MEMORANDUM FOR TODD STERN

FROM: KATHY WALLMAN

SUBJECT: Ellen Roy's Request to Participate in the Global Climate Change Conference

The attached letter is Ellen Roy's request to participate in the White House Global Climate Change Conference. As you can see, Ellen not only works for an energy corporation, but is an active participant in electricity industry groups. We have been working closely with her on electricity restructuring in her capacity as Vice Chair of the Electric Power Supply Association. I think it would be beneficial for Ellen to be involved and to include her in the conference.

Thanks.

Re: White House Summit on Global Climate Change

Dear Ms. Wallman:

I am writing to confirm my strong interest in actively participating in the White House Global Climate Change Conference to be held in Washington on October 6, 1997. As a senior executive in, and co-owner of, one of the first independent power producers in the United States, I am vitally interested in the issues likely to be raised during the Summit as well as the process proposed for addressing such issues.

During the past decade, I have been an industry leader involved in the numerous political and legislative issues concerning the electric and energy industries. In particular, I have been Chair of the non-utility electric generators industry association, The National Independent Energy Producers and am presently a Vice Chair of the successor organization, Electric Power Supply Association (EPSA), as well as the Chair of the EPSA Legislative Committee. In addition, I am a founding member of the Clean Competition Coalition (CCC), whose primary purpose is to unite sound environmental policies with the emerging competitive electric generation markets. At CCC, I have worked closely with leading environmental groups such as the NRDC and the Clean Air Task Force, to formulate joint policies that both the environmental community and our industry can support. Also, I currently serve on the Coal Industry Advisory Board (CIAB) at the International Energy Agency (IEA). The CIAB is a group of the leading global energy and electrical companies which undertake industry research and analyze policy options on issues such as global climate change.

In these roles and as a member of the business community generally, I have been early and ardent supporter of policies intended to be protective of human health and the environment, and which also foster competitive business conditions. My company's commitment to such policies is demonstrated by our business investments. For example, an affiliate of IEC made a more than $200,000,000 investment in a recycled pulp mill facility which uses state-of-the-art, environmentally friendly materials and processes. All of IEC's baseload electric power generation facilities are fueled by natural gas and include highly efficient co-generation activities. Indeed, IEC owns the largest $CO_2$ recovery system associated with a co-generation facility in the United States.

Given this background, I am confident that my participation in the upcoming White House Global Climate Conference would add perspective and experience from a unique vantage point. Your assistance in assuring that I am considered for participation in the October 6, conference in Washington, would be greatly appreciated. Please do not hesitate to contact me, or Walter Sczudlo in our Washington, D.C. office, if you have any questions. Thank you in advance for your consideration and assistance.

Sincerely,

INTERCONTINENTAL ENERGY CORPORATION

Ellen Roy
Senior Vice President

Re: Climate Change Debate

As you may know, we have been working hard in Ithaca preparing materials for labor that will be ready by October 6 or earlier. While our particular activity relates to very specific issues, I wanted to share with you briefly some thoughts about the general political direction of the climate change discussion.

1) Focus on Hope, Growth, Community and Opportunity

In thinking about the President's response to this issue I had a bad flashback to the energy crisis and Jimmy Carter with his cardigan sweater in the famous "malaise" speech surrounding the energy crisis. The issue is not whether President Carter was right or wrong—what is indisputable is that was a political disaster. I am worried that a chicken little approach to climate change could be a Carter redux.

A linear position would be to identify the consequences of failure (which are real) and raise the possibilities of their dire consequences. An analysis looks at coal, utilities, transport and says drive a nail through these and the problem is solved. Raise the specter of disastrous consequences locally and globally and ask Americans to suck in some of the pain to avoid the possibility of a longer range disaster. My feeling is that this is a sure route to political disaster and also sets the issue back a long ways. In an America where a long range perspective is managing the next mortgage or credit card bill, it just doesn't fly. Americans do not like to hear doom and gloom scenarios. President Clinton, like President Reagan, stimulated the American people not with definitive statistics but with a belief in hope, growth and opportunity.

It is in the application of hope, growth, community and opportunity that the President can come out a winner. Where he can occupy the high ground fighting for the American way of life in the debate ahead. I suggest something along the following in the speech:

We Americans are people who have faced great challenges in the past. By coming together, we have overcome them and made our country even greater. The crisis of global climate change is just such a crisis. To head off disastrous climate change the century ahead must be one of profound change. We will need energy to fuel our economy-- but the way we do it must change. We need transportation to move people and goods from one place to another-- but the way we do it must change. We will need the products of American industry both here and abroad-- but the way we produce things must change. If we think back less than a century ago, there was no automobile industry or telecommunications industry to speak of. As we face the next century, Americans as a people have the imagination and determination to change in ways that creates new opportunities, new jobs, better communities and a renewed environment. Change is inevitable-- the question is how we address it-- by hunkering down or providing leadership.

We can emerge from this challenge with a renewed America; one which is healthier and more economically sound; where the quality of living standards can increase while we help others in the world to meet their basic needs and achieve their aspirations. If we shirk from this challenge; if we listen to the new voices of isolationism and prevaricators, we all will be the worse off. We face a new global challenge that is more difficult to see than those which caused us to defend our nation at other times. It occurs gradually but all the more insidiously. If we act now, we can create new opportunities; later may be too late.

I ask each and every American to be part of the solution. There is no magic technological wand or instant policy that can substitute for our willingness to all be part of a solution—in small ways and big we can all make a contribution. I ask each and very American workplace to join in this challenge. In Kyoto, we are willing to set targets and timetables which we hope to beat, not excuse. I ask you to look to your households—what chemicals you use, what you buy, what kinds of transportation you use and to ask whether in some way you can make a contribution. While each person's piece may seem small. When it adds it up as a great nation then it is a great contribution.

I call on every company, every government agency, indeed every workplace to examine itself closely and see what can be done to make a difference. Can you use processes that conserve energy, eliminate emissions, reduce the number of trips and conserve precious resources? We see this not as a sacrifice but a way to increase the productivity of America's workplaces that will pay off in greater markets and higher wages. When each workplace focuses on this issue, taken together The Department of Energy has prepared a booklet for each workplace on how to conduct eco-audits that looks at the process of what we use, how we use it and where it goes to reduce impact on the environment and to greatly improve resource efficiency.

The shift from fossil fuel can hurt certain companies and workers without question as it will help others to grow. For example, the coal miners of our country have worked hard at dangerous work and powered the growth of a mighty American economy. During war time, coal miners redoubled their efforts to help our country. We honor their dedication and service. This shift is not their fault but it is their problem. For those who are able to be retrained then assistance will be available to help those who can shift to other jobs in their local area and beyond. For those who are close to retirement or are physically unable to adjust to other jobs we will provide, out of the proceeds of permits, income and retirement support. We will also continue to look for new ways to burn coal much more efficiently and capture the $CO_2$. While reducing coal's contribution to global warming will be a part of our strategy, it is not being shut down. There will be time for adjustments.

I call on each community to step up to the challenge as well by seeking new pathways that can make a difference. Look to new forms of energy use, transportation systems, service delivery, zoning and building requirements that have a lighter footprint on the planet. Seek ways to increase our greenspace and reuse exisiting developed land including reclaiming brownfields productively. Communities dependent on industries that contribute to global warming will be hardest hit. We will work with them to diversify their economic base and receive priority in locations of new cleaner approaches.

By such an approach, the President takes the high road and promotes opportunity. He provides a softer glide path for affected industries and economic sectors and provides a broader framework for environmental sustainability that relying on new campaigns for new specific threats. By engaging everyone, those who need to do the most are not as isolated and defensive. It also addresses other issues at the same time of global competitiveness, waste management and productivity growth.

2) Link climate change explicitly to environmental values and to sustainable jobs, communities and environment.

While technically one can make a plausible argument for the separation of sustainability, climate change and environment, this is politically a dangerous route. Core environmentalism is a value that now runs deep across the American political spectrum especially among the young. We could conceivably deal with the issue as a narrow construction of concentrations of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases in the atmosphere, this has very little broad appeal. The constituency for climate change pain is far less than the constituency for a better environment. Opponents can begin to argue on the minutia and methodology. The President needs to occupy the high ground around a national consensus on environmental protection, moving American towards a renewed prosperity in the 21st century and a concern about future generations. Let others argue the science.

As I stated earlier, a focus on the new industries and jobs to be created, preparing for the 21st century, healthier and safer living, and renewed communities all provide a positive focus on the issue. Talk more about what good the change can do for us than the downside consequences.

Though I attended the Earth Summit +5 as the workers and their unions delegate, since I am not formally a president of a union, I cannot be included as a part of the AFL-CIO participants in the October 6 meeting. I would welcome your support for attendance at the October 6 event. I am of course also glad to meet and work with you in any way you might wish prior to the event and beyond.

With best wishes for the weeks ahead.
