My dear Governor:

It was indeed thoughtful of you and Honorable William R. McIntyre to present those fine Idaho Blue Grouse to me and the members of the party. We enjoyed them so much, and I am sending you this little note to let you know of our sincere appreciation.

Very sincerely yours,

My dear Mr. President:

I take pleasure in sending you under separate cover a copy of THE SECOND ADMIRAL: A Life of David Dixon Porter, by Richard S. West Jr., which we shall publish on October 13th. We think that you will find this an authoritative and fascinating life of the great admiral. We will be glad to have any comments that you may care to make on the book.

tural service workers and neighbors of the lower

RECORD YIELD

The Allium Cepa's, commonly known as onions, which are seen in the above photograph, were grown by T. L. Cook of the Satus district and the yield reached a new high of 45.25 tons per acre in one of several official tests conducted by H. P. Singleton, superintendent of the Prosser experiment station, and Walter J. Clore, horticulturist.

On Tuesday of this week, the two men began the tests by taking the weight of onions produced in measured tracts selected at random in the field. Wednesday, the tonnages were compiled, with results of 45.25, 44.16 and 44.31 tons per acre. Ranchers consider 30 tons per acre an excellent yield.

Cook has been growing onions for 25 years and has been selecting seed for type and production for the last 15 years, he explains. The onions were grown from seed that Cook grew himself in the Satus district, which disproves the theory that local seed is not successful. A check revealed that onions picked in the test plots ran from 65 to 70 per cent three-inch size or better.

Four years ago, Cook commented, sagebrush was growing on the 20 acres from which he is harvesting his $500 to $600 an acre crop. In 1936 the same ground was planted to potatoes.

The unusual crop has much interest among agricultural service workers and neighbors of the lower valley farmer, who have visited the field.

These onions sent personally from T.L. Cook, Satus, Washington show what irrigation has done for the sage brush of the Yakima Valley. Mr. Cook has asked that this speak for itself and express his thanks and that of other farmers of the Valley for a President who is interested in irrigation and the reclamation of the West. Phoyographs and tests are all made under the government experimant station and authorized by them. There is 20 acres in this field. Pictures and data collected for Mr. Cook and given to the President's train by Dr C.F. Picking and Elsie Gardner Picking of Toppenish, Washington.

Publicity for newspaper written by Elsie Gardner Picking now "Valley Reporter" for "The Yakima Independent", the only newspaper in the State of Washington, editorially and otherwise wholeheartedly supporting the President.

October 18, 1937

Sends the President an old newspaper, the Poughkeepsie Journal, dated 1825, which he found in ransacking "the old place at Schultzville, Va," this summer. Calls attention to the second page containing a report of he inauguration of President (John Quincy) Adams and his tentative Cabinet. Says that he is sending by parcel post a Viking "Moon-Glo" clock that they manufacture. Also writes a business letter, of same date (10/18/37) to the President in which he asks if it would be possible for the President to write the Hon. Albert Goldman, Postmaster of New York City, and ask if he would make an appointment with Mr. Story to discuss the Post Office site situation in Bayside, Long Island, N.Y. - Presidential memo to Mr. James Roosevelt, 10/23/37, attached as follows: "To do all the thanking in the world and acknowledge his letters." - Under date of October 29th, Mr. James Roosevelt referred to Mr. Goldman, the letter to the President, above referred to regarding the Bayside Post Office site. Attached is letter to Mr. James Roosevelt dated November 1, 1937, from Mr. Goldman stating that he has arranged for an interview with Mr. Story.

In June, 1933, I entered the Ford Hospital with transverse myelitis. It was a year before I recovered a general health, good enough to be told that I would never walk again. As I was forty - one, and until that time had led an active business life, there followed a rather bitter re-adjustment period.

But I came through it, - and the example of your fortitude was the inspiration that enabled me to do it. If you could overcome a similar handicap to the extent of holding the highest office in the land, and accept and cope with the duties of that office during the most difficult period this country has undergone, - then certainly I should be able to do something.

That something was the writing of a book, titled the Cruise of the Gull-Flight, and I am sending a copy to you. You are a sailor, and this is a sailing story, and I hope you enjoy it. I offer it humbly, - a tribute to a man who wouldn't give up.

Dear Sir,

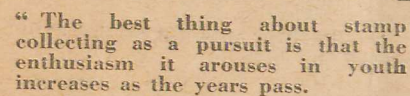

In a recent special supplement of the "Daily Telegraph", I noticed the attached illustration in connection with your hobby of stamp collecting, and noticed that you are using a hand magnifying lens.

As my firm have just produced an illuminated magnifier which is specially suitable for the use of Philatelists, I am taking the liberty of sending one to you in the hope that you will be gracious enough to accept it with my compliments, and in the hope that it will in some small way add to the pleasures of your interesting hobby.

Mr. Marvin H. McIntyre
White House
Washington, D.C.

My dear Mr. McIntyre:

Press dispatches report the President's interest in the problem of stimulating home building by private enterprise.

x63
A book entitled THREE MILLION HOUSES was published by the Committee for the Nation in which Sir Charles Morgan-Webb presented the history of England's failures and successes in a similar effort which, in the end, resulted in the erection of three million homes in the post-war period. Attached hereto you will find a letter written by Mr. Sexauer to Senators and Congressmen in connection with the distribution of a copy of this book, just before the close of the last session.

In Chapter Six pages 66 to 86 there is an exhaustive statement as to the importance of low interest rates for home building. President Roosevelt took a stand on this question during 1936 that is identical with the most important policy, as Sir Charles Morgan-Webb shows, that brought success to England's home building efforts.

We are sending, under separate cover, five copies of the book so that extra copies will be available for others who may be interested. Possibly you can call the President's attention to the chapter dealing with low interest rates.

Very sincerely,

Edward A. Rumely

COPY OF A LETTER SENT TO ALL UNITED STATES SENATORS AND MEMBERS OF HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

A book of great immediate importance to the United States is being sent to you under separate cover. In it, Sir Charles Morgan-Webb tells the story of England's

THREE MILLION HOUSES.

Why could England between September 1931 and March 1936 build 1,226,000 dwellings by private enterprise?

Had the United States built at the same per capita rate, we should have erected 700,000 dwellings annually. Why, with our vastly greater resources of iron, steel, lumber, and all building materials, with idle labor, did we produce at one-tenth England's per capita rate only 70,000 dwellings per annum?

Great Britain tried government subsidies but they failed. This book tells the inside story of Great Britain's success - how she stimulated private enterprise.

The same sterling monetary policies that brought building to a high level in England created in the sterling area countries, Australia, Argentine and Brazil, 18% to 35% higher prices for wheat and cotton in their currencies, than our farmers receive in dollars.

In these countries the government encourages high production. Their farmers plant more and are crowding United States cotton growers in world markets. Yet, in consequence of sterling area monetary policies they receive profitable prices. Thus one underlying monetary force brings high building activity, high business activity, farm prosperity with high production, and creates more jobs than men because of the high buying power of farmers and basic producers for the products of industry. These sterling nations are the most prosperous in the world.

We believe this book holds a story of great importance.

Very truly yours,

Fred St. Leger

Says these holders remove the tobacco fumes so that they are not absorbed by the smoker. Also encloses a little capsule after one day's smoking, so that it can be seen how much material is kept out of one's mouth.--On Nov. 22, 1937, Miss LeHand wrote to Mr. Hooker thanking him for the above. Miss LeHand asks Mr. Hooker to tell Mr. Taylor (Mr. Myron C. THE WHITE HOUSE

Nov 15 9 30 AM '37
686 Park Avenue,
New York City,
November 15, 1937.

My dear President:

One or two words about Russia.

For a great many years I have been intensely interested in the Russian people, their genius and their institutions. In 1900 I founded at the University of Chicago the Chair of Slavonic Affairs. Miliukov was the second one to sit in that chair and Masaryk was the third. This summer I had my twenty-fourth visit to Russia.

When the revolution broke out in 1917, a month before we entered the war, I went straight to Russia and stayed there right in the center of affairs until the Bolsheviki came in in the autumn. The government was taken over by members of the old Douma such as Miliukov, Lvoff, the first president, Radzianko, the second one, and others, a lot of idealists but pure Russians. As I can witness, it was a happy time, undoubtedly the happiest time the Russian people have ever known. For three months no crimes were committed in Moscow or Petrograd and the people were all on their best behavior. Miliukov used to tell me with tears in his eyes stories about the way everyday people had tried to take over and run the government, everyone doing his utmost to help. The government resolved not to do anything that the old government had been criticised for doing. The secret service was dissolved but lay around as raw material for the Bolsheviki to use in their movement during the terrorist period. Idealists bring on revolutions but the roughnecks soon get control of them.

Neither Germany nor the Jews cared at all about seeing a happy or prosperous Russia. So the Germans moved Lenin from Switzerland and set him up in business; the Hamburg Jews did the same thing with Trotsky. The Douma idealists did not raise a hand against this movement and in a short time they were driven out. Then started the rule of Minorities (Bolsheviki) who hated everything Russian, were not content to establish a government of their own doctrines but went out of their way to do every cruel thing possible to the Russian people and their culture.

His Excellency
Franklin D. Roosevelt,
The White House,
Washington, D. C.

I have had the feeling all along that the Russian people would wear down the minorities and reassert themselves some-time, but I hardly thought it would come within my time. However, last spring I had a "hunch" that I ought to take one more look at Russia, so I went almost directly from California to Moscow to get the "feel" of the new Russia. I was able to feel very soon that the rule of the Minorities is past, that the new Russia is coming along fast and that the new state is going to be definitely "Russian," not Marxist, but much to the left, and will not conform to any historical plan.

Lenin's great genius was in organizing a form of government wonderfully adapted to the needs of the Russian people. I believe the Russian people, along with all their other great qualities, have a distinct political genius that will work itself out. This was shown by "the emancipation of the serfs" in 1861, so infinitely better done than the way we managed a much smaller problem (you might like to read the account of this movement in Leroy Beaulieu's "Empire of the Tsars"); the story of the Doumas; the great cooperative movements and the handling of their local communes.

This magnificent folk with their rare talents, having passed through the fire of rich experience and at last obtained their long-thirsted-for "freedom", will create a state that will lead and give ideas to all the others, but not menace them, during the next hundred years.

Faithfully
Charles R. Crane

P.S. I am sending you a copy of Sir Bernard Pares' little gem "Moscow Admits a Critic." Sir Bernard is Britain's highest authority on Russia, knows his way around, what to search for and how to look at it. You can read it between drinks.

Dear Mr. President:

The attached is the general letter sent out to about five hundred of my friends throughout the country and is sent along merely for your observation.

I hope your molar ailment has vanished so you can enjoy the two smoked turkeys which I am sending to you and Mrs. Roosevelt. In addition, I'm sending you the grand champion bronze gobbler from Shady Oak Farm alive and thoroughly prepared for the Christmas activities. The old boy weighs forty pounds on the hoof and with a few frills will make a nice center piece for the dining room table Christmas high-noon.

PDZ

I am, also, sending you an assortment of Shady Oak Pickles - cucumber and onion - as well as a few Jumbo pecans, dressed and undressed, and Texas pink grapefruit. Incidentally, I have another package for you but I am afraid to send it for fear it might pass through the hands of Steve or Marvin and would never reach its rightful owner. So, I will hold it in reserve until my next trip to Washington. It is really much older than any of the above trinkets and while it was not smoked in the smokehouse, it was aged in the wood.

Permit both the big and little Carters to wish you and Mrs. Roosevelt and all of your loved ones a Merry Christmas and may the New Year bring you a continuation of the good things you are doing for the folks in this great country.

Dear Mr. President:

Time was when the Smokehouse was the most important item on the premises. Then came prohibition, and it was eclipsed somewhat by the cellar. But time marched on; prohibition got the bum's rush, restoring ancient values; the Smokehouse came into its own again, as the cellar lost influence and aroma.

At Shady Oak Farm, the Hired Hand who had been out of sight for weeks, finally emerged toting a tasty confection which combines the best qualities of both these indispensable adjuncts to the home - the Smokehouse and the cellar. He took Grade-A Texas Turkey, the nonpareil of toothsome-ness, and blessed it with the ancient ceremony of the hickory-chip slow fire. Hence, here is a bit of Smoked Turkey, not actually spirit aged in wood, but embodying, nevertheless, the spirit of wood released by the magic of fire, and in a real old-time Smokehouse.

Shady Oak Smoked Turkey - with our compliments! But a word of reminder: It will not substitute for the regular Christmas bird on your table, as it is a trifle rich for long-distance eating. But for nibbles between cocktails, or whatever you use instead of cocktails, it can't be beat. It is just what the doctor ordered for punctuating old-fashionedness, or quick ones straight from the barrel.

Business is good in Fort Worth and West Texas; everybody is happy; Shady Oak Farm has made the grade another year without Government aid - which is something for the book these days. After all your grumbles and aches, where could you find better people or a better place in which to live? Whether or not you may agree with the President in all his programs, the United States is Okay, your town is Okay, Texas is Okay, West Texas is Okay, and Fort Worth Okayest of all, as everybody agrees who visits our city. Why not try it as tonic for what ails you? The latchstring always hangs outside, the pot is always on the fire, and we've never lost a customer yet.

pennant, also the Dixie Series. If our friends across the river, S. M. U. at Dallas, could have played football like they talked and defeated Rice Institute last Saturday, our Texas Christian University would have wound up with the Southwest Conference title; at that T. C. U. finished second, keeping up its 14 year record of winning from Rice, and handing the new champions their only Conference defeat.

We also furnished Sammy Baugh to the Washington Redskins to enable them to rise up and win the Eastern Professional football title.

And, now, the Hired Hand sends you a Texas born, raised and smoked turkey, the Pride of the Prairie. I guess I had better stop, as I could run on forever about the great things raised and produced in Texas.

The enclosed check is for your Christmas spending money. I hope Santa Claus gives you a full sock - I mean a sock full of good things, and especially a plum good New Year.

Dear Folks:

The pecans, which are being sent you today from Shady Oak Farm, were not grown on the tree shown in the upper corner of this letter. That tree is used by myself exclusively for siesta purposes. Things grow so big and fast out at Shady Oak Farm, like other Texas farms, that a faithful worker becomes dizzy hearing the plant life noise and has to relax now and then.

I hope you like our favorite brand of pecans. You don't need a hammer and flat iron to get into them. The shell can be broken by a tiny squeeze of the most painted finger. They are sorta Class A like everything else raised in Texas.

Right now, we are so busy harvesting and shipping that we haven't time to get het up about Mae's Radio Educational Program. We just take it for granted that Mae has a new picture coming along and let it go at that.

Prices may not be to everybody's satisfaction, but when you have a lot of stuff to peddle, you usually wind up with a pretty fair pile of jack, which we are going to spend, of course, after reading the ads.

Mr. Carter said to say something about the enclosed check for 175,000 on the STAR-TELEGRAM Bank of Prosperity. It's a failing of his to now and then get a little commercial. I have noticed it once or twice when he caught me sleeping under the tree.

Dear Mr. President:

Florida and California quarrel between themselves as to the supremacy of their grapefruit; while, Texas, being First, with the most delicious grapefruit produced, naturally, has no quarrel with either California or Florida as to which will be second or third.

This Texas sweet, pink-meated delicacy (Shady Oak Brand) has been awarded All-American Grand Champion and we hope you like it.

Seriously, everything and everybody are fine in Texas. 1937 was a good year for watermelons, pecans, turkeys, grapefruit, pickles, oil, cattle, wheat, football, baseball and, while we are on the subject, business has been rather good.

As a further evidence of our friendly interest in your Christmas, we are enclosing, herewith, our check for 175,000 on The Star-Telegram's Bank of Prosperity.

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

Sincerely,

A.G. Carter

Dear Marvin:

A srot time ago I wired you asking whether the President could use a couple of nice Shady Oak Farm bronze, forty pound, turkeys and you replied in the affirmative.

Lo and behold! When I got ready to ship these prize birds I found some good Democrat had evidently brrowed one of them. So, I am only sending one turkey as it is impossible to go out and replace the one that has vanished. Anyway, the old boy weighs forty pounds and he will make a good showing. I know that the President will have more turkeys than he can gobble but I would like to have him see this turkey when it arrives. I am having a special box fixed up and I would like to show him what we can actually raise on Shady Oak Farm.

In addition, I have sent him two smoked turkeys, grapefruit, pecans, pickles and what-not. I hope they all have a good time and the same prescription applies to you, Mrs. McIntyre and your love ones.

Sincerely,

Amon

Your letter of December fourth has been received and I want to thank you in the President's behalf for your courtesy in sending him the gift to which you refer. I need hardly say that this gift can be accepted only with the understanding that there will be no publicity in connection with its presentation.

I am indeed sorry, but it is not possible for his office to make comments concerning the merits of the many gifts that are constantly being received. I know you will understand.

Very sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. President:

Attached to this letter - is a package containing two pieces of - fireplace logs - I am thinking the White House has home-like wood burning fireplaces.

These logs burn with many pretty colors - blues, greens, etc. for over an hour.
Try them in your own fireplace, Mr. President,
I believe that you will like them. I just invented this process. If you desire more of these logs you may get them in Dept. No. 63 Woodward & Lothrop 10th 11th F. L. J. Streets, Washington, D.C. - or I'll send more.

Sincerely Yours
Danny Corcoran

P.S. Please let me know how you like them. D.C.

Dear Miss LeHand:

I have just received your letter of December 15th advising me that the President was glad to have the book, "Divided We Stand" which I sent to him.

I certainly do hope that he reads this book. If he reads one chapter he will finish it. It presents a most vivid picture of the exploitation of the agricultural South and West by the monopolies of the East. The latter chapter or so of the book discusses President Roosevelt's administration.

This is not just another book. It is an amazing story of problems of the South and West as the President is dealing with them today. It will be helpful to him.

With kindest regards, I am,

Sincerely yours,
