DAVID ROCKEFELLER Chairman of the Board

Dr. Paul W. McCracken
Chairman, Council of Economic Advisers

Dear Paul:

I am writing to confirm to you officially an invitation to dine with me in New York on Tuesday, July 21. My office has been in touch with yours to discuss this invitation, and to determine a mutually agreeable date. I understand that for the moment at least your calendar appears to be free at that time, and I hope very much that you will be able to accept.

The idea for such a dinner was suggested to me by the President the last time we met two or three weeks ago. The President indicated that he hoped you would keep in very close touch with the New York and financial business community and whether I would arrange such a meeting. I told him that I felt sure that you already have a great many friends in the business community here, but that nothing would give me more pleasure than to have an excuse to invite you to dinner. I have suggested a date some distance in the future as I believe you were recently here for a somewhat similar dinner which I unfortunately was unable to attend.

If the idea of the dinner is agreeable to you and July 21 is convenient, I would appreciate your letting me know about how large an affair you would like and the type of person you would like to see. If you have any specific suggestions, please let me know.

Looking forward to hearing from you and with best regards,

Sincerely,
