June 8, 1933

My dear Mr. President:

Your letter dated June 5, 1933 signed by your PRIVATE SECRETARY (M. A. Le Hand) I received yesterday morning. Your Secretary calls my WORLD PEACE PARAGRAPH a "poem". It is a PARAGRAPH in a letter regarding a WORLD PEACE PLAN dated 12/8/16 that I wrote to the late Woodrow Wilson while President. He received it just before Christmas. Seven (7) weeks after receiving it President Wilson called the late Ex-President Taft to Washington for a Conference. That was the time THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS was born. I say,--- My plan is brotherly love. Not the World Police Force William H. Taft is advocating. One can, I believe, do more thru brotherly love than thru force.

I have been working for WORLD PEACE continuously during the past eighteen (18) years. I am going to devote the balance of my life for PEACE, and am going to organize my WORLD PEACE PLAN that I sent you a COPY of several weeks ago as soon as possible. Will hold an INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE at Washington, D. C. every year.

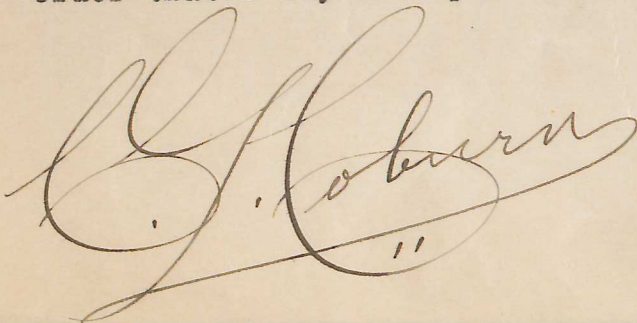

I AM NOT A PAFICIST. The United States must be prepared until the WORLD is educated for PEACE. That is the reason I became so inspired to bring PEACE thruout the WORLD that I threw my hat in the "ring" for the Presidency of the U. S. five (5) years ago while living in Los Angeles, California. I got a lot of publicity that I wont take time to tell you at this time. I did not attend either convention for certain reasons. Nearly two (2) years ago I threw my hat in the "ring" again and am to keep on throwing it in as long as I live. I expect to be President of the U. S. some day. And by the way,--- I expect to be the NEXT President. As soon as I am inaugurated I shall put Jesus Christ at the helm of this nation of ours. He is the only one who can save this nation. He is the only one who can save the WORLD. YOU can have my permission to go ahead NOW and put Him at the helm at once. It is not necessary to wait for me. Free Speech in the Legion

May 24, 1933.

To the New York Herald Tribune:
Your correspondent Gustave Hansen says inter alia: "It has been said that the American Legion is in politics. The best answer to this charge is that the American veterans must be represented by some organization or individuals who will present their claims to the proper governmental authorities." Further on he says: "Meanwhile let the Legion take care of their own affairs without outside criticism."

This would be all very well if the claims of the veterans were represented and presented in an honest, open fashion, duly put before the whole country. For it is the nation as a whole which is asked to pay for their claims, many of which are in no sense justifiable, being for injuries and disabilities resulting not from war services, directly or indirectly, but from other causes in no way connected with their army service. The Anthony Wayne Post has made it abundantly clear that they stand solidly for adequate compensation to veterans who are honestly deserving of such.

Billions have been spent on the veterans for hospitalization, compensation and other just claims. Many millions for unjust claims. If there are other veterans whose just claims have been ignored, they should be recognized. But maintaining a paid lobby in Washington, as the Legion has been doing, is not the way that such claims should be presented. It was against this paid lobby in Washington that the Anthony Wayne Post and the disfranchised Post of New York State were protesting. The Legion is laying itself open to criticism by suppressing the

with what fervid oratory and indignation Mr. Taylor protested against the efforts of a certain Senator or Senators to secure a 10 per cent horizontal cut in veterans' appropriations, and his strenuous efforts to prevent the passage of any such recommendation. Mr. Taylor's protest, you will recall, was based upon the dastardly injustice that the horizontal cut would mean to the battle-scarred veteran or charters of these posts and by wishing to take away their power of placing the lobby issue before the taxpayers of the country.

This is neither more nor less than suppressing the right of free speech which these posts claim. These heads of the Legion wish to make it an autocracy, which is against the fundamental principles on which the American Legion was founded. In the Legion an enlisted man is as good as an officer, his voice carries as much weight, his vote counts for as much, but the heads of the Legion wish to suppress the voices of the Legion posts when they don't happen to fall in with the ideas of those at the top. Why should these independent posts not have their own ideas and why should not they voice them so long as they do not violate the constitution under which they operate and the laws of the country wherein they exist?

Why should they not appeal to those thousands of veterans outside of the Legion and to the people of the country who never were eligible to join the Legion? Are not they, as well as the Legion members, a part and a very large part of the taxpayers of the country out of whose pockets the bonus claims of the Legion are to be paid—if they are to be paid at all? Does not the taxing power of the whole nation rest with the whole nation? Then why should not the true facts presented to it by the Legion posts which have the courage to state the truth?

OSWALD CHEW,
Member Anthony Wayne Post.

compel a revision of the treaties.

In the last analysis the French position is that, since Germany is in moral rebellion against the Versailles Treaty, what counts is not what Germany says she will do about frontiers but what Germany can do about them. The disarmament of France would enable Germany to do a great deal. Therefore, France cannot disarm unless a dependable substitute is provided for the military strength which France is asked to give up.

It is obvious that no such substitute is to be found in the Kellogg Pact or in the machinery for conciliation set up at Geneva. All these pledges of peace, which are backed only by public opinion, do not, as the French see it, meet the issue, which is: What is to be done if Germany, made powerful by having equal armaments, follows the precedent set by Japan, and on the ground of national necessity and with a conviction of moral right, moves to rectify the frontiers? To put this question is in effect to ask Great Britain and the United States what they are prepared to do to prevent the status quo from being disturbed by force. On the answers which Britain and America give to France depends the amount of disarmament to which France will consent. For the French, it must always be remembered, have no illusions about the frontiers of Versailles. They know they were imposed by force. They believe that only by force can they be maintained. They are convinced that in this generation the choice for Europe lies between peace on the existing frontiers and another European convulsion.

The problem of European disarmament is, therefore, dependent upon the guaranties which Great Britain and the United States are prepared to tain peace. It now becomes necessary for Great Britain to say what she will actually do to make collective action successful.

Before Great Britain can do that she is bound to examine this American offer very closely in order to see whether it will bind Congress, will bind succeeding Administrations, and has the support of permanent American opinion. There is no certainty on any of these points, and the British are not, I should suppose, likely to commit themselves very far until they have carefully explored the nature of the American commitment. Even when they have done that, they may still, as Mr. Justice Holmes has said, have to try to make correct guesses on insufficient evidence.

It is perhaps somewhat misleading to look immediately for "a decisive step in general disarmament," and perhaps unfortunate to raise expectations of that kind. The hard fundamentals of the problem cannot easily be dissipated. The European frontiers are what they are. The victorious powers will not consent now to amend them; the vanquished will not really consent to abide by them. Promises to keep the peace depend, therefore, ultimately upon the power to enforce the peace. That power is now held by France and her allies. The reduction of that power can come only by substituting the power that Britain alone can supply. How far Britain will supply it depends upon her own national policy reviewed in the light of our offer not to interfere. And our offer depends upon the evolution of American opinion. The world is at a point where it is dealing not with diplomatic abstractions, but with substantial differences of national interest.

The matter is so complicated that

Claude B. Crane
3024 White Ave.
Kansas City, Mo.

An open letter to Commander Louis A. Johnson, American Legion Headquarters, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Nothing in your New York City radio address of April 29, last, interested me as much as its title—namely, "The American Legion in Service of God and Country." Unfortunately for my faith in and indorsement of your statements, I happened to be present at the subsequent May 4 meeting of the National Executive Committee in Indianapolis, and thus was able to hear in full the remarkable address of the Legion's chief lobbyist in Washington, Mr. John Thomas Taylor. He spoke, you will remember, for over an hour, and the subject matter of his address was the relation of his activities in Washington in behalf of the Legion in the period from about December 1, 1932, to April 15, 1933, the period in which President Roosevelt's interest in economy in veterans' legislation was pronounced and effective.

You will remember, of course, the free and unrestricted way in which he referred to the Congressmen and Senators whom he had persuaded to listen to the Legion's voice, and of his tireless and mostly successful efforts to bring these men under control. You will also remember his references to Congressman McDuffie, of Alabama, whom he indicated it was very difficult or impossible to bring into line, and you will further remember his recommendation of this Congressman to the Legion committeeman from Alabama, sitting in front of him, for the care and attention of the Alabama Legionnaires when Mr. McDuffie comes up for re-election to the House.

I am sure you will further recall with what fervid oratory and indignation Mr. Taylor protested against the efforts of a certain Senator or Senators to secure a 10 per cent horizontal cut in veterans' appropriations, and his strenuous efforts to prevent the passage of any such recommendation. Mr. Taylor's protest, you will recall, was based upon the dastardly injustice that the horizontal cut would mean to the battle-scarred veteran or the helplessly injured ex-soldier. Far be it from us to think of any legislation that would for one moment work against the interests of our disabled comrades! And then I am sure you will further remember that perhaps ten minutes later in this same address the same Mr. Taylor declared with equal fervor that he and his fellow lobbyists had recommended, after the lobby was apparently decisively beaten by an aroused public opinion, a 25 per cent horizontal cut, in which statement the same Mr. Taylor was strangely silent about what this would do to the battle-scarred veterans and other helpless and disabled comrades.

And finally, I am sure you will remember that in giving the history of the whole procedure of the Legion's lobby through these exciting days, the same Mr. Taylor turned occasionally to where you were sitting and told the comrades that he had been in constant touch with you over the wire or telephone and that you had either advised or completely indorsed these activities, the chief purpose of which was to defeat the President's economy bill and such later legislation as may have been proposed in support of it. This seemed rather strange, as it also was during these exciting days that the call went out over your signature for every Legion post to support the President in his economy program.

In view of all this, which you will remember was heard by a good many visitors, not members of the National Executive Committee and not excluded from the room by any declaration of an executive session of this committee, I, as a veteran, and for nearly twelve years a member of the American Legion and for nearly two years until recently commander of Anthony Wayne Post No. 418 of the Legion, and for thirteen years a clergyman of the Protestant Episcopal Church, desire to ask you please to name and describe the "God and country" in whose "service," under these conditions, you believe the American Legion to be.

ment seems to me to be a and continued consideration. For if it is true that the principal motive at work today is fear rather than hope and confidence, every one ought to have the gravest doubts about the future of the present rally.

How does one determine what motive actuates millions of peoples in the endless number of transactions which are carried on every day? Those who say that fear is the motive are relying, it seems to me, upon two forms of evidence. They have read in the books that when a government starts to tinker with the currency it is on the road to ruin, that depreciated money almost inevitably becomes worthless, that inflation is uncontrollable, and that therefore, while fools rejoice in the early stages, wise men see and dread the impending catastrophe.
Being thoroughly convinced that this is the revealed truth in monetary matters, they themselves feel fear and assume that fear must be pervading all the prudent men everywhere.

They may be right. But after all they are relying upon the evidence first of a theory which is devoutly held by many economists but by no means by all economists, and then of their own feelings under the influence of that theory. Is it not possible to find some kind of evidence which is less theoretical and less subjective, evidence which represents the practical judgment of a large cross-section of the most prudent investors in the land?

I think such evidence exists. It is to be found, I believe, in the bond market. By all orthodox theorizing, if fear of inflation is the dominant influence, men ought to be selling bonds and transforming the proceeds into equities. A rising bond market inspired by fear of inflation is an absurdity. For bonds are bought by the most gold embargo, the amendment, the repeal of the gold clause, and what not, they have risen from 97.78 to 103.82. Are the hard-boiled bankers and the careful investors who buy the highest grade bonds crazy? Or is it possible that they do not take seriously the fears which are instilled into them by the most reputable and distinguished financial writers?

Nothing is further from my mind
than to argue that the so-called currency tinkering is the sole or even the main cause of the present recovery. I do not know what is the sole cause or the main cause, and I never met any one who got any further than to think that he thought he knew. But I do think it is plain that fear cannot be the chief motive at work, and that it is impossible to explain the strength of the bond market except in terms of hope and confidence for the future.

Nor do I wish to give the impression that the future is assured or that the management of a monetary system is not a difficult and tricky business. The orthodox writers are quite right in their sense that we are on an uncharted sea, and they ought never to relax their vigilance or to cease pointing out the difficulties and the dangers. But they would be ever so much more useful and influential if only they would make up their minds to accept the fact that thus far events have not proceeded according to their preconceived theories.
For then they could bring their experience and knowledge to bear upon the real problems which the Administration and the banking system have to deal with, which is how to carry through successfully the experiment which is under way.

Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt
The White House
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Roosevelt:

I enclose two clippings from the New York Herald Tribune relative to the American Legion. It seems to me you ought to know their contents. The Anthony Wayne Post is making a noble fight for justice to the taxpayers of the country, as well as for its own re-instatement. I believe that in the end we will win.

May I also suggest that the best way to settle the war debt problem, as regards the Allies, is to invoke the legal maxim of set-off or counter claim for war services rendered by those four nations. It will save the face of the Allies, and it will save the face of the United States in the eyes of Europe. In their opinion, and in mine, we need a thorough purifying, and you have already done much in this line.

While you were still Governor of New York, I sent you my book "The Stroke of the Moment". Thinking you may have lost or mislaid it, I am sending you another copy, which you might refer to the proper persons. I recommend the following articles in it to be read:

Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt

Allow me please, at this time, to offer to you my services, if at any time you may think I can be of service to you or to my country. This is in no sense a bid for a job. Fortunately, I do not need one. But it will greatly relieve my conscience to have made this offer.

Briefly, my qualifications are:

Graduate, Harvard, A.B. 1903
Member of Philadelphia Bar
Delegate on Commission for Relief
in Belgium
Volunteer American Field Service
Liaison Officer attached to various French Staffs from A.E.F.
President, Alliance Francaise of Philadelphia
President, Association Franco-Americaine
President, Franco-American Institute of Science.
I speak, read, and write French fluently.

If the Allied nations were requested to set out their claims for an abatement of the war debts, I feel they could do so on the basis of war services rendered in the form of saving the United States billions of dollars, and hundreds of thousands of lives during the time after America's declaration of war. The fact that Germany no longer pays reparations has in fact nothing to do with the question. But the fact that on the theory of implied contracts we tacitly accepted the services of the Allies for what they were worth has everything to do with the question.

After all, what does it matter if Congress does not agree?

Franklin D. Roosevelt,
Washington, D. C.

Honorable President:

From the confidence I have in the attitude of our President, and am already the proud possessor of two answers to former letters addressed to you, one when you were Governor of New York (under date 7/28/32) the other (1/31/33) I am taking this liberty to express an idea which has imbedded itself into my being so strongly that I feel it must be given some outlet in a proper channel, as it might hold a thought for the general good. It is original with me, whether or not it is a general thought I will leave to your good self, or as to whether it might be a unit toward working it out into a practical working idea, I will leave to your consideration, and am thanking you now for any consideration you might be able to give it, and in due time, whatever might be your thought toward it.

I am, or was a Printer, Engraver and Artist, or enough of these three efforts to produce a very fair business in the past Today: I will have to admit I'm accepting assistance, having lost presses and all the last few years, although in no sense does this mean discouragement, as since your taking your seat there is a big improvement in confidence, and while I'm busy, I'm not gaining fast enough to show any improvement financially, I know its coming under your management, for we all agree you have really put yourself in class with the super-man, and still staying with us, as the average man, so we all feel we cant lose, unless you lose, and we have that confidence that you are not the losing kind.

As a thought before getting onto the subject I am to address you on. I am a publisher (was) of Cranes Computing Stock Charts for the executive, estimator, printer and Allied Trades. Sells for $3.50 per copy. It took me two years in spare time to figure some 9000 problems to tell How Many Out of the First Stock Sheet so any 12 year old child would be able to figure accurately any Paper Stock Problem, the first essential step, before any printing job can be figured. I am taking the liberty of enclosing you a copy of this work, and am going to ask, if you wont let me take advantage of "Publishers Courtesy" and have a copy sent me of your new work "Looking Forward". I have tried now, at least four months to possess a copy of this, but under my present strain am unable to make it. and assure you the work will be much more appreciated by me, than my work will be by you, as I fully realize you may not be directly interested in any of the Allied Trades. I sincerely trust you may deem it advisable to grant my wish, which will be treasured in strictest confidence.

Respectfully yours

From: Claude B. Crane
3024 White Ave
Kansas City, Mo.

Having been caught with other countless thousands in the stream of depression, and even with a kind government behind us have felt the sting of non-independence too keenly, but without allowing room for thought of discouragement have plodded slowly along as in a swift rapids, where speed was impossible, the whole thought being to hold on.

From this my thought evolved, not for myself, but million and many others.

Why not plan an emergency relief (not calling it a tax), as the public would not be obliged to pay (but they would) The people would pay and be glad to, and could. The business man would not be affected directly, yet he also would do his share.

It might be called a Prosperity Cost. All merchants would add to their items 1%. The public would know that this 1% was a Prosperity Tax. Its use would be to care for the emergency funds all over the U. S., possibly providing better and more wholesome necessities than we now are getting, and easing the burden on direct taxation for the same purpose.

If, as illustration, I was very low on funds, Bread was 4¢, I would pay 5¢. I would not miss the penny, and would know what the extra cent was for, also know I would not have to pay it, but would want to, as its purpose would be of mutual benefit. and billions of pennys would illustrate my thought and keep that budget in shape.

In fact, it would work much as the Liberty Bond during the war. It would, indeed be a very unpopular and mean soul that would hesitate on a penny an item. Meat might be 50¢ at one purchase, but only 1¢ Prosperity Tax. The word Prosperity carrying weight as to something on the way back, a good public thought to have held.

5 items from a store....only 5¢.

I have nothing, and I could not object to that.

It would balance the issue in question. Everyone the rich man, the working man, the business man and idle man would all be doing their share...and no particular one hurt.

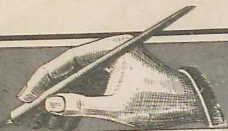

And (selfishly) it might even be a means of putting me to work at something more profitable than at present. Even would put the plan in workable shape for what would be considered a living expense, where I could devote time to it, and know a more comfortable existence would be assured me.

In time I will sincerely appreciate your answer.

As my letter will prove, I have overstepped on your valued time, quite a little, by its great length, but otherwise my thought would have been handicapped.

May I now thank you, also for your interest and "Looking Forward"

His Excellency the President of the United States,
White House, Washington, D. C.

Mr. President:

I take the liberty of sending you at this time a booklet entitled "The Mahan Letters," consisting of letters from the late Rear Admiral A. T. Mahan to his friend and classmate Capt. S. A. Ashe, written in 1858-59. As revealing the unfolding character of the youthful Mahan, as a souvenir of the Naval Academy at that early day and as a supplement to Mahan's writings in mature years, I trust it is not without value. For these reasons and particularly because I feel that Admiral Mahan would desire his memory to be honored by your acceptance, I beg you to give this little volume a place in your library.

Not until the campaign last summer had I heard of your interest in naval history and your large collection of books on naval subjects, of which book would have been sent to you before. Since the campaign, election and inauguration you have seemed to be so overcrowded with matters of great import that I have not been willing to ask your attention to anything so small. Now, however, that the Congress is soon to adjourn, perhaps you may, in a leisure hour, be diverted by a glance at these old letters from a man who rose to the eminence attained by Mahan.

Permit me, with American citizens everywhere, to congratulate you upon your magnificent performance in the conduct of public affairs.

I have the honor to be,

Respectfully yours,

Rosa Pendleton Chiles.

Dear Mr. Howe:

Some weeks ago at the instance of Chairman Wm. E. Carson of the Virginia State Conservation and Development Commission we put in special Morocco binding for President Roosevelt a copy of "Historic Shrines of Virginia".

Several copies in special binding were completed just at the time when a death occurred, which happened to prevent proper checking of the collation of the pages, which in my own copy I found were incorrect, and I am therefore wondering if the pages in President Roosevelt's copy appear in proper numerical order.

Will you be kind enough to have someone run through this book and check the pages to see if they are in order and let me know? If they are not, I will greatly appreciate it if you will return the copy to me so that any errors may be corrected.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Roosevelt:-

I am mailing you to-day a little book which I hope and think you will enjoy having. I intended to send it to you at Washington but as I did not I shall be very happy to have you include it among your State of Maine souvenirs while on this cruise.

I am not sure whether the book originally belonged to Henry or Hosea Delano. You naturally will wonder how it came into my possession. I should have written you during the past winter but decided not to intrude with personal matters as it seemed to me you had about all the work one man ought to shoulder and not much time to devote to things of this nature until you got straightened out down in Washington.

I regret that your cruise does not bring you to this section so that I might have the pleasure of contributing in a small way to the pleasure of your vacation. However I shall hope to send you some-thing later to compensate for it. I hardly know what port of call to address you but will make inquiries before mailing.

Dear President F.D. Roosevelt: rgia

During these hard times I had very little to do so I decided to make some frames. I had seen a person make one so I thought I would try to see if I had any luck in making one. I tried several times and never succeeded until one day I made one fairly well. I showed it to some of my friends and they told me it was nice so I decided to send it to you.

It was very good indeed of you to bring me that little anvil made by the students of the California State Polytechnic School of San Luis Obispo for me. I am glad to have it and shall treasure it as an evidence of the students good will.

I will be obliged if you will have the further kindness to convey to Mr. Figge and to each of the students of the school my warm personal thanks and my best wishes.

My sincere appreciation to you for your own part in bringing the little paper-weight to me.

My dear Mr. President;

This little anvil was made by the students of the Californis State Polytechnic School of San Luis Obispo, Cal. and delivered to me to take to Washington to be presented to the President of these United States.

I realize that it would be impossible for me to present same to you personally also knowing the feelings of these young men. I am going to do my best to see thst same is delivered so on my return to San Luis Obispo I can make my report.

Mr. Henry Figge, instructor of these young men, and all the boys are very sincere admirers of President Roosevelt and it was a sincere pleasure to me when they called on me before I was leaving for Cleveland to attend the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers convention and requested of me to deliver this package to you on my visit to our Capitol.

Mr. Figge, the Students of the California State Polytechnic School of San Luis Obispo, Calif. and myself all join in wishing you Health and every Success.

My dear Mr. Johnson:

I am sending you under separate cover - special delivery - a unique pen and ink sketch - using President Franklin D. Roosevelt as a background, which was developed after several month's work by a Kansas City artist.

May I have an expression from you whether you think this might fit into your plans in the new cooperative movement during the next few months.

For three or four years I have seen the necessity of this kind of work - in which you are now engaged. Thank God we now have some men in Washington who have the "guts" to act without fear of criticism. May you not become discouraged.

Yours very truly,

This sketch is just a token from a faithful admirer. It was a great pleasure to me to be able to sketch a person so renowned. I used the small photograph which was published in the Chicago Tribune as a guide in sketching it.

If you have no use for the drawing, perhaps with your influence, you could manage to persuade some editor to use it in a magazine or newspaper, instead of a photograph of you.

I am only a seventeen year old senior in Danville High School who is badly in need of funds. Since my father, who is a regular, lost his position in the National Soldiers Home here, any further education seems doubtful. I do want so much to become

Dear Mr. Roosevelt;

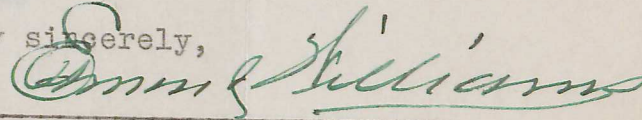

Pardon the liberty of writing these few lines to you. I am a locomotive engineer representing my Division from San Luis Obispo Calif at the Grand International convention being held here in Cleveland.

Before leaving San Luis Obispo I made my plans after the close of the convention to visit the eastern coast and one of the Cities was Washington, D.C. In San Luis Obispo is located the California State Polytechnic School and before I left some of the students made a souvenir for your father, our President and asked me if I would make an effort to present same to our President while I was in Washington and of course I told them I would do my best and not feeling at liberty to take up the time of our President with my letter I am writing these few lines to you in hopes that there may be a way in which I can carry out the wishes of these boys who are sincere admirers of your Honorable Father. It will be after the middle of this month before we finish our convention and if you can advise me as to how I can accomplish this honorable mission which the boys have left to me I will appreciate same very much and also the boy will be made very happy when I return to San Luis Obispo.

Asking your pardon for my liberty in writing you as I have and sincerely thanking you,

I am,

Very sincerely,

Edmond Williams
