My dear Mr. Dekic:

The President has asked me to thank you for the very attractive cane which you sent to him.
He is glad to have the cane and wants you to know how grateful he is for the thoughtful interest which prompted you to send it to him, and also for your expression of appreciation.

DATE July 18, 1935

TO: Mr. Williams

FROM: Elizabeth Wickenden

SUBJECT: Stick for President

This walking or sitting stick was given to me in Pennsylvania by a transient to bring to the President. This transient has been a steel worker all his life but is now past the age where he will be required to work in the steel industry. He therefore intended to take up some other occupation and taught himself to do this kind of work which I feel he does with much skill.

August 1, 1935

Mr. Marvin H. McIntyre
Assistant Secretary to the President
The White House
Washington, D. C.

This method of expressing appreciation to the President for his interest in the work of the transients is being used. Further information regarding the work on this stick is contained in the attached correspondence.

Dear Mac:

Here is a stick which was made by one of our transients for the President.

I am enclosing copy of the correspondence concerning it.

Sincerely yours,

The camp presented here a fine example of his efforts. The woods used therein, some one hundred (100) acres, were all native woods growing in or about the camp. The material or dies were used and many hours were spent in order to find suitable colors. There were many (50) hours of painstaking efforts consumed in its making.

Aubrey Williams
Executive Director.

Mr. Delle wishes the President to know that the so-called "Forgotten men" realize and appreciate his excellent right to give them opportunities for better and more secure living.

The attached sheet gives the names of the various kinds of woods, their number, and location in the camp.

Very sincerely yours,

DATE July 12, 1935

TO: Mr. Williams

FROM: Elizabeth Wickenden

SUBJECT: Stick for President

This walking or sitting stick was given to me in Pennsylvania by a transient to bring to the President. This transient has been a steel worker all his life but is now past the age where he will be reemployed in the steel industry. He therefore determined to take up some other occupation and taught himself to do this inlay work which I feel he does with remarkable skill and imagination. When the Work Relief Bill was under consideration he wished to take this method of expressing his appreciation to the President for his interest in the welfare of the unemployed. Further information regarding the work on this stick is contained in the attached correspondence.

President's efforts in behalf of the unemployed and said that he was desirous of somehow showing his appreciation by making the President a cane.

The cane presented herewith represents his efforts. The woods used therein, some one hundred and twenty-six (126) pieces, were all native woods growing in or about the Camp site. No colored material or dyes were used and many hours for search were required in order to find suitable colors. There were approximately ninety (90) hours of painstaking efforts consumed in its making.

Mr. Dekic wishes the President to know that the so-called "Forgotten men" realize and appreciate his steadfast fight to give them opportunities for better and more secure living.

The attached sheet gives the names of the various pieces of woods, their number, and location in the cane.

Very sincerely yours,

Although I am an old man and unemployed, I thought of doing some delicate hand work and send the same to you our chief executive.

The work although it may not appear an artistic piece of work, it is hand made and furthermore the wooden chain is one whole piece. It took me some time to do it and I hope you will appreciate as an artistic piece of work.

The top thread chain is made of 48 links representing

Hoping that this will be highly appreciated by

My dear Mr. McIntyre:

I am sending by parcel post under some date to the President in your care a book entitled "The Next Five Years" just published in England & while intended as a five year plan for England is in large measure applicable to America. The book is written by a no. of the outstanding practical economists of the world and approved by 152 prominent men & women, representative of all shades of thought. It is in my opinion important that Mr. Roosevelt have this book before going west as it not only wholly justifies the President's position from a conservative point of view but suggests infinitely more drastic measures in some directions than have yet been taken. It has not es

210 / 100
yet been published in America & I apologize
for sending a marked copy but I have none other & feel the book of such importance to him at this time ^{that} I am sending the soiled copy rather than await the arrival of a fresh
one. You will note that among the names behind the book are Sir Walter Layton, Editor of the London Economist, Sir Arthur Salter, Mr. Macmillan M.P., Lord Lytton who you will recall in connection with the League of Nations, and Mr. Blackett of the House of Lords. It would seem to be an invaluable book to the President right now.

There are however certain features of the book with which I personally am not in accord so far as America is concerned rather than ~~for~~ different circumstances existing here than there or differences in temperament between the two peoples. Thus I am against a policy of excessive rise in money. I am against it politically in that the continued fall in income is making it exceedingly difficult for large

Groups in the middle class to balance their individual budgets in view of the price rise which has taken place & consequently is turning them against the "New Deal". I am against it economically as it forces unwarranted speculation & an artificial boom which may result in a real collapse at a most inopportune time politically. And I am against it financially as I know the bank & other wreckage that followed in the train of a similar policy around 1897 in England. In consequence there is an old saying in London that England can stand anything but a 30% rediscount rate. Furthermore easy money is conducive to bad loans and as our main difficulty at present is too much bad debt it can only prove harmful in the long run. It was both wise & necessary to reduce the value of money. It is neither wise nor necessary, to destroy its income particularly if we are to continue the income tax as the basis of our tax system, ^{and} to encourage investment

P.P. 7.

as distinguished from speculation & outright gambling, and intend to protect the small investor. A fair price for money is as important as a fair price for anything else. America, as distinguished from England is prone to gamble.
I am also against further large public works,
other than those already authorized. The present 4.8 billion should carry us until 1937 if not expended on defensive works which would only have the effect of maintaining artificially high price levels at a time when they should be reduced, & so preventing the necessary readjustments in monopoly prices. Besides we are moving toward stabilization & large public works schemes are incompatible with a balanced budget which is a necessary prerequisite to stabilization.
Furthermore if we are halting the peak of tax rates & the budget is now to be balanced, the time has come for retrenchment. & expenses must be cut & not increased.

P.P. 7.
9-D

NORWOOD FARMS

As to giving the Banks, the status of public utilities, it should be recalled that Banking in England is largely confined to the big five and that is branch banking. Thus there is already monopoly de facto. It is thus a short step to monopoly de jure. With us there are thousands of banks. Competition and ~~is~~ the unit as distinguished from the branch banking system. This does not however mean that I do not believe in real control over our banks or adequate inspection for I most certainly do, but I believe if the new Federal Reserve Board is worth its salt that it can do all that is necessary in these regards under the late Act.

As to Agriculture. England obviously desires to expand her crops. With this in view loans against commodities are suggested. With us apparently the desire is to curtail production.

P.P. 7.

Free prices are best to attain this objective.
the difference between the price the farmer
gets & parity to be made up to the farmer
through processing or other tax.*

With the foregoing exceptions, the book
seems to me to be excellent & these exceptions in turn are largely based on differences in temperament or differences in facts and not on principle.

I sincerely hope the President will find it
both gratifying & helpful.

Sincerely yours,

* At present we are stimulating crop expansion
through loans and crop contraction through benefit

November 2, 1935

My dear Mr. Ingling:

With reference to your telephonic inquiry, I am enclosing herewith a copy of a letter which had been sent only this morning to Mr. Frank Drugan, Director of Foreign Relations, House of Pacific Relations, California Pacific International Exposition, San Diego, thanking him for his courtesy in shipping the vase which was presented by the House of Japan through Consul T. Hori to the President when he visited the Exposition.

I also enclose the letter addressed to the President by Mr. Drugan, which was transmitted to the Department on October 21 by Miss LeHand. On October 23 inquiry was made of Miss LeHand as to whether it would be necessary to draft a letter of appreciation and thanks to Consul Hori who is mentioned as having presented the vase, or whether the President had orally thanked the Consul at the time of its presentation. No information in the matter was received by the Department, and further inquiry was accordingly made at the White House on October 31, when it was learned that Miss LeHand was at Hyde Park. Thereupon, a letter of acknowledgment to Mr. Drugan, thanking him for his courtesy in transmitting the vase, was drafted, and sent out this morning.

I should be glad to learn whether further action is desired in the matter.

Sincerely yours,

Sir:

Acknowledgment is made by reference to the letter from the White House dated October 13 addressed to the President at the request of the House of Representatives, the vase which was presented to the President when he visited the Exposition. The vase in question has been received, and I have been directed to convey to you an expression of thanks for your courtesy in the matter.

The House of Pacific Relations

At this moment questions of life and death are convulsing civilization. A great moral disaster has overtaken the world. A definite crisis exists. There is dire need of concentrating human intelligence, in a new way, on the problem of saving civilization from its threatened disaster.

To date, the fate of civilization has been let loosely depend upon the success or failure of successive disarmament conferences. The result has been increased discord; and, yet, there remains a simple formula whereby we can, if we will, make human harmony attractive. If, instead of deliberately getting together to argue and quarrel, we get together deliberately to delight one another, our international parties may become popular.

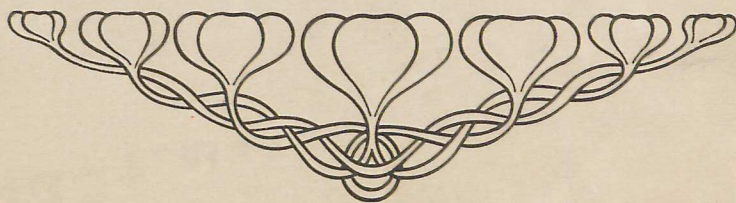

The earth would be a better place today, in which to live, if nations could find an outlet for warped mind-forces that are seeking vent in exaggerating the alarms with which the international air is filled. The world needs a healthy distraction from the quarrels now oppressing it. The House of Pacific Relations aims to provide a natural, healthful means of keeping the international mind from going insane under the sordid strain that world-events are putting upon it. The House of Pacific Relations invites the nations of the world to live together and play together in a spirit of goodfellowship that can knit them together more closely than disarmament conferences or other types of peace-societies that use the form of debate to provoke not agreement but disagreement.

The House of Pacific Relations, at the Exposition, is not one house. It is a collection of beautiful hacienda-type Spanish bungalows, built around an ever-green lawn. To foreign nations these bungalow-headquarters have been contributed. Representatives of the British Empire, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Italy, Japan, Germany, Yugoslavia, Mexico, Portugal, Norway, China, Sweden, Irish Free State, and a group of nineteen Latin-American nations, including Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay, and Venezuela, are comfortably established in these homes.

Each of the participating nations provides, within the year, a two-day program composed of such social diversions as are characteristic of its people, calculated to win appreciation and promote ties of good will. Music, so potent to promote peace, constitutes a part of these programs. So, too, does drama, the dance, pageantry, and athletics. Nationwide broadcasts of the programs are released on the great networks. The world constitutes the audience.

Through this cooperative endeavor to "delight one another," the House of Pacific Relations aims to offer a practical contribution to harmonious international concord.

FRANK DRUGAN,
Director.

Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt,
President of the United States,

My dear Mr. President:

As one fisherman to another, I am mailing you under separate cover, a solid silver hand made sail fish with chain designed for a four in hand tie pin, or clasp.

I hope you will like it. It is a small token from a crippled veteran who appreciates the almost super-human task you are engaged in-trying to bring about a more equitable distribution of the Nation's goods for the benefit of all Americans.

The fish will speak for its self as to the quality of the work. I am partially paralyzed on one side and have taken up this work trying to be useful in a small way. I want you to notice the correct proportions (and you will know for the reason that you have caught W. Indian fish) and the artistic manner it is made. I use a single silver wire and with skill and patience fabricate the body of the fish.

With kindest regards and esteem, I am,

My dear Miss Le Hand:

Though I lost my left leg in the War, the years since elapsed have shown me that even the maimed can find much worth living for. Literature and a life close to nature have helped me to live more contentedly than most cripples.

My first novel, THE WHIRLPOOL, is to be published by Macmillan of London on January 20th. Because President Roosevelt is the prototype of my hero (a young man who is stricken with paralysis, and achieves recovery and happiness after a long and lonely battle), I have dedicated the book to him. I hope he will forgive my effrontery. I shall take the liberty of sending you two copies of the book, with the request that you keep one yourself and present one to the President.

It is in your power to make me very happy. Will you please ask President Roosevelt to sign the enclosed excerpt from his Inaugural Address? I sincerely think it is the most eloquent piece of oratory since Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.

With very many thanks, I am

Sincerely yours,

MEMORANDUM FOR MISS LEHAND:

Clarence N. Durant, of the Massachusetts State Assembly, called at the White House. Among other things, which I have taken up elsewhere, he mentioned that a desk, used by the President's father while at the Hyde School (a preparatory school at Lee, Massachusetts) is still in existence, and if the President wants it, it can be secured and sent to Hyde Park.

My Dear President -

Am placing in

program of the Ursuline Pageant,
given here in Cleveland the night of Dec. 8, 1935. This is just one of the fine results of your excellent foresightedness, and graciously do I wish to thank you.

Had it not been for the W.P.A.

could not have been produced.

sent an audience of 10,500 happy persons home reflecting on the good and true that is really existing, and will cause your good deeds and actions to come to a very successful fruition.

The Wauline Pageant was a superb
answer to your ill-advised critics who say we are going communistic,
or that you wish to be a dictator.

Beautiful, enlightening music, drama, pageants - more and more of them - and certainly you will lead, as you have been,
this country back to what is good,
true and lasting. Please believe me this W.B.A. orchestra and their music left a beautiful imprint as to what you truthfully countenance.

Wishing you and yours a very joyful
Christmas, and a happy, prosperous
new year.

Very sincerely yours,
Walter Doyle.

8,000 AT HALL SEE URSULINE PAGEANT

400 Years of Order's Service Shown by 1,200 in Colorful Garb.

A pageant as gorgeous in color as Joseph's coat, performed by 1,200 children, to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the Ursuline order, was given before 8,000 at Public Hall last night.

Costumes from the veil and head-dress of the sixteenth century through hoop skirts and bustles to streamline clothes were worn by the children of 31 parochial schools and three academies where Ursuline sisters teach.

The audience formed almost as much of a pageant as the actors. It was patched with black and white blocks of the massed habits of sisters of many orders, some from Toledo, Tiffin and Youngstown.

At the center near the front flamed the amaranth vestments of Bishop Michael J. Gallagher of Detroit and Bishop Joseph Schrembs. To each side of them were the priests, representing most of the churches of the Cleveland diocese.

Order's Founder in Pageant.

The pageant was written by members of the order in Cleveland. A voice that seemed to issue from the roof explained the action in rhyming couplets while soft music played.

Girls dancing with rainbow-colored balloons and nymphs scattering colored leaves and waving shimmering scarfs represented the godless sixteenth century, when the world was at play and needed a saint to redeem it.

Here, a child with long curls, Marcella Schneider, appeared as the young St. Angela, to be founder of the Ursuline order. She saw a white vision of a woman, the church, calling her.

Isabel Wilke played the part of the heroine at 15. When she became a saint the role was carried on by Rosanne Palmer. M. J. O'Connell, as Pope Paul III, decreed the founding of the order.

The second part showed Rt. Rev. Amadeus Rappe, first bishop of Cleveland, entering the convent garden in Boulogne-sur-Mer, where he appealed to the nuns to help him in Cleveland, where "they don't know what a nun looks like." This part was played by Jack Cusick.

Attendance Pleases Bishop.

Response to the bishop's plea was made by Mother Marie of the Annunciation, played by Beatrice McGannon, who came to Cleveland to establish the Ursuline order here in 1850.

The story continued to the present time, and was concluded with a finale in which appeared several hundred children from the schools in which Ursuline nuns teach.

Here Bishop Schrembs walked to the stage and said:

"The presence of such a magnificent audience on such a night with rain and wind outside is proof of the love and veneration the people of Cleveland have for the Ursulines.

"I was deeply impressed as the story of Angela Merici was unfolded before our eyes, and it is my hope and prayer that her example in responding to the voice of God may be followed by many more young people of our present day, for the harvest is great and the laborers are few.

"I wish to thank the Ursuline sisters of Cleveland and the other communities who have come in their sisterly devotion to witness the pageant for the great work all are doing in the cause of Christian education."

Will you accept a small Xmas present from a fly tier. I'm sure you are a great fly fisherman, and I have often wanted to send you some of my own hand tied flies.

I hope you will like them and you will find some time to use them. I am not a very good fly fisherman but I don't get much time to fish and we don't have very

To the Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt,
President of the United States,

Dear Mr. President;

Thank you for your kind reply,
just received, to my letter of Dec. 11th.

Please accept with my compliments, the enclosed photograph of one of our portraits of my Great-Grandfather, Samuel Russell, 1789--1862, founder of the House of Russell and Co. in Canton.

The portrait, hardly larger than the photograph,
was painted in China and is in rich, warm coloring.

There is a family tradition that Captain Russell carried as many as 300 white linen shirts on his voyages from China to the Connecticut River!

You probably know Cap. Robert Bennet Forbes Auto-

the old Firm.

The "Samuel Russell" was, I believe, built by
