INTERNATIONAL DIPLOMATIC ACADEMY
4 Avenue Hoche - Paris (VIII)

Paris, July 31, 1933.

Mr. President:

The International Diplomatic Academy has just brought out its DIPLOMATIC DICTIONARY, which is the result of seven years of persevering efforts and of the collaboration of 27 Heads of States, 49 Ministers of Foreign Affairs and 512 Ambassadors and Ministers Plenipotentiary. All questions of a diplomatic order concerning any country are treated therein with unequaled authoritativeness since this work represents the collective efforts of the most eminent diplomats in the world of today.

I have the honor, in the name of the Diplomatic Academy, to beg Your Excellency to accept with our compliments the attached copy, which our Company is all the more happy to offer you because Your Excellency's name appears in it, due to the use of an article which you had Mr. Allen send us.

After examining the Diplomatic Dictionary, Your Excellency will no doubt consider that the International Diplomatic Academy has, by the preparation of the same, rendered an incalculable

ACADÉMIE DIPLOMATIQUE INTERNATIONALE

4, AVENUE HOCHE - PARIS (VIII[e])

Paris le 31 Juillet 1933

Monsieur le Président,

L'Académie Diplomatique Internationale vient de faire paraître son DICTIONNAIRE DIPLOMATIQUE qui est le résultat de sept années d'efforts persévérants et de la collaboration de 27 Chefs d'Etat, 49 Ministres des Affaires Etrangères 512 Ambassadeurs et Ministres Plénipotentiaires. Toutes les questions d'ordre diplomatique intéressant n'importe quel pays y sont traitées avec une autorité sans pareille puisque cet ouvrage représente l'effort collectif des Diplomates les plus éminents du Monde Contemporain.

J'ai l'honneur , au nom de l'Académie Diplomatique, de prier Votre Excellence d'agréer en hommage l'exemplaire ci-joint que notre Compagnie est d'autant plus heureuse de vous offrir, Monsieur le Président , que le nom de Votre Excellence y figure, grâce à l'utilisation d'un article que Votre Excellence nous a fait transmettre par M. Allen.

SON EXCELLENCE Monsieur F. ROOSEVELT
Président de la République des Etats-Unis
WASHINGTON

Après avoir compulsé le Dictionnaire Diplomatique , Votre Excellence estimera sans doute que l'Académie Diplomatique Internationale a rendu , en le composant, un service inappréciable à la Diplomatie Mondiale et qu'il sera de l'intérêt des Diplomates de le trouver dans les Bibliothèques des Ambassades et des Légations des Etats-Unis.

En vous remerciant, Monsieur le Président de l'intérêt que vous avez toujours marqué à notre Compagnie, je prie Votre Excellence, d'agréer, l'hommage de mon respect.

The Inner Eye Society makes annual award to individuals of outstanding achievement who have rendered some noble service which has assisted others in the battle against obstacles and difficulties.

The Organization has selected The Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt as the outstanding example in the world at the present time of heroic courage and inspiring leadership and will present to him, during the month of December, official testimonial and a silver-plated coat of arms of the Organization (CF top of letter-head) mounted on a small wooden shield.

Please tell us the proper and respectful way this ought to be done. We will be obedient to your suggestion.

Most sincerely,

THE INNER EYE SOCIETY
Legend re Symbols on Shield
Based on Primitive Picture Writing (Arapaho)

I Shield Superimposed on Center.
Conventional star imposed on picture symbol for "star". Both symbols represent the "light that shines on the pathway".

Symbol meaning "to all corners", "to the ends of the earth".

III Upper Right Quarter (upper right section).
Two symbols for "eye", representing ability to see by inner understanding.

IV Upper Right Quarter.
Triple arc running diagonally through upper right quarter, carries symbols of "tent" or "tepee"; representing "friendly circles" warmed by the light which shines.

Conventionalized symbol of bird with spreading wings to "protect" those who walk in the light radiating cheer.

VI Lower Right Quarter.
Slightly conventionalized symbol of tree "soaring to heights with strength" in the light that shines for the friendly ones.

VII The staggered squares of the upper right and lower left quarters symbolize the idea of "the ends of the earth".

VIII The dots on the bars of the tree are Braille characters for "Inner Eye".

IX The dot which radiates from the center star symbolizes "the light that shines from truth and friendliness for the Inner Eye which sees by the invisible light".

X By faith the Inner Eye follows the Laws of Truth and finds the Love of God to be a Light that shines upon Life's Pathway on the darkest day.

Dear Mr. President:

We are pleased to inform you that on the eighth of this month, we expressed to you two cases of our assorted wines containing the following:

4 bottles	Tipo Red (qts)	1 bottle	Sauterne Fifth
4 "	Tipo White (qts)	1 "	Chablis "
1 bottle	Muscatel Fifth	1 "	Burgundy "
1 "	Angelica "	1 "	Riesling "
1 "	Port "	1 "	Zinfandel "
1 "	Sherry "

Our company has specialized particularly in the production of dry wines. The Tipo (Chianti type) is the wine for which our company has become especially well known and we consider it equal to most of the brands of the imported Italian Chianti wines and superior to many of them.

It may be of interest to you to know that while we have and are yet importing the bottle itself from Italy, we are also now developing a bottle of the same type in California. The glass is made by the Owens-Illinois Pacific Glass Company, and we have recently put about one hundred women to work, putting the straw or grass covering around a domestic made bottle.

We hope that you will find to your satisfaction, some of the wines included in the assortment, and that we may have the honor of serving you.

Very cordially yours,

Mr. President:

The profound gratitude which fills our hearts on account of the truly humane help which you, Mr. President, are bestowing upon millions of despairing men and women also fills the hearts of those millions who, like my husband and myself, look upon you as our savior. Indeed, your message has come to us as if sent by our good Father above.

You, with your deep sympathy with human cares and sorrows, have given us a new lease of life, for, think of it, after almost two years, my husband is enabled by his own earnings to meet with the cost of our modest living. We no longer have to take upon ourselves that humiliating task to approach friends, and mere acquaintances, for help and favors. Please, Mr. President, forgive me for thus expressing myself, but life has taught me that charity can be the ugliest word in all languages, especially, if one could be able to rely upon one's own capability of earning a living.

I have always considered "work" one of the greatest blessings. Oh, for the joy of seeing my husband filled with new courage and confidence, leaving early each morning our home to go to his work. Although it is work of a different kind than that which he has done for the last fourty years, he, nevertheless, is proud of his appointment to it. He is employed in the Traffic Engineer's office. Upon his daily return home, and before he takes off his coat and hat, he enthusiastically tells me of his new experiences of the day. The fact that during the coming year he shall complete his three scores and ten in years, and that in several American and German reference works his name is mentioned as a German-American journalist, writer and poet, does not in the least diminish his happiness over his present work. Oscar Illing - this is my husband's name- has been for nearly ten years the editor of the "Neue Zeit", until this weekly subsided in May 1932. Previous to this, Mr. Illing for over a year had not received his salary from the publisher of this paper, on account of lack of funds. The "Neue Zeit" had mainly been read by the academic class, and was considered a journal of high merit and culture. For about twentyfive years Mr. Illing had been editor of the Detroit "Abendpost", also a few years co-editor of the "Westliche Post" in St. Louis, Mo.

(From "Who is Who Among North American Authors", Vol. IV, 1928- 30
Golden Syndicate Publishing Co.,

Los Angeles

During the past twenty years my husband, at intervals, has written, in German, a work of several volumes for which, under the present world conditions, it is difficult to find a publisher. Mr. Illing also is well versed in English, and has written many noteworthy articles in this language which have appeared in the "American Monthly" and other magazines.

As to my own credentials, permit me, Mr. President, to enclose a copy of a sketch from a reference work named on this copy.

Being my husband's junior only be a few years, it is my innermost prayer that we may keep our strength, thereby being enabled to go on in our work, and never more to experience the despairing times of the past years.

We have no children, but, even if we were thus blessed, we should not want to become their burden. The reason for our impoverished state of affairs rests in the fact of Mr. Illing always having been underpaid for his work. The same can be said about my work. Besides, twice I have suffered the theft of my literary property. Film concerns, which I can name, deliberatley have used my stories for film pictures. Lawyers whom I have consulted in regard to these thefts, have told me I could achieve my right, but this would mean the outlay of sums of money which, unfortunately, I do not possess. Almost a year ago, I began a book in English, entitled "Conflicts". The strain of the precarious times we have lived through, until your God-sent help came to us, Mr. President, has prevented the progress of the work. Now, as a result of your uplifting assistance, I shall, with new strength, continue my book.

In conclusion, Mr. President, grant me the liberty, please, to present you with my book, entitled "Weisser Flieder" (White Lilac), as an expression of my deep gratitute to you, our beloved President, our Protector!

May God bless you and keep you well and strong. Our country needs your wise and benign guidance.

With greetings of the season, I remain very respectfully yours

Cecilie Hammerstein Illing.

Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt,
White House,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mrs. Roosevelt:

Above all, I must ask your pardon for sending you the copy of a letter which I wrote to our beloved President during December last. Please permit me to express that the reason for sending this copy to you is not because I have received no direct answer to it, for how could anyone expect this in view of the fact that millions of letters were sent to our President during those days. Besides, did he not, at the lightening of the christmass tree, speak over the radio, with ringing voice, sincerest words of gratitude to the millions who, with their hearts full of veneration for their benefactor, had heard him?

My reason for sending you this copy is to humbly inquire to whom I must apply to ascertain whether my modest volume of German short stories, entitled "Weisser Flieder", has reached the President.

This book is one left from a few of a small edition and it would fill me with pride and joy if it would not have missed its destination.

In my letter to the President I have spoken of literary thefts committed against me. In regard to this matter, I again and again have sought the aid of lawyers, in order to come to my rights. But all of these gentlemen lose interest in my case when they hear of my pecuniary inability. The last one of the attorneys I have consulted, has in hands my papers, concerning my case, for nearly a year. I fear to inquire from him his decision about handling my suit, as he, too, might follow the example of the others.

But what great a blessing it would be for us aged ones if the fruit of my work would come to us! Then the terrible worry about our shelterless age would leave us, and we would be granted to peacefully await the Lord's call.

My new book which I have in slowly progressing work bears the title "Conflicts," and will be written in English. It will speak of the tragic conflicts which confront those who, like myself, is made subject to Hitler's influences, even in this our beloved country. Being bereft of his editorship in his former weekly, "The New Era", Mr. Illing is powerless in combatting these evil influences, although he is not Jewish like myself. After having been without an income for over two years, Mr. Illing has been among the fortunates to find work through the C. W. A.

Our trust in God helps us not to lose our hope in His fatherly mercy for us, and all His children. He will send us the work that will maintain us.

With the expression of my highest esteem, I beg to remain

Yours very respectfully

Cecilie Hammerstein Illing.

You, with your deep sympathy with human cares and sorrows, have given us a new lease of life, for, think of it, after almost two years, my husband is enabled by his own earnings to meet with the cost of our modest living. We no longer have to take upon ourselves that humiliating task to approach friends, and mere acquaintances, for help and favors. Please, Mr. President, forgive me for thus expressing myself, but life has taught me that charity c a n b e the ugliest word in all languages, especially, if one could be able to rely upon one's own capability of earning a living.

I have always considered work one of the greatest blessings. Oh,for the ~~the~~ joy of seeing my husband filled with new courage and confidence, leaving early each morning our h ome to go to his work. Although it is work of a different kind t han that which he has done for the last fourty years, he, nevertheless, is proud of his appointment to it. He is employed in the Traffic Engineer's office. Upon his daily return home, and before he takes off his coat and hat, he enthusiastically tells me of his new experiences of the day. The fact that during the coming year he shall complete his three scores and ten in years, and that in several American and German reference works his name is mentioned as a German-American journalist, writer and poet, does not in the least diminish his happiness over his present work. Oscar Illing, this is my husband's name, has been for nearly ten years the editor of the "Neue Zeit" (The New Era), until this weekly subsided in May 1932. Previous to this, Mr. Illing for over a year had not received his salary from the publisher of this paper, on account of lack of funds. The "Neue Zeit" had been read by the acadamic class, and was considered a journal of high merit and culture. For about twenty five years Mr. Illing had been editor of the Detroit "Abend-post," also a few years co-editor of the "Westliche Post" in St. Louis, Mo. During the past twenty years my husband, at intervals, has written in German, a work of several volumes for which under the present world conditions, it is difficult to find a publisher. Mr. Illing also is well versed in English, and has written many noteworthy articles in this language which have appeared in the "American Monthly" and other magazines.

As to my own credentials, permit me, Mr. President, to enclose a copy of a sketch from a reference work named on this copy.

Being my husband's junior only by a few years, it is my inner-most prayer that we may keep our strength, thereby being enabled to go on in our work, and never more to experience the dispairing times of the past years.

We have no children, but, even if we were thus blessed, we should not want to become their burden. The reason for our impoverished state of affairs rests in the fact of Mr. Illing always having been underpaid for his work. The same can be said about myself. Besides, twice I have suffered the theft of my literary property. Film concerns, which I can name, deliberately have used my stories for film pictures. Lawyers whom I have consulted in regard to these thefts, have told me I could achieve my right, but this would mean the outlay of sums of money which, unfortunately, I do not possess.

Almost a year ago, I began a book in English, entitled "Conflicts." The strain of the precarious times we have lived through, until your God-sent help came to us, Mr. President, has prevented the progress of the work. Now, as a result of your uplifting assistance, I shall, with new strenghth continue my book.

In conclusion, Mr. President, grant me the liberty, please, to present you with my book, entitled "Weisser Flieder" (White Lilac)

My dear Mr. Antonini:

The President asks me to acknowledge receipt of and thank you for your letter of February twenty-fourth.

In order to conserve the time and energy of the President, I have been acting on his behalf in receiving all gifts.

I will be glad to suit the convenience of your Committee, being available at the White House during office hours, or, if you prefer, I shall be glad to receive the plaque by express or mail and convey it to the President with an appropriate explanation.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. President:

The Italian Dressmakers' Union, Local 89, of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, composed of more than 40,000 American workers of Italian extraction, believes itself to be the largest single labor union in the country and firmly holds that it owes a great deal of its numerical strength and industrial importance to the wise, forceful and sympathetic policies of your Administration.

Having brought order and decent conditions of living in the chaos which reigned in our great industry, your Administration has deserved the highest admiration of our membership and as a lasting token of our esteem and gratitude we should deem ourselves signally privileged if you would permit us to present you and Mrs. Roosevelt with a bronze plaque commemorating the first anniversary of your inauguration.

This plaque is an admirable piece of sculpture wrought by the noted Italian-American Artist Onorio Ruotolo and it has no other significance than a purely spiritual appreciation of the great and memorable year that is now coming to a close. We desire nothing and we expect nothing from you, save your gracious acceptance of this symbol of our esteem and devotion and we should be overwhelmingly gratified and thankful if you could so contrive as to wrest a few brief moments from your manifold labors and tasks to receive a committee of our members to present it to you. Of course, we would be most happy if this simple presentation could take place on the initial day of your second year as President of the United States, but if we cannot be so fortunate, we shall await your pleasure and your convenience with unabated gladness.

With infinite thanks and all good wishes for a long fruitful and happy life, I beg to remain, Mr. President

Most Respectfully and Sincerely yours,

Luigi Antonini,
General Secretary,
Italian Dressmakers' Union, Local #89.

My dear Judge Cotillo:

Thank you for your letter of March 1st.

I would be delighted to grant your request were it not for the fact that doing so would immediately open the doors wide for similar requests from all over the country. When you consider that the President is under such tremendous pressure that I find it necessary to deny all requests for personal appointments in order that immediate and necessary official business may get required attention, you will, I know, understand my position and reasons for not making any exceptions to a policy which has been followed practically throughout the administration, and religiously so while Congress has been in session.

I appreciate your interest, and I know that you can count on you to explain it to the satisfaction of the gentlemen from whom this request emanates.

Sincerely yours,

My dear Mr. McIntyre:

A Committee of the Italian Dressmakers' Union, Local No. 89 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, composed of more than 40,000 workers of Italian extraction, called on me and asked for my intercession in procuring an audience with the President in order that the Committee could present to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt a bronze plaque commemorating the first anniversary of the President's inauguration. The plaque is a piece of sculpture by a noted Italian-American artist, Onorio Ruotolo, and conveys a spiritual appreciation of the great and memorable year that is soon coming to a close under the guiding hand of President Roosevelt.

The General Secretary of the Union wrote to you in this regard and in your reply of February 26th, you intimated that you would be pleased to receive the plaque by express or mail, and that you would convey it to the President. I fully realize that the energy and time of the President should be spared as much as possible, but by virtue of the situation as I know it and knowing the calibre of some of the members of the Committee, I would appreciate it immensely if you could squeeze in an appointment for them, in order to present this plaque personally. As I have stated before, this is one of the most powerful labor organizations in the City of New York, and I think the sacrifice should be made by the President in receiving it.

I am sending you a package, containing an inkwell and six, three penholders. This inkwell and penholders are made of bone. For your election as President of the United States, I sent you at that time a shoe made of bone. This shoe, and also the inkwell and penholders, have been made by hand, worked and carved by my own self.

It has been a long time that I have been working at these penholders, and also on the inkwell. For, I have all the time to myself, as I do not work, because I am sick.

ECONOMICS PROFESSOR
ADVOCATES GOVERNMENT
MONOPOLY OF BANKING

M.D.Anderson of Florida University Declares
Nothing So Vital As Control Of Bank Credit
Should Be In Private Hands

CLAIMS MOVE WOULD BE CONSTITUTIONAL

Chicago, March .- Asserting that there is no other field of economic activity wherein the ravages of an unfettered private monopoly can produce such baleful public consequences as in banking, which in the United States "is a shining example of what economists call a public utility, even though it has not been so declared by legal authority," M. D. Anderson, professor of economics at Florida University, advocates a complete monopoly of banking by the federal government which, he claims, would be legally permissible under the Constitution of the United States. Professor Anderson, who makes his proposal and outlines a method for its accomplishment in a book entitled "Capital and Interest," to be published this week by Business Publications Company, Chicago, further states that "the present standard of qualifications for bank management is so low and the personnel quite generally so ignorant of fundamentals of banking theory, that the government could probably improve both."

"Banks should be publicly owned and publicly operated," Professor Anderson declares. "This reform," he adds, "would be very shocking to many rabid protagonists of private capitalism, but in reality it is indispensable for the preservation of private capitalism as the normal business arrangement, if we are correct in our contention that a substantial measure of monopolistic control has been attained in the business of banking. While there is certainly no rigid monopoly of banking in the United States," the author says, "recent Senate investigations as well as those of the Pujo committee in a past decade have brought to light sufficient evidence to the effect that a few great banks and private investment houses virtually control all large-scale financial operations in this country. Banking here has become quasi-monopolistic."

The Plan Under The Constitution

"The Constitution of the United States," Professor Anderson claims, "expressly gives the federal Congress power to coin money and regulate the value thereof, while it expressly denies to the several states the power to coin money or emit bills of credit if those bills are designed to circulate as money. (Note to editor: Here the author refers to Article 1, Sections 8 and 10, U. S. Constitution.) Court decisions have further held," the author claims, "that an implied power was granted to Congress to emit bills of credit designed to circulate as money. In order to regulate the value of money in modern times there must be control of derivative bank deposits, which in turn requires the control of banking operations. A broad interpretation of the Constitution therefore permits Congress to control banking, and if that can only be done by federal ownership of all banks, then the constitutionality of federal bank monopoly cannot be gainsaid. In other words, the constitutionality of our program of reform does not have to rest on the general theory of public utility regulation, but can be based on a specific grant of power for that particular thing in Article 1 of the Constitution.

"It would not be necessary to confiscate private property or to raise taxes," Professor Anderson continues, "to inaugurate this proposal. The federal government could buy all bank stock at its market value, and give in payment an annuity running for, say, 100 years, or a long enough time to avoid the charge of confiscation. The yearly amount payable by the government to a given stockholder would be the market value of his stock multiplied by a rate of interest equal to the average yield on high-grade bank stock, say, six per cent. There would be no burden on the public by way of taxation because the annuities could be paid out of banking profit, with something to spare. We say this because statistics show that the national banks, at least, have earned well over nine per cent per annum on their capital stock and surplus since 1890. Moreover, at the expiration of the 100 years, when the annuities would cease to be paid, the government could pocket all the banking profits and use them to meet general expenses in lieu of taxation."

Sees Codes Effective Only With Prices Controlled

Discussing the N.R.A. minimum wage policy Professor Anderson declares: "By all means a minimum wage policy, or a schedule of coded wages, should be avoided unless there is established at the same time an effective machinery for the control of prices. If coextensive price control is not made just as effective as wage control, the latter will not benefit the poorer classes at all. They will have to pay prices for the goods they buy which have been raised just as much as their wages. More than that, workers who have no machinery for codifying and elevating their wages will find their real incomes have been reduced, for the benefit of employers or for the benefit of other workers. Workers and small income receivers generally cannot be helped by a codification of wages without codification of prices of commodities.

Takes Issue with Orthodox Dogma

Throughout his book, "Capital and Interest," Professor Anderson takes issue with orthodox dogma. He holds, for example, that saving by society as a whole destroys capital and that universal thrift is a fallacy. Further, he does not recognize a distinction, except one of degree which he claims breaks down altogether in the long run, from the point of view of society as a whole, between "production goods" and "consumption goods." In other chapters the author discusses such subjects as the capital concept, saving and investment, the role of commercial banks, short-run fluctuations, and finally, a program of social control. In his preface the author states that his work was "conceived and developed some little time before the economic revolution of 1933 in the United States, and that there has been no deliberate aim on the part of the author to provide a system of economics which might be consistent with the program of governmental control of industry now dominating the American scene."

My dear Mr. President:

In Oct. 28th, 1,932, I wrote you a letter and told you in it, THAT I HAVE WROTE ALL MY CLASSMATE OF N.J. STATE AGRICULTURE COLLEGE TO VOTE FOR YOU.

I also wrote to all my friends and family of late Col. M. W. Day, use to have General Pershing under him as in P.Y. in MINDANAO.

I have got letter from Holland to-day speaking about you as good President of U.S.

I am very glad that I did not make mistake in writing to all my friends in U.S. to vote for you for President of U.S.

Now in your letter you wrote me in Nov. 5th, 1932, which I keep as souvenir, you say that you be glad to hear from me if I come again to U.S. you will remember that I ask you only one thing in my letter to meet you personally.

I may go to U.S. and I wish you give me this opportunity this year, to shake your hand one minute.

As I told you before, I am the son of late General SEVERIANO GARCIA, who fought in Spanish A,erican war again Spain and my father was personally friend of late General L.Wood, U.S., and General E. Crowder, U.S.

I have in my office the picture of Mrs. Roosevelt, and also of you which I got from the Magazine "THE TIMES";if you please send me one picture of your and one also of Mrs. Roosevelt, I will be glad to put both of them in my officce. I have great simpathy for all Roosevelt's family.

I send you to-day by parcel post, two napking ring made of best class of Cuba native wood. This is my personal present on your birthday, one for Mrs. Roosvelt.

I wish God bless you you for many years, for benefict of human race,and that you will help our country as have good honest President now as Col. Mendieta good friend of my father in war, and our family.-

I hope hear from you soon and do not forget the picture.

Dear Sir:

We are advised that you are familiar with the Men's Clothing Code Authority plan to tailor a suit of clothes for the President, your good self, and several others.

We have been designated as the tailors for President Roosevelt. In an effort to tailor the garments for him without inconvenience to the President, we applied to his tailor in New York City for a complete set of measurements, which Mr. Hopkins has refused to furnish to us.

The purpose of this letter is to request that you make arrangements with the President so that one of our expert fitters might call and take his measurements and also deliver the garments to him when they are ready for try-on.

We wish to make sure that the President will be well pleased, just as we are certain that the firm which has been designated to tailor your clothes will be anxious to do a thorough and pleasing job.

Thank you for making the appointment, and I will look forward to hearing from you.

MEMORANDUM

To: Mr. Rosenblatt

From: George L. Bell

Shortly after the Men's Clothing Code was signed by General Johnson and the President, the Men's Clothing Code Authority, created under the provisions of the Code, decided to have a suit made for the President and, also, one for General Johnson, which would include the NRA label authorized under the Code. The whole object of the plan was to obtain publicity for the NRA label. The Men's Clothing Code Authority has requested the International Tailoring Company to make the suit for the President. I do not recall what manufacturer was designated to make the suit for General Johnson.

The Men's Clothing Code Authority is to pay the full cost of the suits manufactured as outlined above. In no wise will it be an individual transcation between the clothing firm and the President or General Johnson. Any publicity secured will not give the name of the manufacturer, but will be issued in the name of the Men's Clothing Code Authority.

We have been designated as the tailors for President Roosevelt. In an effort to tailor the garments for him without inconvenience to the President, we applied to his tailor in New York City for a complete set of measurements, which Mr. Hopkin has refused to furnish to us.

The purpose of this letter is to request that you make arrangements with the President so that one of our expert fitters might call and take his measurements and also deliver the garments to him when they are ready for try-on.

We wish to make sure that the President will be well pleased, just as we are certain that the firm which has been designated to tailor your clothes will be anxious to do a thorough and pleasing job.

Thank you for making the appointment, and I will look forward to hearing from you."

We do hope that you will be able to arrange for the appointment.

Iolani Palace

Now the Executive Building
Territory of Hawaii

UPON THE SITE of the present structure which was occupied in December, 1882, by King Kalakaua and his consort, Queen Kapiolani, stood the first royal palace of Kamehameha III, who reigned from 1825 to 1853, a frame building completed in 1846 and razed in 1878 to be succeeded by the present structure.

The first palace was occupied successively by Kings Kamehameha III, IV, V, Lunalilo and Kalakaua. The new palace was occupied by King Kalakaua from 1882 to 1891, the year of his death, and by Queen Liliuokalani, his sister and successor to the throne, who reigned from 1891 to 1893.

From 1893 to date the former palace has been used as the executive building for the successive Provisional Government (1893-4), Republic of Hawaii, (1894-1900), Territory of Hawaii (1900-).

Kamehameha IV suggested the name "St. Alexander's Palace" at a meeting of the Privy Council, December 7, 1868. The Privy Council suggested the name "Iolani Palace," the Hawaiian name, Iolani, having been applied to Kamehameha II and Kamehameha IV. The name was officially adopted, remaining as such until June 2, 1893, when it was changed to "Executive Building" by a resolution adopted by the Executive and Advisory Councils of the Provisional Government, and it has since been so called.

The cornerstone of the present building was laid December 31, 1879, the birthday of Queen Kapiolani, consort of King David Kalakaua, by the Masonic fraternity of Honolulu at the request of the King, who was a high member of the order, being a 33° Scottish Rite Mason and a Knight Templar, and its completion was celebrated December 27, 1882, by a Masonic banquet held therein by the united Masonic lodges.

The palace was erected at a cost in excess of $350,000. It is of brick construction, with facing of cement and concrete block trimmings. It originally had a slate roof, two stories in height with basement and attic. The interior is finished with the choicest of Hawaiian woods. The ground plan is 120 by 140 feet, and is 80 feet to the top of the central towers.

The hall to the right of the main vestibule, now used by the House of Representatives for legislative sessions, was formerly the Throne Room during the monarchy period, the throne dais and canopy being in the same position then as now except that the surmounting crown has been replaced by the American eagle. It was the throne room of King Kalakaua up to the time of his death in January, 1891, and lastly by his sister, Queen Liliuokalani, up to the time of her dethronement in January, 1893. It was also the scene of formal court receptions, levees and balls. The funeral rites for King Kalakaua (1891), Prince Kawananakoa (1908), Queen Liliuokalani (1917), and other members of the royal families were held therein, the last obsequies being those for Prince Kalanianaole (1922), Delegate to Congress from 1902 to 1922, and for Sanford B. Dole, President of the Provisional Government of Hawaii, and the Republic of Hawaii (1893-1900), held on June 12, 1926. The hall is used on formal occasions by the Governor of Hawaii. It was also used in 1895 as a military court room following the revolution of 1895, among those on trial being former Queen Liliuokalani.

On the opposite side of the vestibule was the state dining room now used as the Senate Chamber. The chamber occupied by the President of the Senate and staff was formerly a reception room known as the "Blue Room," and used much by the military aides of the Sovereigns, and for audiences with the sovereign when the Throne Room was not used.

In the basement the rooms occupied for years, until 1926, by the Department of Public Works, Commissioner of Public Lands, Hawaiian Homes Commission, etc., were formerly occupied by the royal chamberlain and staff, and by the royal kitchens with corresponding service rooms. These rooms are now occupied as "Committee Rooms" of the two houses of the Legislature.

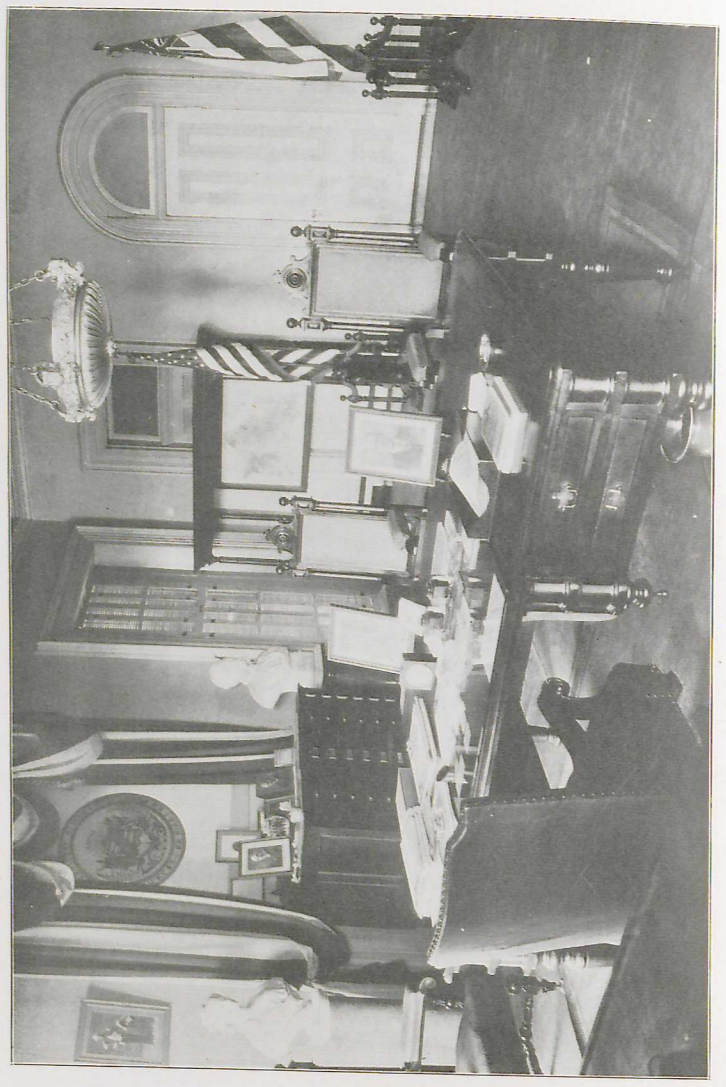

The second floor rooms were mainly used as private apartments by the sovereigns and members of their families. That occupied by King Kalakaua, and later by Queen Liliuokalani, is now the executive chamber of the Governor of Hawaii, and during the Republic of Hawaii period was the office of the Minister of Foreign Affairs. The central room, adjoining, now occupied by the Governor's secretary, was the "Foreign Office," or the office of the Sovereigns. The room now occupied by the Secretary of the Territory was formerly the Music Room, and was later the executive chamber of President Sanford B. Dole of the Provisional Government and Republic of Hawaii. President Dole used the corner room as a sleeping apartment when affairs of the Republic were at a critical stage.

The room now occupied by the Attorney-General was the bed-chamber of Queen Kapiolani. The offices of the clerks of the Attorney-General were the bed-chambers of the Princess Poomaikalani and Kekaulike, sisters of Queen Kapiolani. Queen Liliuokalani was imprisoned for nine months in 1895 in the corner room (makai-Waikiki, over the Throne room) occupied by the Auditor until 1926, following the unsuccessful royalist insurrection in January of 1893.

The hallway in the second story was used by the royal families as a breakfast and general sitting room, where they received and entertained their intimate friends.

The Hawaiian monarchy was abrogated January 17, 1893. A Provisional Government was established on that date which had its headquarters in the present Judiciary Building until June

Governor's Office, Iolani Palace

3rd, when formal possession of the Palace was taken for that purpose, and the building officially designated as the Executive Building.

On July 7, 1898, President McKinley signed the Joint Resolution of Annexation, as passed by both houses of Congress, annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States as an integral part of the United States. On August 12, 1898, Admiral Miller, commanding the U. S. Naval forces on the Pacific Station, formally raised the American flag over the building. United States Minister Harold M. Sewall accepted the Government of the Islands from President Sanford B. Dole on the same occasion. On June 14, 1900, the Hawaiian Islands became the Territory of Hawaii, U. S. A., with President Dole as the first Governor.

In October, 1926, the Departments of the Treasury, Audit, Public Works, Land, Homes Commission, Farm Loan Board, Geological Survey, Harbor Commission, were removed to the new Territorial Office Building, adjoining the Judiciary Building. The Executive Building is now occupied only by the Governor, Secretary of the Territory, Attorney-General, and the two houses of the Legislature.

The royal palace in addition to the basement and two main floors, had an attic where King Kalakaua established a library for the Hale Naua Society, of which he was president, and above the attic are six cupolas. From the roof of the Palace and the platforms of the cupolas, President Dole and staff, with field glasses, watched the progress of skirmishes between the government forces and the insurrectionists in January, 1895, when the Hawaiians endeavored to restore former Queen Liliuokalani to the throne.

A large proportion of the furnishings, particularly paintings and objects of art, for the Palace, were purchased in Europe.

Many oil paintings, especially portraits of the sovereigns and members of the royal families of the two Hawaiian dynasties—Kamehameha (1795-1874), and Kalakaua (1874-1893), were already in place. There were portraits of Kamehameha the Great, a copy from a portrait painted by Choris, the Russian artist accompanying the expedition of Lieut. Kotzebue, Russian navy, in 1816; Kamehameha II, and his consort, Queen Kamamalu, from paintings made during their visit to London, 1824, where they died; Kamehameha III (1825-1854), his consort, Queen Kalama; Kamehameha IV (1854-1863), and his consort, Queen Emma; Kamehameha V (1864-1872); King Lunalilo (1872-1874).

These now adorn the walls of the throne room.

During the reign of Queen Liliuokalani, oil portraits of King Kalakaua and Queen Liliuokalani, painted by the American artist, Wm. Cogswell, for which the Queen paid him $3,000, were added. After the death of Prince Kuhio Kalanianaole, nephew of Queen Kapiolani, who was delegate from Hawaii to Congress from 1902 to 1922, his portrait was added to the throne room.

In this room is also a life-sized oil portrait of King Louis Philippe, of France, presented by that monarch to Kamehameha III, and landed at Honolulu early in 1848 from the French frigate Sarcelle, and installed in the old palace with much ceremony. During the Wilcox revolution in 1889, this portrait was pierced by many bullets from sharpshooters' rifles.

In the second story hallway there are portraits of Admiral Thomas, British navy, who restored the independence of Hawaii to Kamehameha III on July 30, 1843, following the seizure of the islands by Lord George Paulet, on February 25, 1843.

Also, an oil portrait of Napoleon III, a gift to Hawaii from that sovereign; an oil portrait of Alexander II of Russia, a gift from the Czar. There are oils and crayons of King Kalakaua, Queen Kapiolani, Princess Likelike, Princess Kaiulani, High Chief Haalelea, Kamehameha III as a young man, and President Sanford Ballard Dole (1893-1900), who also served as the first Governor of the Territory of Hawaii (1900-1903).

Oil portraits of King William of Prussia (1830) and Field Marshal Blucher of Prussia, sent to Kamehameha III in that year by the German ruler, are among the oldest works of art associated with the Palace. These are referred to in many books written about Hawaii, between 1832 and 1845. An oil portrait of the succeeding King of Prussia (1848) arrived here early that year as a gift to Kamehameha III.

The throne room, between sessions of the legislature, is maintained as it was in monarchy days. The royal dais with its canopy is exactly the same with the exception that the symbolic crown above it has been replaced by a symbolic American eagle.

The throne chairs are now on exhibition in the Bernice Pauahi Bishop Museum.

The crown of King Kalakaua, which was worn by him for the first time on February 12, 1883, when a formal coronation celebration was observed (he was elected February 12, 1874), is now filed in the Archives of Hawaii, a building near the palace. The crown of Queen Kapiolani is in the Bishop Museum. It was not despoiled.

The coronation ceremonies were held in a pavilion set up in front of the Palace steps. It was afterwards moved and permanentiy established near the Palace and is now used as a bandstand.

The Palace was the scene of many brilliant social functions in monarchy days, the King, his queen, his sister, the Princess Liliuokalani, in formal garb (the King in military uniform) receiving guests at the dais. The etiquette of the court of St. James prevailed at the Palace. Introductions were formal, and following introductions the visitors walked backwards to the exits. The Royal Hawaiian Military Band, directed by Capt. Henri Berger, a bandmaster sent to Kamehameha V by Emperor William of Germany, in 1872, played for balls and receptions. Officers of visiting warships were always received at the Palace, and a ball usually followed their first courtesy visits, the royal hospitality being reciprocated by receptions and balls aboard the warships.

The royal quadrilles were very royal, as they were participated in by the King, Queen, Princesses, and representatives of foreign governments and their ladies.

On July 30, 1889, Robert W. Wilcox, a part-Hawaiian, who, as one of several Hawaiian youths educated abroad, had received a military training in the Italian artillery school at Turin, Italy, launched an insurrection. At the head of 250 Hawaiians he marched into the Palace grounds through the Hotel Street entrance, and demanded the surrender of the Palace from Lieut. Robert Parker Waipa, King's Guard, who commanded a detachment of twelve Hawaiian soldiers on duty. Lieut. Waipa refused.

Wilcox made no military attempt to take the Palace, but occupied the King's bungalow.

Citizens, organizing into military companies, with sharpshooters, surrounded the Palace grounds. Ten of Wilcox's men were killed. At dusk the revolutionists surrendered. The Palace walls were chipped by bullets, the scars of battle still showing.

On January 14, 1893, Queen Liliuokalani went in state to Aliiolani Hale, the parliament house (now the judiciary building) and prorogued the legislature. She returned to the Palace, assembled her Ministers in the Blue Room, and announced that she intended to proclaim a new Constitution. The Ministers refused to sign the document, whereupon Her Majesty appeared at the railing of the second story lanai, and informed a delegation of Hawaiians assembled in front of the steps that, intending to give them a new Constitution she had been frustrated.

Citizens, on learning of the proposed coup, organized a Safety Committee, and on January 17, 1893, the climax came when the Committee asked for, and received the surrender of the Parliament House, and at once proclaimed a Provisional Government, thereby abrogating the monarchy and deposing the Queen. Judge Sanford B. Dole was proclaimed President.

In January, 1895, an insurrection occurred, the purpose being to restore the monarchy and the Queen. The insurrection failed. On January 16, 1895, former Queen Liliuokalani was arrested by order of the government, and tried before a military court in the former throne room. She was found guilty of the charges of misprision of treason, and sentenced to imprisonment, her prison chamber being designated in the second story of the Palace, directly over the throne room, where she remained nine months until paroled, after which she was granted full pardon. Afterwards she resided at her private home, "Washington Place," until her death on November 11, 1917. She was accorded a state funeral from the old Palace.

"Washington Place" was purchased by the territorial government, for preservation, and is now the official residence of the Governors of Hawaii.

Man closely associated with Paderewski and others, wishes to paint portrait of President that would not only give physical resemblance, but would reflect his spirituality.

Encloses photo. of portrait he painted of Abdul Baha, who was responsible for political development, etc., in Persia. His portrait is only one recognized as true characterization of the great philosopher.

It would not require a great deal of the President's time to paint portrait and no financial obligation would be assumed.

My dear Mr. Ike:

Your letter of August eighteenth has been received and I want to thank you in the President's behalf for sending the picture to him. He does not, however, feel that he should deprive you of its possession. I am therefore returning it under separate cover.

While this office does not know of any position which might be offered to you, I shall be very glad indeed to refer your letter for the consideration of the officials of the United States Employment Service.

Very sincerely yours,

LOUIS McH. HOWE
Secretary to the President

Dear President Roosevelt:

I am sending you a little souvenir. You may have one like its, or at least have seen one. But I have run into very few people who have seen any like it.

I am a democrat, as was my mother and father. And back as far as I know on both sides, they all held for that party.

My mothers brother owned a store in a little place called Trail Run, Ohio and he had these handkerchiefs in it to sell.

VIA AIRMAIL

Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt
President of the United States
Washington, D.C.

My dear Mr. President:

It was our good fortune and pleasure to have a visit from your very good friend Rex Tugwell, who visited California not long ago, and he had the occasion to visit the Inglenook Winery, located at Rutherford. He was so much impressed with it and our Cabinet Wines, that upon his return to Washington he ordered some wines for his personal use.

Having this opportunity, we included an extra case, and have requested Mr. Tugwell to see that the same is presented to you with our compliments. We are anxious that you have an opportunity of tasting some of California's choicest vintages, and we hope that you will enjoy these wines. We might say, that our Cabinet Wines, like your Cabinet in Washington, composed of the best men in the country, are considered the best vintages of California.

We are enclosing a photograph of a carved oak cask that is on the premises here, which was originally carved in the year 1537.

I wish it were possible for you to inspect this winery, which is considered one of the finest in our State.

With our best wishes, we remain

Yours very sincerely,

C.E. Bundschu, Manager
