The Thelonious Monk Institute of Jazz, a non-profit education organization, offers the world's most promising young musicians college level training by America's jazz masters and presents public school-based jazz education programs for students around the world. Over the past eleven years, the Institute has reached millions of young people living in the inner city, as well as college students, educators, and the general public, helping them develop an understanding and appreciation of jazz music.

Proceeds from Nissan Presents A Celebration of America's Music will provide support to two programs of the Thelonious Monk Institute of Jazz, Jazz Sports D.C. and the Jazz In The Classroom series. Jazz Sports brings jazz education to hundreds of students from seven D.C. public schools. Music instruction is provided after school along with individual and ensemble instrument lessons. This past year, 12 music coaches provided over 200 hours of music instruction. Additionally, the students performed at six Wizards' games entertaining over 100,000 fans. The Jazz In The Classroom program offers students throughout the Washington, D.C. area an opportunity to study with major jazz masters through assembly programs, master classes, and workshops.

Nissan Presents A Celebration of America's Music will be broadcast on the ABC Television Network on Saturday, December 27.

THIRTY YEARS
OF EXCELLENCE
IN PUBLIC

THE PUBLIC BROADCASTING ACT

In 1967, Congress passed the Public Broadcasting Act and President Lyndon Johnson signed it into law. This landmark legislation created a public-private partnership that has brought programming and education services to a universal American audience for three decades. From Sesame Street to All Things Considered, public broadcasting uses the public airwaves to serve the public interest.

Please join us in recognizing Congress for its support of public broadcasting and thanking those Members of Congress who have been with us from the beginning.
