Four Freedoms Day is a global point of view just celebrated as Independence Day from a national point of view. Thus this historical day could in time become a global holiday.

The whole world has new hope because of the vision of the Four Freedoms. This vision must not perish; it must gain new vitality. A Four Freedoms Day could serve as excellent ideological propaganda for the cause of the democracies of the world. It would be an additional guarantee of their determination to create a lasting peace after the war. It would help to establish the Four Freedoms more definitely as a common denominator of the United Nations, and would undoubtedly create a more enlightened public opinion regarding world unity.

New Anniversary Proposed Four Freedoms Day Suggested as a Global Celebration

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:
Jan. 6 will mark the second anniversary of President Roosevelt's message to Congress in which he first enunciated the Four Freedoms: of speech, of worship, from fear, from want.

It is my conviction that Jan. 6 should be permanently set aside as Four Freedoms Day, to be celebrated from a global point of view just as July 4 is celebrated as Independence Day from a national point of view. Thus this historical day could in time become a global holiday.

Honored Sir:

On January 6, 1941, President Roosevelt enunciated the Four Freedoms in his annual message to Congress. Although it is not feasible at this time to officially celebrate the anniversary of that meaningful declaration on a national scale, we wish, nevertheless, to call to your personal attention the plan of creating a special national holiday to be observed and known as Four Freedoms Day.

We believe that this proposal is eminently worthy of your consideration as well as that of the President and the entire Congress assembled.

We are enclosing reproductions of an original letter by Dr. Frederick Kettner to the editor of "The Chicago Sun" proposing the idea of a Four Freedoms Day and also of two other letters commenting on it. These enclosures suggest the far-reaching value that the establishment of such a dedicatory day could have upon the people of the United States.

We shall greatly appreciate and heartily welcome any statement or suggestion you will make regarding this proposal of a Four Freedoms Day.

Respectfully yours,

Dana C. Field

We Need a Global Holiday

To the Editor: The plan suggested by Dr. Frederick Kettner for the celebration of Jan. 6 as a global holiday to be called "Four Freedoms Day" is most worthy of wholehearted approval.

Our greatest need today in our gigantic program of winning the war and creating a basis for a permanent peace is the broadening of our thinking beyond the horizon of our national boundary to that of the frontiers of the entire world. Unless the leaders of the United Nations and the people themselves begin to be deeply interested in the Four Freedoms for humanity everywhere, we shall not create a better world, even if we win the war.

Dr. Kettner's proposal can become a most effective means to inspire all peoples to think in global terms. Certainly the celebration of a global holiday will serve to strengthen bonds of friendship and understanding between the people throughout the world. The entire world would, I am sure, welcome such a unifying link.

Four Freedoms Day

To the Editor: The suggestion made by Dr. Frederick Kettner in this column that the President's Jan. 6 proclamation of the Four Freedoms be celebrated annually on that day is, I believe, an idea of far-reaching consequences. Here is set forth in a simple way a great vision, which contains the essence of a powerful influence for the future of our democratic way of life.

What more constructive, psychological and educational force can we as a nation exert in these times than to set an example for the rest of the world in valuing and vitalizing our President's great dictum of the Four Freedoms? Undoubtedly the rest of the United Nations would more than welcome the opportunity to follow suit and join with the United States in the creation of the first global holiday—Four Freedoms Day. Immeasurable is the power of the idea inherent in the setting aside of such a day for binding together the minds and hearts of freedom-loving peoples everywhere.

I believe Dr. Kettner's suggestion is eminently worthy of serious consideration in Washington. I sincerely believe that the President himself will see tremendous power for good in this proposal. The proclamation of a Four Freedoms Day coming in the midst of global strife would have a profound moral influence for victory.

The President
The White House
Washington, D. C.

Dear Miss Tully:

I want to express my sincere thankfulness for your kind letter in which you express the President's appreciation of the Four Freedoms issue of The Biosophical Review.

In view of the fact that our entire work is based upon the Four Freedoms as originally enunciated by our President, we would like to keep him informed of our progress.

I should like to share with you something of the background of the Four Freedoms Center. We dedicated the current issue of the Biosophical Review to the Four Freedoms. You have probably noticed among its contributors Vice-President Wallace, Secretary Hull, Wendell Willkie, President Butler of Columbia, Governor Saltanstill and President Dykstra of the University of Wisconsin. On January 6, 1943 the Biosophical Institute of New York celebrated Four Freedoms Day as per the enclosed program.

A Four Freedoms Center is now also being created in New York City. The enclosed is a tentative list of our aims and activities.

As I am sure that the President will enjoy knowing that we are doing our best to help make the Four Freedoms more widely known in this country, I would be very thankful to you for calling this to his attention at his convenience from time to time.

As we are collecting all data pertaining to the Four Freedoms for our Center, may we request your cooperation in sending us any material you may have or names of individuals particularly interested in the Four Freedoms.

Thanking you for your very kind cooperation, I remain

Sincerely yours,

Frederick Kettner

You're such a GRAND PERSON
No words can convey
The GLADNESS that's wished

For your Birthday today
But you'll surely have HAPPINESS
Each day that you live
If YOU GET BACK one-half
Of the JOY that you give!
