Dear Mr. President; —

Knowing your fondness for boats, and after due consultation with our mutual friends, the Hancocks griggins, I am sending you some pictures of the Liberty Ship,
Hannibal Hamlin,
which was named for
Vice President Hamlin,
my great grand father.

I waited, as you see.
Many thanks to you

I had the honor of sponsoring the ship, when she was launched last March, at that wonderful place, the South Portland Shipbuilding Corporation Shipyard. My family and I were much pleased that the fine Captain of the S.S. Hannibal Hamlin should bear the name of Delano! We feel sure that if anyone could pilot "our boat" safely thru dangerous waters, it would be someone bearing such an illustrious name.

To me, such men, and their crews, are truly the "unsung heroes" of this War, don't you feel that way?

I am taking the liberty, also of enclosing some newspaper clippings, which I hope may interest you.

Altho our branch of the Hamlin family has been to date "deeply darkly" Republican, this generation, of which I am the "Matriarch", has always voted for you. We hope to again, too!

My father, Charles Eugene, and the late Charles Sumner Hamlin, were cousins, and at Harvard together, and it is Mrs. Charles S. — come to know these very charming Griggins. Our places

Our present "Hannibal" is My little red cocker also has "joined the Navy" — only in the reserves, as it were!

He desires to send his respectful salutations to

I once had the pleasure of meeting Mrs. Roosevelt, at a

May I please be remembered to her? With all good wishes

Dear Miss Tully,—

I have been very slow in acting on Mrs. Griggs's advice—, but I "came down" with a very bad attack of bronchitis (brought on by too powerful a dose of my yearly innoculations!) right after she kindly sent me the letter, and wasn't up to writing the President. Maine Ship Launching Recalls Career of Hannibal Hamlin

Papers Give Recognition to a Great Statesman at Same Time that Hollywood Gives History a Fantastic Twist; He Was First to Hear Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation

By OSCAR SHEPARD

It was, of course, fitting that one of the Liberty ships recently launched by the South Portland Shipbuilding Corporation should have been named for Hannibal Hamlin of Bangor, vice president of the United States during the Civil War, and was christened by his great-granddaughter, Miss Louise Hamlin, now of New York City.

In recognition of the event, a New York newspaper, after twice interviewing Miss Hamlin, devoted a page to the life of the great Maine statesman who came so near the presidency. Remaining members of the family were gratified, for the story recorded a number of his more distinguished accomplishments. It was illustrated, too, by reproductions of several priceless family mementoes. But one may regret a little the article's caption, which read: "The real forgotten man". Twice, in the paragraphs that follow, there occurs a similar phrase.

Forgotten?

Not in this part of the America that Hannibal Hamlin helped to preserve and whose institutions are once again in grave peril.

Walk through Postoffice Mall, squarely in the city's heart, and you will see his statue—as thousands do every day. Charles E. Tefft, Bangor and New York sculptor, did his work well. The figure seems almost to speak. It is as though high courage and serene faith had been caught and reflected in enduring bronze.

Forgotten?

Walk through the mall, up Harlow street and into the Public Library. Here, in the "historical room" at the right of the rotunda, are other reminders of the once vice president. There is a bronze bust, which also is a speaking likeness, by the late Valentine Henneman. It is still, technically, the property of the Hannibal Hamlin Memorial committee, all but three of whose members—Clarence C. Stetson, Wilfrid A. Hennessy and Haven Sawyer—have died. There is a portrait of Hamlin in his later years, given to the library by the estate of Joab W. Palmer, and there is a painting of Mrs. Hamlin by Waldo Peirce, the Bangor artist.

VALUABLE BOOK

Forgotten?

Descend from the historical room to the reference desk, ask for "The Life and Times of Hannibal Hamlin", and you will be surprised to learn how many others have also asked for it in the course of a year. It is a ponderous volume—617 pages—which is not only the one completely authentic story of the statesman's life but is an exceedingly valuable review of the times in which he lived: a panorama of the American political scene.

It was written by his grandson, the late Charles Eugene Hamlin, who made it the study of years. It is easier reading than the average biography, for Mr. Hamlin was at one time a newspaper man—a good one. He had the true reporter's gift of writing vigorously and concisely, delving beneath the surface, and separating the wheat from the chaff.

It would have been a first-class idea could a copy of this volume have been put straight beneath the collective noses of the Hollywood executives responsible for a recent, widely-discussed motion picture. It would have been a better idea could they have been made to read Chapter Thirty-six, captioned "The History of (Andrew) Johnson's Nomination."

The picture was "Tennessee Johnson"; and, when recently it was shown in Bangor, this writer referred to it as "thrillingly good". It was—so far as able acting and generally intelligent direction were concerned. But it was an almost fantastic perversion of history, as history is recorded and understood in this part of the country.

It sought to show that Johnson's nomination was due in large part to Abraham Lincoln, who trusted him, despite his drunkenness and explosive temper, and hence sought to make him heir to the Lincoln policies. And Johnson's impeachment, as the picture has it, was due to his steadfast adherence to those policies against powerful opposition. Hence, despite certain personal faults, he is painted as a knight in shining political armor.

That absurdity, as people in this part of the country believe it to be, went all over the United States—thanks to Hollywood.

HOLLYWOOD REFUTED

What was the truth?

I quote from Chapter Thirty-six, page 461, of the Charles Hamlin book:

"The action of the Baltimore Union Convention of 1864 in renominating Mr. Lincoln and in retiring Mr. Hamlin created general surprise at the time, and was the subject of controversy after Mr. Hamlin's death. The behavior of Johnson while President caused the party that had honored him to inquire who was responsible for his nomination for Vice President. But the facts were not given to the public during Mr. Hamlin's life out of deference to his wishes, and they are presented chiefly because an attempt was made after Mr. Hamlin's lips were closed forever to represent President Lincoln as the cause of the substitution of Andrew Johnson.

"This was a slander on the honor of Abraham Lincoln. He not only desired Mr. Hamlin's renomination, but he also endeavored to bring it about at even his own risk, and finally he was terribly disgusted both for political and personal reasons over the selection of Johnson as his associate.

"Mr. Hamlin's reasons for maintaining silence will be readily appreciated by those who understood his character. He was inexpressibly pained and disgusted at Johnson's conduct as President, but he believed 'the least said, soonest mended'. If he had allowed it to be known that Charles Sumner was the chief cause of his defeat, that would have impaired Mr. Sumner's usefulness, and increased the animosity in the Republican party without accomplishing any good".

Read again Charles Hamlin's ringing sentences, which were written in 1899: "The facts were not given to the public during Mr. Hamlin's life * * * and they are now presented chiefly because an attempt was made after Mr. Hamlin's lips were closed forever to represent President Lincoln as the cause of the substitution of Andrew Johnson. This was a slander on the honor of Abraham Lincoln." Yet that is exactly the representation now made in the picture. And Hamlin is never content with mere assertions. There is no space to reprint the pages that follow; but again and again he cites chapter and verse. Cites them with a veritable avalanche of detail.

Therefore, as Maine people seemingly have reason to believe, we get a plain example of Hollywood fiction vs. historical fact. At best, of a controversy in which Hollywood has listened to only one side. But what we believe to be the fiction went over the United States, thanks to the picture, in a form the average man would readily understand; what we believe to be the fact is buried in a few relatively unknown books in New England libraries. Books, however, readily available for research. Nor is this the first time we have suffered at its hands. When will the city of the cinema really do some research work and give the long-suffering State of Maine a break?

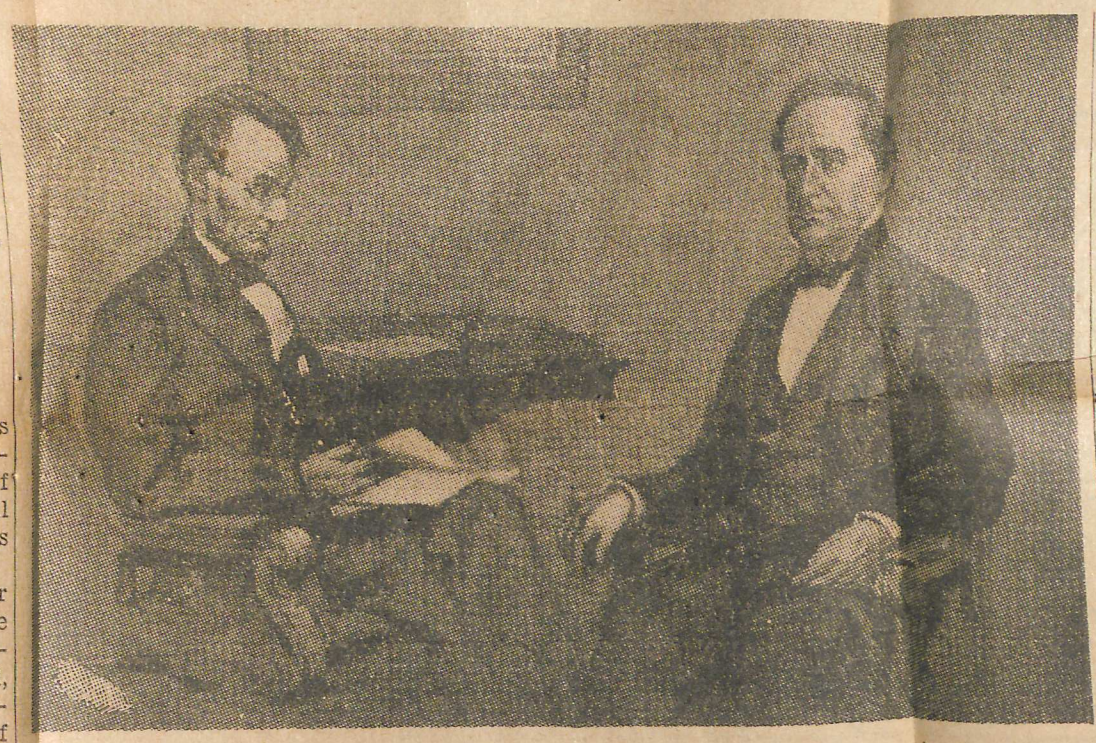

A MEETING WITH LINCOLN

The book—a mine for information—makes known that Hamlin was the first to hear Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation. This was on June 18, 1862, more than a month before the President's cabinet knew there was to be such a document. It appears that Hamlin, having decided to pay a visit to his [illegible] Bangor, called upon Lin-

"'Oh yes, there is; at least you can make some suggestions', replied Mr. Lincoln, laughingly, and he repeated his invitation.

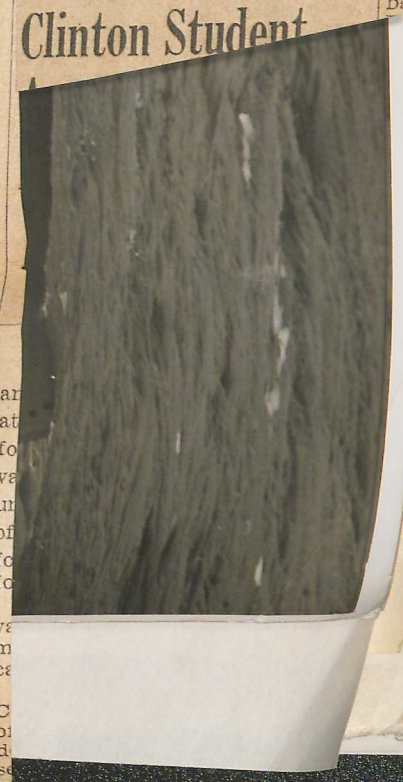

"'Finally', said Mr. Hamlin in his account of this famous interview, 'I did make, I believe, three suggestions, two of which Mr. Lincoln accepted'."

This was all that Hamlin would ever tell. He always held that the Emancipation Proclamation was Lincoln's own, and no one else should claim any credit for it whatever.

A LITTLE KNOWN EPISODE IN HISTORY—An unusual picture, showing Abraham Lincoln reading to Hannibal Hamlin an early draft of the Emancipation Proclamation. Thus the Bangor man learned of the famous document long before it was known to the Congress.

This was on June 18, 1862, more than a month before the President's cabinet knew there was to be such a document. It appears that Hamlin, having decided to pay a visit to his home in Bangor, called upon Lincoln to make the fact known.

To quote from the book, verbatim:

"A smile came over Mr. Lincoln's face, and he said in a significant way:

"'No, you don't intend to do anything of the sort'.

"'Oh yes, but I do', said Mr. Hamlin, not quite understanding.

"'No', replied Mr. Lincoln, 'you do not intend anything of the sort; in fact, Mr. Vice-President, you will not leave Washington at present'.

"Mr. Hamlin at once saw that the President had something in mind of unusual importance, and said:

"'Of course I will not think of doing so if you wish. otherwise. You are the commander-in-chief, and I am under orders'.

"'And I order you to sit in that chair', continued the President, laughing, 'and afterwards to ride with me to supper'.

"In a short time the President and Vice-President, escorted by a file of soldiers, rode horseback out to the Soldiers' Home, which Mr. Lincoln occupied as a summer residence. After supper President Lincoln invited Vice President Hamlin into his library, and after locking the door, said.

"'Mr. Hamlin, you have been repeatedly urging me to issue a proclamation of emancipation freeing the slaves. I have decided to yield to your advice in the matter and that of friends—at the same time, as I may say, following my own judgment. Now listen to me while I read this paper. We will correct it together as I go on.'

"Saying this, Mr. Lincoln opened a draw in his desk and took therefrom the first draft of the military proclamation freeing four millions of slaves.

"President and Vice-President then sat down, and Mr. Lincoln slowly read the instrument to his associate, after which he asked for criticisms and suggestions.

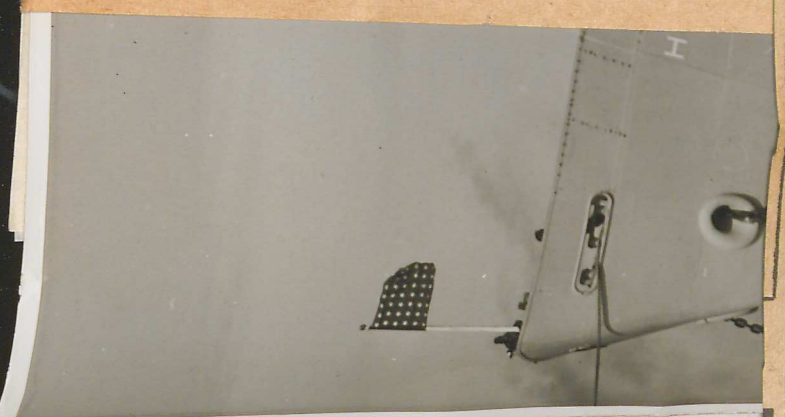

"'There is no criticism to be made', Mr. Hamlin replied.

Lincoln's Lost Leader—

Liberty Ship's Launching Recalls Hamlin, Forgotten Vice-President

From: "Life and Times of Hannibal Hamlin" by C.E. Hamlin

The Real Forgotten Man

IT was the 49th Liberty ship to slide down the ways at the South Portland Shipbuilding Corporation.

Fittingly enough, the 10,500-ton vessel, named after Hannibal Hamlin, one of Maine's most distinguished sons and Vice-President in Lincoln's first term, was christened by his great-granddaughter, Miss Louise Hamlin, of New York City.

However, as Miss Hamlin, a retired high school librarian, later explained in her Riverside Drive apartment, "virtually no one at the ceremony had any idea that my great-grandparent had also been a pioneer in maritime safety measures, that he first paved the way for strict enforcement of laws to make U. S. navigation as safe as possible."

It was during his first term as a Senator that the long-forgotten right-hand man of Lincoln worked long and hard to establish the needed reforms. Consulting hundreds of navigators, steamship owners, scientists and travelers, Hamlin, with Senator John Davis, of Massachusetts, framed the bill which demanded that all ships be licensed, required stiff examinations for pilots and engineers, made it mandatory that all craft be equipped with lifeboats, fire-buckets, axes and numerous other safety devices, and provided heavy penalties for violators.

Hamlin, who was born at Paris Hill, Maine, the same year as Lincoln, worked on the bill for two years before it became law, in 1852. The certificate of inspection that the traveler finds in every public passenger ship in this country is a living testimony to his untiring efforts.

Rising from Lawyer to Congressman to Senator, under the Democratic party, the twice-married statesman, filled with Unionist sympathies, changed his political ties in 1856 to become Republican Governor of Maine. This office he held only a month, being returned, under the Republican banner, to the Senate, where it was felt he could best serve his party.

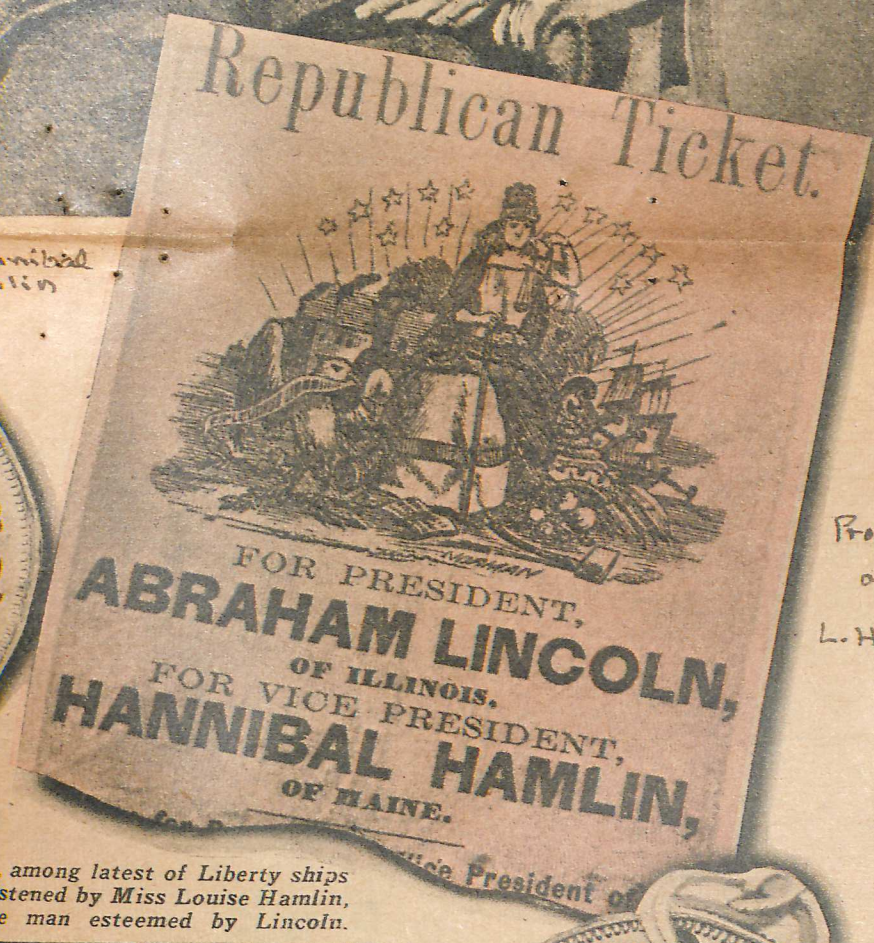

With Lincoln, whose assassination occurred 78 years ago this month, Hamlin served with marked ability as Vice-President, from 1860 to 1864. And not the least of his contributions was his part in furthering the Emancipation Proclamation. Yet he is forgotten.

One night, after dining at the White House, Lincoln turned to him and said: "Mr. Hamlin, you have been repeatedly urging me to issue a proclamation of emancipation freeing the slaves. I have concluded to yield to your advice. Now listen, while I read this paper; we will correct it together as I go on."

Reflecting his usual modesty, Hamlin, who later became Minister to Spain, would countenance no share of credit for the document which freed four million slaves. Here indeed is America's forgotten man!

X My mistake — Should read Soldiers' Home, wh. the Lincolns were using as a Summer residence.

MEMORANDUM FOR GENERAL WATSON:

Dear Pa:

With reference to your memorandum of May 7th, together with its enclosures which are returned herewith, do you really think this requires a letter for the President's signature, since it is noted that the Ambassador hopes that you may feel able to write a line on behalf of the President? I am inclined to agree with Lord Halifax and accordingly have drafted a brief reply for your signature. If you do not agree, I shall be glad to draft one for the President's signature.

BRITISH EMBASSY,

April 30th, 1943.

My dear Pa,

I shall hope to be seeing you one of these days, but meanwhile I send you the enclosed with the covering letter that came to me, in the hope that you may feel able to write the man a line on behalf of the President to say that he has received it with much interest.

I don't suppose he will want to look at it himself but it will make the fellow happy if he thinks it has got to his desk. I don't want his letter back so tear it up.

I hope you had a good trip. You must have been kept pretty busy.

Yours ever,

The Right Honourable The Viscount Halifax,
The British Embassy,
WASHINGTON,
U.S.A.

My Lord,

I have the honour to send your Lordship copies of a pamphlet which I had published in the autumn of last year, and am making so bold as to ask your Lordship to hand one with the letter attached to President Roosevelt, and accept the other for yourself. I am taking this course on the advice of a friend in the American Diplomatic Service here to whom I confided that I had sent this pamphlet with a letter to the President soon after publication but had not had an acknowledgement. My friend advised me to take this course as he felt quite sure that my communication would have been acknowledged had it been received.

I trust, my Lord, that you will forgive me for trespassing on your time in this way and that you will find some compensation in reading the contents of this pamphlet which seems to have escaped the attention of most historians.

I have the honour, my Lord, to remain,

Your most obedient servant,

F. Hourani

22, Pine Road,
Didsbury,
MANCHESTER, Eng.

His Excellency President Franklin D. Roosevelt,

Sir,

I am taking the liberty of sending you the enclosed leaflet in the hope that you will find it of some interest. In doing this I am following, ever so humbly, in the footsteps of Abel Heywood, the worthy Mayor of this city who early in 1863 forwarded to your illustrious predecessor an address and resolutions from the working-men of Manchester on the burning subject of the day. These are fully reported in this leaflet along with President Lincoln's reply. The last sentence in this reply declaring " that whatever misfortune may befall your country or my own the peace and friendship which now exists between the two nations will be, as it shall be my desire to make them, perpetual", has such a striking resemblance to the sentiments which you have so often expressed to the British people that one feels it is the same voice and the same prophetic spirit.

There is yet another reason which has emboldened me to take the liberty of addressing you thus. It is that I am a graduate of the American University of Beyrout and therefore I feel I may address myself to the Head of that Great Nation which, under God, has b been the chief instrument, through this and other humanitarian institutions in the regeneration of the Near East.

I have also visited the United States in 1929 as an Elder Delegate from the Presbyterian Church of England to the Presbyterian Alliance Conference held in Boston in June of that year, and saw for myself as I travelled through the length and breadth of the land how my fellow-countrymen from Syria, Lebanon and Palestine live a happy and prosperous life under the protection of your glorious flag.

Having known and seen all this and having followed very closely the trend of events in the present struggle with especial attention to the part which you, Sir, have played, may I be allowed to invoke with all my heart God's blessing upon you and your people.

" The Lord bless you and keep you. The Lord make His face to shine upon you and be gracious unto you. The Lord lift up His countenance upon you and give you peace".

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Yours very sincerely,

F. Hourani

June 10, 1943

The White House,
Washington, D. C.

Dear General Watson:

This letter follows a telephone conversation with my friend Stephen Early, who in turn referred me to Miss Roberta Barrows, and she suggested that the best way for bringing the subject of our conversation to your attention was to present it in a brief note.

I have today received from Senator Alice Kamokila Campbell* of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii a wire saying she is arriving in Washington next week to present to the President a gift from the wives of the Hawaiian homesteaders of the Islands.

I understand this gift is a calabash (a large Hawaiian bowl of koa) and for the purpose of its presentation a me-le (chant) has been recorded, expressing the sentiments of the Hawaiian homesteaders.

Senator Campbell is a resident of the Island of Molokai where the chief Hawaiian homesteading project is located, and is very actively interested in this attempt to rehabilitate the Hawaiian race. She is a sister of Princess Kawananakoa, whose late husband, David Kawananakoa, would have succeeded Queen Liliuokalani in the event the Hawaiian monarchy had been perpetuated.

In view of the fact that she has come from such a long distance and from a war zone, any arrangements that you can make to carry out this mission in an appropriate way will be greatly appreciated.

Yours sincerely,

The President has asked that you be good enough to have prepared in the Department, a letter of thanks for the President's signature, to Senator Alice Kamokila Campbell, of the Legislature of Hawaii, for the lovely bowl (calabash) which she presented to him today. Senator Campbell called upon the President this morning.

I attach herewith a copy of letter addressed to me by Delegate Farrington from Hawaii, which describes the purpose of this gift. It was the President's thought that I should also send you the calabash as it might aid in the preparation of the letter.

Thank you.

It is a distinct pleasure for me to inform you that the June 1943 graduating class of The High School of Commerce of New York City, dedicated its Yearbook to you and your memorable Four Freedoms. A copy of the book accompanies this letter.

This is truly a war class, born during the early days of the global conflict and now, immediately after commencement, ready to enter into the service of its country. I speak for the class when I say that every member of it feels privileged to serve under you, and anticipates the immediate future with that special excitement of youth. The Yearbook indicates this in its theme, its stories and pictures. It is typical of a big American school of today.

Dear Mr President:-

Please believe me when I say I still feel somewhat presumptuous to write to You and send this little book.

As though I had better spiritual advice to offer than those about You.

But for many months as I have gone to prayer, it seemed I should send it.

I was a little like Jonah I would not follow through.

But I have come to the place where I am more afraid of offending God than man.

So I prepare it now with prayer that God will lay the cloak of His protecting love — Wisdom and Strength about You for the trying days ahead.

Especially fitting is todays ~~reading~~ June 29. please read it or have someone read it to You.

It is not nessary that I write much, the book speaks for itself.

Every days reading is the essence of Faith in compact form and speaks with beautiful simplicity.

Caleb and Joshua Saw God first and their giants second;

So I hope will you, no matter how big they get, or how threatening, right here at home or abroad.

Never in the history of our Country has any President had to face so many Giants political or otherwise. But You are not there by accident, But by Providence;

So You are the man to face them.

I pray that the Dear Lord will work through You as the Joshua of today, to set the example of bringing unselfishness out of the tangle of selfishness and greed of today. To some thing of the Vision You must have carried in Your heart these many years.

My warm regards to our Dear First Lady I saw and heard her talk when she was with us in Canton.

Sincere best wishes to you and Yours, from an ordinary Woman of America trying to be a good Soldier of our Country and just a little better one for God. Mrs Myra Hartman.

I am sending by "special messenger" a plan to which I hope you will find time to give consideration. Should such a plan as the I.P.U. eventually achieve material existance it will need behind it the brains and heart of a man of your calibre. If you are not too tired by the Presidential labors and when you have retired from your present work it is my prayer that your genius may choose to exert itself in an even greater humanitarian capacity than has yet graced it. The possibilities for even a greater work and position of responsibility than you have yet undertaken lie in this plan.

Dear Madam

I was very glad to receive your letter of thanks written June 24th. I was afraid that the small parcel containing souvenir, had gone astray, though I said "letter of explanation following"! Please forgive me for being so remiss, but I'm old & tired & have sole care of a mentally afflicted son, who has to be cared for at home, as we cannot pay Sanitarium charges: It has been so hot too, & I just been "all in"! We love our son. He is 27 now, was one of the grandest babies ever seen, until 3½ yrs old, when he began to go the wrong way in intellectual pursuits, & gradually lost his speech & understanding: He is very love him very, very much or we couldn't carry on, he is all we have!

I didn't mean to tell you this, but
I got started & had to explain!
The little photograph of our loved
"Winston", was one of a set of rest buttons which my husband bought when he was young. he thinks it was 1904! There were photos of Lloyd George, Lord Haldane, Byrne, don't know title or if any, & two others besides Mr Churchill.
The one of the latter & Lord Haldane are the only ones left, we have always set great store by "Winnie" & cherished it, although it is of no particular monetary value:

during Mr Roosevelt's first campaign & liked him very much. I was glad to read all the nice things which Cecil Brown said about him, in "Suez to Singapore": Dr Harvey Cushing saw my boy, but he said there was nothing to be done. We were corresponding with him again, from New Haven, in the hope that conditions might be different in my boy's case & also that methods might be better now. The Dr died before we again got to see him: However, we visited another specialist later, who said he would just have to go through the same thing as at "Mass. General" in 1921! that was before Dr Cushing saw him! It was a terrible time for all of us & he got nearly frightened to death, & made much worse, so I couldn't face it all again would rather he & I, faced our Maker, than that again. Thank you for reading this. Oh! & please, I'm not asking for charity!

Dear President Roosevelt:

Last year, newspaper reports stated that your son, returning from the Pacific, brought back with him some mangoes, of which reports stated you were very fond. However, an accident occurred, and the mangoes were destroyed.

Remembering this, and desiring to express in this small way my appreciation for the great service you are doing for the benefit of our country and mankind, I am sending you some mangoes, and trust that you will enjoy them.

Yours most respectfully,

President Franklin D. Roosevelt,
The White House,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Mr. President:

Well, "All I know is what I read in the papers."

Saw last season where your son tried to bring in some mangoes, but the Plant Board, or some other nefarious organization confiscated them.

I am sending by today's express a small box of Hadens, grown on my vest pocket home lot in Hollywood.

They should get about as mellow as a Georgia peach (of the tree variety, I mean) before serving. And we Florida Crackers serve them in various ways; on cereal, as fruit salad, with gelatine jelly, and even make mango ice cream; which we think as delectable as peach cream.

Well, Mr. President, things are going grandly in all the theatres of war,"as planned",(by Roosevelt and Churchill), and it induces a spirit of reminiscence in an old soldier.

On July 1st., 1898, along about three o'clock in the afternoon when we had taken the last of the San Juan Hills that overlooked Santiago de Cuba, your illustrious kinsman, and my beloved colonel, was stalking up and down his line oblivious to the fact that men were still getting hit every once in a while, literally shaking hands with himself, and with every incisor displayed; he was constrained to make the following remarks:

"Men, I'm exceedingly proud of what you have done today; and I consider it an honor to command such a body of men: if, after this, a Rough Rider should get into trouble he can certainly call on me with the assurance that I will help him in any way I can."

The doughty colonel did not

GEORGE P. HAMNER, M. D.

HOLLYWOOD, FLORIDA

know what he was letting himself in for; for hardly had the regiment been mustered out when the calls for aid began coming in. But be it to his everlasting honor and glory, he never refused to come to the aid of a single one of his men in trouble.

Some of the plainsmen decided that they wanted to live in the east, and he got jobs for them: but soon the bright lights began to pall, and they longed for the expansive "prarairies" and the great open spaces; so he had to ship them back west, and at his own expense, of course.

Soon after he had taken up his residence in the Governor's Mansion in Albany, a hulking, six-foot four cowpuncher appeared one morning before breakfast and applied for the job of "bouncer-out", explaining that he had held that position in several prominent saloons in Arizona. He thought the Governor needed someone to take care of the rough stuff.

The colonel received many letters from his ex-Rough Riders in the west. They all began alike: "Dear Colonel: I am in trouble etc."

One especially notable plea for urgent aid read as follows:

"dere Kunnel:

i am in trouble. i shot a lady in the eye. the Lady is my wife's sister: but Kunnel, i was not shootin' at the Lady a-tall: i was shootin' at my wife.

Please get me out of jail at once because the fall roundup starts in a few days yours Truly---"

The colonel replied that he was sorry he was powerless to secure his release, and admonished him to correct his aim next time, and thus maintain the integrity and tradition of the hard riding, straight shooting Rough Riders.

Well, I saw by the papers a few days ago that a man was haled into court for beating up a young woman. He told the judge that it was all a mistake; and that it occurred in a rather dark alley and he thought he was beating his wife. History always repeats itself.

As every sportsman knows, staunchness is the chief requisite of a perfect shooting dog; and I owned one once that met all of the requirements. While hunting a brushy field in my native state of Virginia, I lost this dog. After searching the field for several hours, I concluded that he had gone home. But he was not at home, and then I thought he had been stolen by someone who knew his fine qualities.

Two seasons later, while hunting the same field, I caught a glimpse of something white in a dense sassafras thicket, and parting the bushes I was amazed to discover the skeleton of my valuable dog, still on point! Identity was certain from the brass name plate with my name on it which had fallen from the skeleton by the rotting away of the leather collar.

Now, Mr. President, I'm sure you'll not question my veracity when I tell you that I'm a ruling Elder in the Presbyterian church, as well as a member of the party, and descended from a long line of Jeffersonian Democrats.

This one I cannot vouch for, but an uncle who lives at Sand Hill, Alabama, the home of cyclones, relates it as an experience of his own.

He said, while watching the approach of a cyclone, he observed a large tree coming over the house with a gray squirrel in its branches. He called to his wife to bring his long barreled, Kentucky rifle and shot the squirrel. Then, more trees came sailing over with one to three squirrels in them, and without moving, he killed ten squirrels. He said he could have killed many more, but ten was the legal bag limit.

An East Indian Rajah told this one in Miami recently.

He said that there was a man in a farming community that was so hopelessly lazy that he was absolutely no good. After feeding him and his family a number of years the other farmers decided to put him to death; and as a son of the soil, they thought burial alive was the most appropriate method. When was covered to his eyes, nose and mouth, one had a softening of heart and called: "Hold on boys, lets give him one more chance, and see if we cannot reform him, I'll give him ten barrels of corn to start him out."

The victim spat out the loose dirt and asked:

"Is it husked?"

"No", said his intercessor.

He closed his eyes and said:"Keep on shoveling, boys."

While resident physician at the Memorial Homes Community for retired ministers, missionaries and their wives, established by J.C. Penney, the chain store magnate, near Jacksonville, I enjoyed some very fine quail shooting. And one day I took one of the old ministers out with me and divided my bag with him. He gave one to a widow of a minister. She held the quail up by the legs, and said: "Oh thank you mr. G." And then in a plaintive voice, she asked:

"Are you going to pick it for me?"

I had the good fortune to befriend one of your splendid young airman last fall, and in about four months he walked into my office and presented me with cigars from Bahia, Brazil, and a package of Egyptian cigarrettes from Cairo, Egypt; explaining that he had been to both places since seeing me. I, of course, asked him no questions, but the Egytian cigarrettes(my especial weakness) were the real McCoy, and I hope you got a drag at a few of them while at Casablanca. If Cleopatra served that particular brand to Mark Anthony it is quite understandable why he fell for her so hard.

I enjoyed the joke you told the Prime Minister while in Casablanca about the sailor and the parrot.

Without any apologies for this terrible medley, I am, with every good wish,

Sincerely yours,

Geo P. Hamner

The great respect we have for the armed forces, particularly those in Texas, with whom we have come in contact, has prompted us to have this brochure prepared.
