or their best "change" implementing executives.) Ask them to come to Washington for 60 days for a feasibility study. Their task would be, using the N.P.R. as a basis, but not necessarily limited to that; determine if they believe it reasonable to expect that (major $50-$100B/year) could be saved simply through better professional management of the government. Their scope would not include reductions in Federal Programs as medicare, welfare, education, etc. per se. It would include better management of the government assets; improved operations; better use of technology as well as savings resulting from streamlined organizations. They would assume that sensible operational changes would be made by the administration and congress. Obviously this may or may not be true - but it will simplify the task of determining feasibility. The task should take not more than three months overall with the Vice President taking the active leadership role.

2) If they report back confirming what I believe that there are major potential savings, then I think it would be worth spending the considerable political capital necessary to mount a full scale broadly based policy initiative to bring professional management skills, experience and tools back into the Federal structure. If they do not see sizable savings - then the issue would be dropped - but I am sure the fact that you took the initiative in a nonpartisan manner would be well received. If, as I suspect the savings are available then you will be able not only to demonstrate a new technique for balancing the budget - but equally important - return the debate to the merit of the issues of health care, welfare, education, etc.. I hope this is useful and, as always, remain at your call.

Janice and I will be in Washington July 23 and 24 and hope to see you and Hillary. Carolyn Herbert just called to also invite us to stay at the White House on August 11th (our 40th wedding anniversary). Thank you so much for all your kindness.

Sincerely,

Roger W. Johnson

Regarding Russia's Disruptive Efforts in Southeast Asia and the Turkic Republics

July 5, 1996

His Excellency President Clinton
The White House
Washington D.C.

Dear President Clinton,

As I have already submitted to Your Eminence, Turkey is involved in putting up the only successful armed resistance to Yeltsin's "Communist Effort" to regain control of Southeast Asia's twelve Turkic Republics. They stretch from China to Turkey. They also transport five hundred million dollars worth of Chinese exports. This process takes half percent of the world's gold output to sustain the free world's economy. To continue the salvage operation, Turkey has set up strong protection against the enemies who seek to destroy the Turkish American Cooperation. I am now engaged in setting up the organization in Washington to provide the freedom of action and security that this Russian geo-strategic and financial thrust requires.

The Turkish Army, a force of 500,000 men NATO trained and NATO armed, is in constant vigil. They have not moved an inch. So much so that when the U.S. built her largest Atomic Base in Cypress, the opposition in Congress raised protests. The response was unanimous. It was a deliberate choice with Turkey's help we protected the oil of the Gulf in American hands.

The task of Turkey to keep a continuous control and vigil is extremely precarious as Russia under Yeltsin continuously thrusts in hit and run tactics in the two Turkic Republics to keep a breach open to weaken Turkey's continuous armed vigil. Washington and the Turkish Armed authorities have assessed the necessary measure for working together.

As is well known, Clinton is an expert in this region. He has won the world wide acclaim as "Arabist", a graduate of the renowned Oxford University School of Middle East Scholars who have kept the area safe from foreign and domestic turmoil.

Now a new element has crept in: Yeltsin has begun to trust into the domestic affairs of the Turkic Republics. According to special information from friends in the region, we know he is seeking to lay hands on the economics of these countries. But Turkey already braced her economy. New economic measures have braced up both her domestic and foreign resources.

At the same time she has been in touch with NATO friends who have all agreed to help. America has decided to back up her efforts and jointly they have set up the Turk-American Association in New York. They are now operating it jointly as the Turkish American Economic Association. The association is already involved with full force in the traditional Silk Road which carries the trade in the region and involves building factories to process cotton goods and to export the local wheat.

Your Excellency Mr. President when in 1863 the first American Puritan schools and Hospitals were established, a sense of kinship developed between Turkey and America. My grandfather the Mufti of Izmir gave full support to it. He sent my father to a Missionary schools. Later on invited American tobacco interests to partnerships with Turkish tobacco growers. Both my brother and I went to an American school in Izmir with general approval of our community. I worry, now, when a presidential candidate in Washington in an address to the Congress raises the gravest accusations against Turkish discriminations.

It is for this reason that I advocate great caution in the pursuit of the geo-strategic cooperation between our two countries. With Turkey they set in Washington the Turkish American Press Office. It is already functioning. Already it has been successfully closing all the gaps that Yeltsin has been building between them. But this entails continuous, urgent and diligent international support.

Mr. President you have already kept Turkish-American vigilance alive and alert. I know the world can rely on you on this, but I simply wanted to put you on the alert.

Ms. Debi Schiff

Dear Ms. Schiff:

As I mentioned in our telephone conversation, the heads of the Electric Bicycle Company would like to donate three of the new EV Warrior electric bicycles to the President and Mrs. Clinton and Chelsea for their pleasure and use at Camp David. If it avoids complications, the bicycles could be donated to Camp David. Either way, they will be given without qualifications in the hope that their use will contribute to the rustic serenity of the First Family's retreat.

This American-designed EV Warrior is the world's first mass-produced electric vehicle. It is quiet and non-polluting and has been called the leading edge of the electric revolution in transportation. The rider can pedal the six-speed bicycle, use the motor, or combine the two. Whatever one does, it's both enjoyable and healthy exercise.

The EV Warrior was created by Dr. Malcolm Currie, formerly Undersecretary of Defense and CEO of Hughes Aircraft Co., and Malcolm Bricklin, an automobile industry entrepreneur.

I am certain that the First Family and visitors to Camp David during President Clinton's current and second term will find that the EV Warrior is a lot of fun to ride.

I'll call shortly so you can advise me of the next step and tell me to whose attention the bicycles should be delivered at Camp David.

Sincerely,

Warren Cowan

THE DREAM OF MANY IS FINALLY REALIZED

CLEAN, ENVIRONMENTALLY RESPONSIBLE TRANSPORTATION IS NOW AVAILABLE THANKS TO THE EV WARRIOR'S TRANSFER OF ELECTRIC PROPULSION INNOVATION TO MASS MARKET UTILIZATION.

The spirited EV Warrior promotes a healthier lifestyle and encourages you to exercise and enjoy the great outdoors. Men's Journal, while quoting the President of the Electric Bicycle Company, stated "When you're driving in a car with the windows up, you don't care about the environment because you're all sealed off. But on the EV Warrior, it's like you're inside the outside."

Not only is the EV Warrior hands on fun for weekend recreation, but it is also the newest and coolest way to get around town for those short hops and quick spins around the neighborhood. The EV Warrior represents significant advancements in bicycle styling, design, and electric propulsion engineering. Its performance is world-class. That's why BusinessWeek has named it one of "America's Best New Products of the Year."

There's no doubt history will look at the launch of the EV Warrior as the first major step in the evolution of the electric transportation revolution.

THE PERFORMANCE ACHIEVED IS DISTINCTIVE AND CONVINCING

THE EV WARRIOR'S ELECTRONIC COMMAND CENTER TRANSLATES YOUR DESIRES INTO AN EXHILARATING EXPERIENCE.

A sophisticated solid state controller is the electronic brain and function center for the EV Warrior. Its primary purpose is to direct the electrical power from the EV Warrior's batteries to its motors, so you experience effortless, smooth acceleration and an amazing biofeedback phenomenon.

Imagine being able to mentally and physically interact with your EV Warrior in a way that regulates how efficiently it operates. Imagine approaching an incline and having no fear of getting to the top. Imagine riding at night knowing the EV Warrior lighting system and reflector package are providing you with a degree of safety and visibility unequalled by any other bicycle in the world.

There's magic in the unparalleled performance of the EV Warrior. It travels up to 15 miles on a single charge...further with pedaling; and up to 20 mph without pedaling. People of all ages from all walks of life can now gain confidence in the future of electric vehicles because of the success of the EV Warrior.

Ride It. Enjoy It. Feel the excitement and user friendliness of its design and functions. Without a doubt, the EV Warrior's performance and practical benefits identify it as one of the most meaningful product introductions in transportation history.

SAFETY IS OUR TOP PRIORITY

EXPERTS FROM THE AEROSPACE, AUTOMOTIVE, AND BICYCLING MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES HAVE CONTRIBUTED TO THE EV WARRIOR'S DESIGN, ENGINEERING, AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.

The EV Warrior establishes new industry standards for safety and reliability. That's why, before its introduction, the EV Warrior was rigorously tested, refined, and designed to meet the requirements of the Federal Department of Transportation (DOT) and the Consumer Products Safety Commission.

These important standards address the manufacturing quality and individual performance of the: headlamp, tail lamp, brake lamp, license plate lamp, tires and rims, horn, reflectors on the front, sides and rear, the supplemental motor stop control, rear view mirror, as well as including a Vehicle Identification Number (VIN).

Strict attention has been paid to these and other very stringent government safety regulations so you can have confidence in the dependability and road worthiness of the EV Warrior — day after day, ride after ride.

THERE'S NO OTHER

THE SECRET TO THE EV WARRIOR'S AND IMPRESSIVE PERFORMANCE OF ITS ENERGY EFFICIENT

For they are not only riding the next generation of bicycles, but are driving the first generation of electric vehicles. These low maintenance, inexpensive to operate vehicles are leading the way to less pollution, less congestion, and a healthier lifestyle for the entire world.

The EV Warrior is an impressive addition to anyone's transportation choices. Its impact on the critical ecological challenges facing the world will be historic.
