My dear Mrs. Carbin:

The President has received your nice letter of January nineteenth and thanks you very much indeed for the friendly thought which prompted you to send him that beautiful quilt top. He is deeply grateful for your birthday greetings.

The President notes that you son will celebrate his twenty-first birthday on January twenty-eighth and has asked me to convey his very best wishes to him.

Very sincerely yours,

Dear Sir:

As you notice, I have enclosed a promotion circular describing the chapter-captions of my book entitled "WHY GROW OLD?" which has recently been released on the market.

Would you be so kind and considerate as to inform me just what proceedure is advisable in regards to sending his Excellancy Franklin D.Roosevelt a complimentary copy of my book. I sincerely feel the President will find a personal appeal in its philosophy as it reflects his own youthful, dynamic and never-growing -old type of disposition.

An abstract of the book appeared in the December 11th issue of Literary Digest under their section department "Reading Around The World-a timely digest of the best in print".

I shall be immensely indebted to you for the generosity of any courtesy you might extend me in this matter.

Gratefully yours,

Frank S. Caprio

Dear Sir:

Too tragically often, we American men are flabby at forty; feeble at fifty; senile at sixty -- and in our graves long before the allotted three score years and ten.

Dr. Frank Caprio says this is a criminal waste of man-power, and tells us in a fascinating new book, how to combat the physical and mental factors that make us old before our time; how to retain the gift of Youth far beyond forty, and most important of all, how to get more satisfaction out of what we usually term the "declining years."

Now, don't jump to the conclusion that this is merely another collection of exercises, diets and health rules. It is nothing of the sort. Actually, this is a guide-book -- a manual to solve your perplexing problems and help you get the utmost out of precious "middle years."

Why Grow Old? is written exclusively for MEN. It is aimed directly at those of us who seek not merely to add a few more years to the life-span, but to remain physically and mentally alert and alive, regardless of our calendar age.

For the preparation of such a book, Dr. Caprio has an ideal background. As a psychiatrist of the Veterans Administration, his patients are chiefly men in middle life. To this rich store of practical experience, he has added the counsel and collaboration of Dr. Owsley Grant, urologist, in the preparation of sound chapters dealing with our glands, sexual adjustments, and those problems commonly associated with "the dangerous age" in men.

Just before he left for Vienna recently, Dr. Caprio urged us, in a final conference, not to "high-pressure" his book. Certainly I see no valid reason for doing so. I ask only that you examine the Table of Contents, listed on the opposite page. You'll know then whether this is the book for YOU.

If you are sincere in your desire to retain or regain the youth, energy, and zest for life that are rightfully yours, we invite you to examine a copy of Why Grow Old? in the quiet privacy of your home or office. If this volume does not solve YOUR problems, return it for credit or refund. The order form is for your convenience. Or, if you prefer, your name and address on the accompanying card will bring the book, in a plain container, marked for your personal attention.

Really yours,

Maxwell Droke,
Publisher.

WHY GROW OLD?

A GUIDE-BOOK FOR THE MAN WHO SEEKS TO REMAIN PHYSICALLY AND MENTALLY YOUNG

I Why We Grow Old—The art of living in the sunset years. . . . Factors that make us old before our time. . . . Spiritual lubrication against the frictions of life.

II Physical Age vs. Calendar Age—Some men actually are older at 45 than others at 60. . . . What is your real age? . . . Often, your age is in your mind. . . . Youth extension.

III Why Fear the Forties?—Be your age and like it. . . . Blessings of Maturity. . . . The Other Side of Forty—the Threshold of Achievement.

IV Your Body is NOT a Machine—Your body is a living organism. You must nourish body and mind if you are to have a long, happy, useful life.

V Murder in the "Gym" Class—The Business Man's "Gym" Class may kill more men than it cures. . . . The folly of forced "exercise." . . . Get fun out of your recreation—or drop it.

VI Your Glands—Particularly the Prostate—The newer knowledge of glands and the part they play in prolonging our active lives. . . . Glands in relation to Personality. . . . Old age and glands. . . . The facts about your Prostate.

VII The Male Menopause—The physical and psychical changes incident to this trying period. How to meet and minimize their ill effects.

VIII Challenging Diseases of Advancing Years—Our modern male—the healthiest man who ever lived. . . . Today nothing is "incurable." . . . Science organizes against Cancer, Tuberculosis, "Rheumatism" and the Degenerative Diseases of Heart, Blood Vessels and Kidneys. . . . Our modern war on Syphilis. . . . Fortunate is the man who faces fifty today!

IX "Mental Abscesses" Cause More Suffering Than Cancer—Mental suffering as real as any physical ill. . . . Middle-Age Depression. . . . Euthanasia. . . . The secret of serenity for our advancing years.

X A Recipe for Mental Efficiency—Your mind need not age with your body. . . . Middle age a period of mental maturity. . . . The satisfactions of serene senescence.

XI A Sane Sex Life for the Mature Man—The mystery of sex. . . . Sexual problems. . . . The unmarried man past forty. . . . Ideal Sexuality for the Middle Aged.

XII A Common-Sense Talk About Eating and Sleeping—De-bunking some of our popular fads and fancies. . . . Diets and Common-Sense.

XIII Is It Really a Young Man's World?—Increasing importance of older men in a longer-lived world. . . . "Men Who Run America" well past middle age. . . . The cash-till value of experience.

XIV Slow Down, But DON'T Retire—The greatest secret of a long, happy life. . . . The art of leading an active "inactive" life.

XV The Truth About Rejuvenation—What Science really knows about Rejuvenation—Sublimated Youth.

XVI Add Ten Years to Your Life—Why live longer?—How to live longer. . . . What is your life expectancy? Modern research in longevity.

Five hundred milligrams of nicotine, if taken in one dose, are fatal. Anyone who smokes a package of cigarets a day breathes in 500 milligrams of nicotine every week. Whether this gradual dosage does harm may be debatable, but few are the smokers who would not leap at a chance to avoid nicotine as long as the method did not involve giving up smoking. On sale last week in United Cigar Stores, Liggett Drug Stores, Schulte Cigar Stores and many a hotel in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles was a device making such a boon to smokers available for the first time. So simple that it seems at first glance a quackery, the gadget has a pedigree weighty enough to soothe all such suspicions. Invented by Aluminum Co. of America, it is endorsed by the Mellon Institute and the Italian Government, and is sold by a corporation headed by Count Giuseppe Cippico.

Scion of an ancient Venetian family, suave, blond Count Cippico is a close friend of Arthur Davis, chairman of the board of Aluminum Co. of America. Both men are heavy smokers and some three years ago they got to discussing some means of eliminating nicotine. Mr. Davis thought of an aluminum holder with a filter of activated alumina, an absorbent much used in chemistry. This proved too expensive, but in the experiments Aluminum Co. Chemist R. B. Derr noticed that butts of the cigarets in contact with aluminum were always soggy and black with absorbed nicotine and tar. This was because tobacco is itself one of the best possible nicotine absorbers and because aluminum's sensitivity to temperature makes it condense the fumes quickly. Chemist Derr tried using an ordinary cigaret as a filter. He found that smoking one cigaret through another as filter eliminated 70% of the nicotine content. Count Cippico suggested using two cigarets, found that this eliminated 90%. The figures were checked and corroborated by the Mellon Institute.

Aluminum Co. sold its patent on the process to Count Cippico, who set up Zeus Corp. to handle it. The name Zeus was chosen because it is pronounceable in every tongue (same reason Eastman chose the name Kodak). From a tiny office in Manhattan, Zeus Corp. six weeks ago began distributing black aluminum holders in several sizes at $1 and $2 each. By last week Zeus holders were selling like hot cakes. Most convincing evidence of the gadget's merit lies in the using. Commented Esquire: "After you smoke a pack, take out the cigaret filter and be thankful that what you see is in the filter, not in you."

THE SECRET OF Zeus

Two simple principles make Zeus effective.

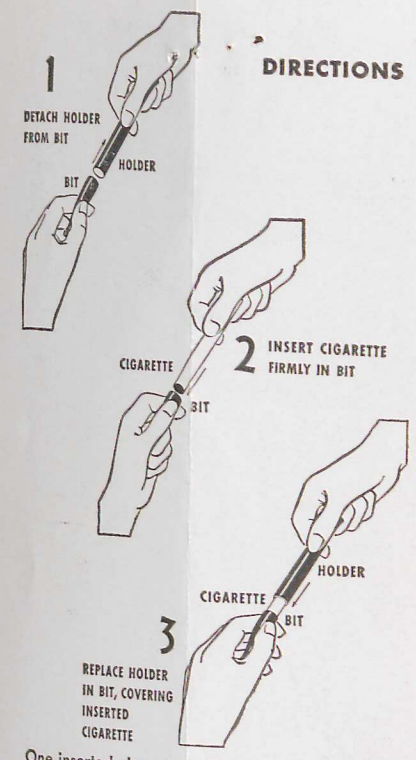

The first sound principle is the use of an INSERTED CIGARETTE inside the aluminum tube, as a filter for the smoke. Months of experiments with other substances have unearthed nothing to equal a cigarette's all-around advantages for this purpose . . . because of its finely divided tobacco strands . . . because tobacco itself is a natural absorbent for undesirable smoke vapors condensed inside the aluminum tube, before they get into your mouth . . . and because it is always handy and very inexpensive.

The second sound principle is the use of specially prepared aluminum for the tube, for aluminum is one of the world's most efficient conductors of heat. This dissipates a larger proportion of the heat before the smoke gets to your mouth. This faculty of high heat transfer also causes the hot vapors to condense in the cigarette filter, thus capturing 70% to 90% of the nicotine, also tars, from your smoke.

Use ZEUS until puffing becomes difficult, before renewing the inserted cigarette used as a filter.

Then take out the cigarette filter, look at it, and congratulate yourself that what you see was not inhaled.

DIRECTIONS

One inserted cigarette should serve as a filter for 30 to 40 or more cigarettes

are made to suit every cigarette smoker.

Zeus Standard Cigarette Filter Holder, 4" long, with one cigarette as filter . . . eliminates over 70% nicotine.

Zeus De Luxe Cigarette Filter Holder, 4¾" long, with one cigarette as filter . . . eliminates over 70% nicotine. (Taper one end of the cigarette that is used as a filter with the fingers for easy insertion into bit piece).

Zeus Ladies Cigarette Filter Holder, with "amberlike" colored mouthpieces.

Zeus Supercharge Cigarette Filter Holder, for 1 or 2 cigarettes.

The Supercharge Cigarette Filter Holder is particularly valuable to smokers who have to cut down on cigarettes. Laboratory tests show that smoking with two cigarettes used as filters . . . eliminates over 90% nicotine.

Enclosed is a letter which you will undoubtedly recognize. The recipient has asked the Attorney General to return it for revision. He good-naturedly suggests that he would pardon the misspelling of his name, but that it is difficult for one with an over-developed sense of competition to receive praise and thanks for products of a competitor (Stetson).

Mr. Cavanagh was a bit hesitant about asking the Attorney General to do this, but he is so proud having received such a lovely letter from the President that he wants to show it to his friends, but feels a bit embarrassed for the reasons above indicated.

Can you help him out?

Through a mutual friend of Homer Cummings, Mr. Papish a fur cutter of Danbury, Connecticut, we made two hats for the President. Mr. Papish thinks I should have written the President, but I didn't. Now that the mistake has been made, simply because I felt the President shouldn't be bothered with trifles, I am taking the liberty of acquainting you with why the President received two hats and nothing more.

The Citrus Inspection Bureau, of the Florida Department of Agriculture, is charged with enforcing the citrus laws and the regulations pertaining thereto as promulgated by the Florida Citrus Commission.

Headquarters of the Bureau is maintained at Winter Haven, Florida, under the direction of J. J. Taylor, State Chemist, and includes the Statistical Division, Bond and License Division and the Chemical Laboratory.

In the Statistical Division a complete record of all shipments of each licensed dealer is kept by counties and is made available to the public at semi-monthly intervals. Copies of all grade and maturity certificates and all records pertaining to fruit inspected are filed here.

The Bond and License Division enforces the Bond and License Law, which was designed as a grower's protective measure, and requires all persons dealing in citrus fruit to be properly bonded to insure the faithful performance of their contracts with the producers.

A well equipped laboratory for regulatory control and for scientific research is maintained, and complete analysis of all dyes used for adding color to citrus fruits are made from time to time to insure against any ingredient being used that would be harmful in the least manner to the public.

A field force of inspectors, varying in number with the volume of shipments, is maintained during the shipping season throughout the entire citrus belt. These men, under fifteen District Supervisors, are highly trained and carefully examined for their fitness before being employed. Their duties are to inspect and certify all shipments of citrus fruit made from Florida with the exception of the express shipments. The grade standards used by the Bureau are those established by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the Federal Government and such additional grades as may be adopted by the Florida Citrus Commission. The maturity standards are established by the Florida Legislature and the fruit can not be certified for shipment until it meets all these requirements.

Very sincerely yours,

Various labels used by the shippers are registered with the Florida Citrus Commission and each label designates a specific grade. All fruit packed under a given label must meet the requirements of that particular grade. Copies of each grade and maturity certificate issued by the inspectors accompany every shipment of fruit, and check-up inspections are made at the terminal markets.

The purpose of the Citrus Inspection Bureau is to insure the public's receiving a uniformly good quality product when purchasing Florida fruit and to maintain a standard of grade and pack. To this end every effort of the Bureau is directed throughout each shipping season.

THE THEME

OF

PLANNING FOR THE MARKET

Thes historical and descriptive parts are useful primarily for the popular reader. But they will reveal to the well-informed public official the basis for the author's interpretation of economic problems.

The book supports New Deal policies in the following respects:

That there is a general need for economic planning.

That speculation is a major evil and should be restrained.

That there should be established, either directly or indirectly a "ceiling for profits and a cellar for wages"; hence minimum wage legislation is justified.

That the agricultural part of the population needs government aid in planning for its market.

The book opposes New Deal theories and policies in the following respects:

It opposes the quantity theory of money and the system of "managed currency".

It favors non-competitive, but opposes an enlargement of competitive foreign trade; by a statsitical study it shows that such trade diminishes employment in this country.

It opposes a sacrifice of jobs in industry for the sake of cheapening production.

Between the cellar for wages and the ceiling for profits, it favors giving capital a free hand in the management of industry.

Planning for the Market

By

GUY CLINTON, M. Sc.

Author of "Some Enigmas of Modern Science," "The Energy Factor in Chemical Changes," "Further Light on Conductivity of Solutions," etc.

Do you read economics? Many busy people do not read books of this kind, because the authors commonly treat the subject philosophically at great length and indulge in allusions which have meaning only to economists. This book prepares the reader for every difficulty he will encounter; it treats familiar topics in a familiar way. Something of money, credit, banking, production, and trade is known to everyone; however, their relationships, development, and meaning in the business world are matters that require a little more study than the average man has found time to give to them. The book will serve to clarify much about economics which is almost known already.

Simple as the idea of the market is, a number of citations are given to show that its essential character is much misunderstood. The complete interdependence of production and consumption is made clear, perhaps, for the first time. Foreign and domestic commerce, so far as they are competitive, must stand in an inverse ratio. Our great concern in competitive foreign trade should be that we do not destroy more jobs than we create. The efficiencies of employment in different industries have been calculated from official reports of the Departments of Commerce and Labor. This important achievement is a unique feature; it has not been done previously.

Should economic planning be by the government or by the capitalist? If by the former, it endangers popular government, therefore capitalistic planning is favored; but if the plans are made by capital, they must not be exclusively for capital. As the umpire, the government, through an effective system of taxation, must dictate an equitable distribution of the benefits.

(Over)

THE CHRISTOPHER PUBLISHING HOUSE
1140 Columbus Avenue, Boston, Massachusetts

A Scientific Treatise by a Scientist

Some idea of the value of the book may be seen by a few quotations from the foreword, as follows:

"The facilities of, and esteem for effective publicity often cause the worse to appear to be the better part. In the babble of confusion only the doctor and the engineer seem to be guided by sound practice. For them the final test of a theory is, does it work? The only hope there can be of 'finding the way through' is by a critical reexamination of the road which we have traversed. Blind spots have closed our eyes to the signs of the times. The most publicity has been accorded to writers who speak of trade as merely a sale of goods; they ignore every fact relating to the goods to be purchased with the proceeds; they speak of foreign trade as pure gain; they advocate a reduction of cost, even where it must be due principally to the discharge of labor; they see no relation between employment and purchasing power; they believe that price is dependent more upon the quantity of money than the quantity of products offered for sale. The following pages contain new evidence bearing on these and other vital problems."

The book is the result of much careful research, sifting facts from fancies, often showing harmonies where only contradictions were supposed to exist. It is a scientific treatise by a scientist.

Secretary the the President,

Washington, D.C.

Dear Sir,-

There seems to be lull in the building of the economic temple. The workers are at a stand-still for the want of "a stone which the builders rejected". Are recruits permitted to aid in the search?

The inclosed announcement tells of a procedure which is logically consistent. It strongly supports some New Deal measures; it criticises others. Should the President or some of his Executive Assistants be interested in the contents of this little book, I shall be glad to make a complimentary copy available.

Very respectfully,

Guy Clinton

Planning for the Market

By

GUY CLINTON, M. Sc.

Author of "Some Enigmas of Modern Science," "The Energy Factor in Chemical Changes," "Further Light on Conductivity of Solutions," etc.

Do you read economics? Many busy people do not read books of this kind, because the authors commonly treat the subject philosophically at great length and indulge in allusions which have meaning only to economists. This book prepares the reader for every difficulty he will encounter; it treats familiar topics in a familiar way. Something of money, credit, banking, production, and trade is known to everyone; however, their relationships, development, and meaning in the business world are matters that require a little more study than the average man has found time to give to them. The book will serve to clarify much about economics which is almost known already.

Simple as the idea of the market is, a number of citations are given to show that its essential character is much misunderstood. The complete interdependence of production and consumption is made clear, perhaps, for the first time. Foreign and domestic commerce, so far as they are competitive, must stand in an inverse ratio. Our great concern in competitive foreign trade should be that we do not destroy more jobs than we create. The efficiencies of employment in different industries have been calculated from official reports of the Departments of Commerce and Labor. This important achievement is a unique feature: it has not been done previously.

Should economic planning be by the government or by the capitalist? If by the former, it endangers popular government, therefore capitalistic planning is favored; but if the plans are made by capital, they must not be exclusively for capital. As the umpire, the government, through an effective system of taxation, must dictate an equitable distribution of the benefits.

Dear Mr. President:

We are sending you a copy of the 1937 ONONDAGAN, yearbook of Syracuse University. In the last section of the book there are pictures and a story of the dedication of the new medical building which you might enjoy reviewing.

The theme of the ONONDAGAN this year is being constructed about the sesqui centennial celebration of the adoption of the Constitution. The book is being planned in layout, composition and design to conform with literary works of the colonial period.

Feeling that you have a personal interest already in Syracuse, we are taking the liberty, when the book is published, of sending you a copy of the 1938 ONONDAGAN.

My dear President Roosevelt;-

Your old friend A. Former Whigg is still the drum major in the grand ranks of Democracy.

Stepping up with rising times, A. Whigg becomes an author and here is the first edition of the only book of verse ever dedicated to the Medical Profession. "Doctors, I Salute"!

Believing you will find some word or line helpful in some way, I am indeed happy to present this book to you.

I am proud to have pasted on the blank leaves of my Bible, for future generations, your letters and one from Mrs. Roosevelt also.

We are all "standing by" out in the corn country where we make our home. Every one is encouraged and on the "up and up."

Our Pilot is guiding the mighty Ship of State into safe sea lanes and a glad Harbor.

I trust you will like "Doctors, I Salute!"

Away up in this mountain fastness amidst a scene of unusual grandeur and whimsically sketching, coloring little 'do-dads' entirely from imagination in my lowly Log Cabin abode, my inner urge insistently prompts me to send you one, under separate cover, as a humble token, from Nevada, of your 'Neighborly' attitude.

My dear Mr. Carter:

Just a little note to acknowledge your letter of April first, with the enclosed print. The President has noted them with a great deal of interest and asks me to assure you of his sincerest appreciation of your kindness in sending him those choice cuts from the Texas Grand Champion steer. The steak arrived in excellent condition and has been greatly enjoyed.

THE WHITE HOUSE
APR 5 9 57 AM '38
RECEIVED

April 1, 1938.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt,
White House,
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. President:

The 1938 Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show has just come to a close with its Forty-Second annual exposition - by far the most successful of all shows - breaking all records for attendance, number of exhibitors and entertaining Rodeos.

Notwithstanding there were cattle breeders and exhibitors from all over the country, Texas, as usual, carried off the majority of the blue ribbons.

The enclosed print and copy of the letter of the youngster who raised the Grand Champion Herefords, are self explanatory, as well as the two choice cuts of this famous steer meat, which is being sent you by airplane. The steak will leave the Fort Worth Club at 8:00 A.M. and should be in your icebox in time for "supper".

I hope it arrives in good condition and that you like it.

Texas continues to be the bright spot on the commercial map of the nation and business is still pretty good.

I hope Elliott delivered the new hat and special package to you in Warm Springs. I was almost afraid to trust him with them but finally took a chance.

With best wishes, I am

Sincerely,

AGC.KD

Dear Mr. Carter:

I certainly thank you for the good price you paid for my champion carload of steers. This money will certainly help in obtaining a college education next year. I sincerely hope all the carcasses are good and the dressing percentage high. I will send you a picture of them as soon as I get the prints.

Very sincerely yours,
Gordon Grote

(These fifteen fat steers, the grand champion carload at the 1938 Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show at Fort Worth, brought $1,772.62 for the owner and exhibitor, Gordon Grote, 16-year-old Mason, Texas, High School senior student and 4-H club member. The proceeds will enable the Mason county youth to obtain an education in animal husbandry at Texas A. & M. College.)

given to MacLeish for Pres - PL.

This they would also like to present for the White House Conservatory.

Mr. Castle has put this assignment up to me and has requested that the presentation take place Thursday, April 21st. I shall call on you in Washington Monday morning.

Inasmuch as this huge industry was actually started by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and because no trade names are involved, I hope that you will help me to arrange to have the President receive the oranges

M.H.M. -21

April 16, 1938.

Dear Mac:

The head of Castle Films, Eugene Castle, hails originally from California. For nearly twenty years he has been responsible for most of the film and educational work for the Southern California Orange Growers. As you probably know, the citrus industry is one of the largest in California and the marketing of the very extensive orange and lemon crop is handled from a non-profit grower association which has nearly 12,000 mambers. This explains briefly why Mr. Castle received an unusual assignment and request.

This is it:

Sixty five years ago, the U. S. Department of Agriculture sent an original parent naval orange tree to California.

The citrus growers would like to register their appreciation and recognition of the U. S. Government's part in establishing the huge naval orange industry in California nearly three quarters of a century ago. Accordingly, they intend to send Miss Patricia Ellis, a well known film star, to Washington with a box of oranges from the original parent naval orange tree. This they would like to present to President Roosevelt. They are also arranging for Miss Ellis to bring along a young orange tree, budded from the parent tree. This they would also like to present for the White House Conservatory.

Mr. Castle has put this assignment up to me and has requested that the presentation take place Thursday, April 21st. I shall call on you in Washington Monday morning.

Inasmuch as this huge industry was actually started by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and because no trade names are involved, I hope that you will help me to arrange to have the President receive the oranges and accept, for the White House Conservatory, the young orange tree.

I am sure that you must be aware of the fact that the citrus industry is one of the top horticultural activities of Southern California -- the citrus yield of oranges, grapefruit and lemons runs into many millions of dollars and the nearly twelve thousand growers, who are responsible for this huge, successful horticultural activity, are among the most influential citizens of the state. If you can see your way clear to convey this important fact to the President, I am sure he will quickly realize that his cooperation, in this instance, would have the finest sort of an effect on this important group of representative citizens.

I'll see you Monday morning.

Hope you are feeling tip-top again.

Sincerely yours,

Charles Charlton

My dear Mr. Cortezano:

This will acknowledge the receipt of your letter of April thirteenth. Thank you very much in the President's behalf for your courtesy in letting him see your painting of Mrs. Roosevelt. He does not feel, however, that he should accept a gift upon which you have expended so much of your time and skill.

I am, therefore, returning the painting to you by prepaid express.

It is not customary for the President to make any comment regarding the merits of works of art sent to the White House.
