MORGAN J. LEWIS

ADDRESS REPLY TO:

1512 Fox Building

March 13, 1942

Franklin Delano Roosevelt,
President of the United States,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. President:

Enclosed herewith is an autographed copy of the book KEY TO A NEW AMERICA and one of the numerous newspaper articles that have been published lately concerning the plan set forth in the book. I have hesitated to send you a copy of this book until I found how the public were re-acting to the plan.

Many expressions concerning the feasibility and possibilities of the plan from some of our country's leading engineers and men who are highly respected, as well as from the general public, have been sent to me and I thought it was only right to send you a copy as this Administration has been mentioned so often in the book. Several Departments of the Government have requested copies of the book, including the Social Security Board, the Office of Production Management and the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, so rather than have some one give you an incomplete "picture" of the plan I thought it was better to send you the complete plan and what information I had concerning it, personally.

The uppermost thoughts in our minds today are those of production and plans as to how we can win this war as soon as possible.

After the war- what? The plan suggested in the book will answer this question and I believe you will be interested in it more than any one else as the leader of our country and many other places in the world.

As an industrial engineer my work takes me into a good many defense plants, doing all I can to speed up production. While making my rounds several defense workers asked me a question which you, also, may have been asked- if not you have perhaps wondered why there has not been more speed in our defense industry- "Why should we speed up production and work ourselves out of a job by finishing the war in a hurry?"

I am glad to say I do not believe all the men in defense industries and the men in military service have the thoughts that the men have who ask that question, but because they do not ask the question and they do their duty as a true American citizen that is all the more reason why we should give them something to look forward to, if we can.

The above question is logical and one that is usually answered by saying that "after the war people will be in need of so many things they have given up, during the war, such as automobiles, tires, new radios and other now necessities that there will be a continuous boon after the war."

You and I know, as well as many other practical people and engineers that such a boon will not follow this war unless the working man can look forward to having a steady job. History repeats itself, and every war, since history began, has been followed by a depression within a short time. But it is my belief, as well as that of many other practical engineers, that a depression can be avoided indefinitely by the right kind of planning and foresight.

The plan set forth in the book KEY TO A NEW AMERICA will not only give men that work something to look forward to but will help make America what it should be.

We have in our country the greatest engineers in the world which is proven by the obvious achievements they have made in the last thirty-five years. Think of the marsh lands and dumps that were transformed to a land of enchantment- the World's Fair at New York. Then, think of the engineering developments that were displayed and actually working at that Fair. Why can't the brains that were used to make all that possible, be used, after this war, as well as they are being used now? Why can't these brains be used for construction as well as for destruction?

If all the people now working on defense, as well as the others now employed, could look forward to an era of construction and rebuilding of America by practical engineers, after this war, the morale and efficiency of this country would be lifted so high that nothing could stop us from winning the war.

On the economic side, if such a plan were put into operation, after this war, and all the people now working that should work would continue to have a job, it would not be long until our National debt would be liquidated.

If the plan set forth in the book KEY TO A NEW AMERICA had been started years ago and in operation today a large portion of our population would not have to worry about a shortage of oil for heating purposes; a shortage of electricity; water; gas; rubber; tires; copper and many of our other commodities too numerous to mention. Our people would have decent places in which to live as well as be well clothed and well fed, but such a plan was not practical until now because we did not have the electrical and mechanical developments we have today.

Our great statesmen who would support and make possible such a great building and rehabilitating program would be looked up to with pride by all peoples, including those that are underfed, badly housed and poorly clothed.

The psychological and moral effect that such a program would have on our people would give far more employment to our industries than the actual carrying out of the plan, as they would feel confident that they would have a job and would have something constructive to look forward to rather than go back to the various forms of relief work, if any, that is a burden on our tax payers as well as the degrading effect it has on the morale of our people.

After you have had a chance to read the book and consider the plan I would appreciate an expression of your opinion, or, if you // would like to discuss the plan personally with me I would be glad to make an appointment, at your convenience, to discuss the details with you. I might tell you that it took about three years research work to find the information contained in the book and I have more details worked out but thought it would make the book too long to incorporate them all. Therefore, I would like to discuss any details you may be interested in with you personally or give you any further information I can concerning the plan.

Awaiting your reply, I am

Sincerely yours,

JML/MTK

Morgan L. Lewis.

Dream Railroad With One Standard for Rates Pictured as Solution for Economic Ills

IF you were an inventor and an engineer, how would you go about establishing a mounting prosperity without benefit of the financiers' periodical depressions or the social planners' perpetual deficits?

Morgan J. Lewis, who is both inventor and engineer, says it is easy. He tells how in his "Key to a New America," appropriately published by the American Progress Association in Philadelphia.

According to this scheme, the Government takes one last fling and builds a railroad to new frontiers and a new civilization. This super road runs from Chesapeake Bay in a straight line to a point above San Francisco. It has practically no curves and no grades. It has six tracks, is electrified, and carries streamlined trains at 125 miles an hour. The stations are 300 miles apart in what is now open country.

THIS new railroad charges only one passenger fare and only one freight fare—just as the subway charges a nickel. Ten dollars is to be the price of all tickets, no matter how far or near the passenger rides. One hundred dollars is to be the cost of a freight car, no matter what is put in it or how far it travels on this road.

The contention is that the development of the manufacturing and distributing centers that must inevitably follow this abundant and rapid transportation and this cheap rate would absorb all the adventurous capital and idle workmen in the country.

In building those communities there would this time be no slums and congestion and none of the archaic evils that have hitherto marred the growth of our cities. The engineers will design these towns for beauty, space, use, comfort and recreation.

THEY will be modern and civilized and a magnet to attract investment, population and productive activity. Private capital will be used exclusively, but subject to the rules and restrictions of the master plan, and scientific building laws.

The details of this idea are not so important as the general conception. There are certainly enormous possibilities in the idea of rebuilding and redistributing our physical equipment. And transportation has always been the key to the growth of industries and the movement of populations.

And a different and cheaper system of freight rates would undoubtedly start a fever of activity. The resultant benefit, it is maintained, would be apparent to everybody except the overcrowded, diseased and crime-infested centers of municipal bankruptcy that mark the end of the present era.

My Dear Mr. Roosevelt,

In your nationwide message on February 7, 1942, you proclaim the first day of May as Child Health Day. You also state in your proclamation that, quote-- I call upon the people in each of our communities to contribute to the conservation of child health, unquote.

I would like to cooperate in that direction. I am no community social worker, I am no doctor nor am I a nurse. But I am an art student in one of New York City's High Schools.

SUMMERLIN, GEORGE T.
Chief of Protocol,
Department of State
March 2, 1942

Wrote to Miss Tully attaching copy of note from the British Ambassador, 2/24/42, to the Secretary of State, transmitting a letter addressed to the President by John D. Laurie, Lord Mayor of London, dated 1/24/42, in regard to the desire of the Library Committee to present to the President a copy of the Great Chronicle of London. The President replied, 3/21/42, stating in part, "It is not necessary for me to tell you with how much pleasure I anticipate this volume, which, I feel, is a most unusual gift from a most unusual citizenry. The admiration with which we have all observed the courage of the people of your great city will remain with us as long as memory itself endures. May I request that you convey to the Library Committee of the Corporation an expression of my most profound appreciation of their fine generosity in sending me this copy of the Great Chronicle." --- The President's letter as per draft supplied by Mr. Summerlin, 3/21 in reponse to President's memo to Summerlin, 3/12/42: "Will you be good enough to prepare a nice letter of thanks to the Lord Mayor of London and tell him how very keenly I await the arrival of the book?" ------(Signed original of President's letter sent to Mr. Summerlin for delivery 3/23/42. - hm)

Dear President Roosevelt,

May I congratulate you on your birthday, and wish you many years of good health.

And, may I also say how extraordinarily fortunate I think the nation has been in having you at the helm of our government during these troublous times; could wish both for you and the country that the Legislative bodies had upheld your hands better, and made things easier and more pleasant for you.

br

I am taking the privilege of sending you, under other cover, through American Express, a pair of Binoculars which have been in my family for over 35 years. They are of the best Zeiss make, and know they will be of service to our armed forces. However, as I did not know which branch they would be most adapted for, army, navy or air, send them to you.

They are a gift, not a loan to be returned after the war is ended.

May God Bless and protect you.

Dear Sir

Realizing that small unexpected gifts do much to keep us going in times of stress, I am enclosing a rather rare photograph, asking you kindly to present it to the President for his collection of Americana, as an Episcopal clergyman.

The notes on the back of the picture fully explain it. Some years ago I obtained three copies. One I gave to Westpoint where it hangs in the trophy room. One I gave to the Department of Archives and History of the State of Alabama. And now this one goes to the man we all look up to, and whom we should support physically, mentally & spiritually.

Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt,
The President of the United States,
The White House,

My dear Mr. President:

You have, nodoubt, heard of the Lutheran Hour, the one-half hour entirely religious program on Sunday afternoon, now broadcast over a hook-up of over two hundred stations, including short wave to South America, and before the war, to the Orient. This Lutheran Hour is sponsored and financed by the Lutheran Laymen League, and the regular speaker for the past several years is Dr. Walter A. Maier, a Professor of Concordia Seminary, Saint Louis, Missouri.

The Lutheran Laymen League desires to present to you a very small gold pin. The pin has on it a small American flag, a small Christian flag, a small tablet with the words, "For Christ and Country" embossed on it, with a large "V" for Victory superimposed on it. When the pin is completed, I would like to have the privilege of presenting it to you in person as a token of solidarity and unity of the Lutheran Church with the big job ahead of us. I realize full well the enormity of your task and the demands upon your time, yet the presentation will take but a very few moments.

May I express to you the hope that this opportunity can be afforded me, and I will subsequently make all arrangements as to time with General Watson or Mr. Early.

My dear Mr. President:

Realizing the tremendous mental and physical strain under which you are working at the present time, with your permission we would like to offer you one of our units which we feel sure will enable you to enjoy better health and conserve your strength to meet the problems ahead. This offer will not be used in any way as an advertising medium, or for publicity.

Enclosed we are submitting a copy of the patent claims on which the patents were granted, also a number of letters from the people who have used them.

The principle involved in our mattress has been carefully checked from the standpoint of physical and electrical phenomena, and has proved to be of a decidedly beneficial nature. The output and general characteristics of the mattress are such, as is also its construction, that the human body which reposes on the mattress should be the safety-valve; in other words, the body would act as a condenser for the current which will only pass when the body is within the di-electrical field of the conductors contained in the mattress itself. In this manner the body will, to a large degree, regulate the amount of current which is consumed, by reason of the fact that any material which is capable of acting as a condenser has its own potential of resistance, and in this manner the body, acting as a condenser, would be its own safeguard by reason of its condenser capacity.

We know the use of the mattress will conserve time, energy, and maintain health. We feel the use of this mattress in our Army and Navy hospitals would save millions of man-hours and millions of dollars in money. We would be glad to submit our patent rights and the facilities of our plant on a cost basis to supply that need.

We hope this meets with your approval. We are awaiting your permission to ship your unit to you.

Respectfully and sincerely yours,

Dan Brophy

Today's Science

By Gobind Behari Lal

International News Science Service Editor

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—(INS)—Living nerves can be swayed into action with remote electrical control, according to the University of California, Los Angeles, psychologist Dr. Joseph A. Gengerelli's discovery revealed here today.

In his first, condensed report to the official bulletin of the American Psychological Association, Dr. Gengerelli discloses that he succeeded in twitching and contracting the leg muscles of an animal, by distant electrical surges.

The experiments were so arranged that electric power was not sent into the nerves through wires, plates or any other methods of contact.

Metal plates, however, were set up at certain distances above and below, but not touching, the living nerve and muscle samples.

When these copper plates were charged with electricity, one plate with positive, the other with negative electricity, the empty space between them developed "fields," that is, electrical push and pull forces.

Such space forces could be decreased or increased. Their directions could be reversed, by changing the positive or negative electricity in the plates.

Dr. Gengerelli found that such distance changes of electric power concentrations, and electric "discharges," stimulated the nerves which were located between them.

UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE

ELECTRIC MATTRESS

John R. Lubeck, Alameda, Calif.

Application July 10, 1939, Serial No. 283,613

1 Claim. (Cl. 128—376)

This application relates to electro-therapeutic apparatus, and particularly to an applicator constructed in the form of a pad or mattress, and designed to apply gentle current, either alternating or direct, to substantially the entire body of a patient over a relatively long period of time, e. g., throughout the night or at other times when the patient is asleep.

Among the objects of my invention are: To provide an applicator which may be used with a treatment system for giving protracted treatments with a minimum of discomfort; to provide an applicator which will apply gentle current, of which the patient is barely conscious, if at all; to provide an applicator which will apply sufficiently high voltages to a patient's skin to cause an appreciable current flow without involving danger of shock; to provide an applicator wherein the electrodes are permanently arranged in the desired position, without danger of shorting; to provide a treatment system in accordance with the aforementioned objects; and to provide a convenient and economical apparatus for carrying out such treatments.

Other objects of my invention will be apparent or will be specifically pointed out in the description forming a part of this specification, but I do not limit myself to the embodiment of the invention herein described, as various forms may be adopted within the scope of the claim.

I have found, over a long course of experiment, that the electro-therapeutic effect of extremely mild current, either alternating or direct, particularly direct current, continued over long periods of time, are quite different from the effect of the heavier currents more commonly used applied over short periods. The conditions indicating treatments of this character and the results obtained are, per se, no part of this invention. I have found, however, that it is desirable to subject as large a portion of the patient as possible to the effect of these mild currents, both for the therapeutic effect obtained thereby, and to reduce the current density on any one portion of the patient's skin, thus preventing local heating effects or burning. To apply such treatments in a medical office would require undue amounts of time of both the patient and his physician. The ideal time and place for carrying them out is while the patient is sleeping. The broad purpose of this invention, considered apart from the specific objects as enumerated above, is to provide a type of treatment and a method of applying the same which will enable such treatments to be carried out in the patient's own home; the physician may make such adjustment in the apparatus as he deems fit. The apparatus may be connected to the ordinary power supply in the patient's home, and, when the patient goes to bed, the treatments occur automatically.

Considered in terms of apparatus, my invention comprises a pad or mattress which includes two conductors of extended area which cover the greater part of the surface of the mattress or pad upon which the patient would normally lie, these two conductors being separated at the central portion of the pad at a space of not over a few inches. Covering the entire surface of the pad and both of the conductors is a layer of porous material. I have found wool to be the most satisfactory, and of woolen materials I prefer flannel. This does not, however, exclude the use of other than all wool materials, since fairly successful results have been obtained with part wool blanketing material and even with "flannelette." Closely woven materials of fine spun threads, such as sheeting or ticking, however, are not satisfactory for the purpose. A connection is made to each of the two conductors, and in cases where direct current is available or where the current is desired purely for external effects, these connections can be suplied through a current-limiting resistor direct from the lighting mains. Under ordinary circumstances, however, D. C. of the proper potential is not ordinarily available, and hence it is generally desirable to provide a transformer and rectifier for supplying limited amounts of direct current to the two conductors. In this case it is possible to make the current carrying capacity of a rectifier tube also serve the purpose of the current limiting resistor.

In order to use the apparatus the connection is made to the conductors as above described and the patient lies upon the pad, either directly upon the flannel or similar covering, or else separated from it by no more than a thin sheet. The patient is preferably covered exactly as he normally would be upon retiring. At the start, no current whatever normally flows, and this is, of course, what would normally be expected since both the wool and any sheets used are insulators. After a short period of time, usually of the order of about twenty minutes, a slight current flow may be detected, and the patient experiences a distinct feeling of warmth, but this is all. The current continues to increase for a time, and then ordinarily assumes an approximately steady value which remains substantially constant until the patient changes position.

I attribute these effects to electrolytic conduction from the perspiration of the patient's body, diffusing through the loose porous material of the cover of the conductors. It is for this reason that tightly woven material such as sheeting or ticking is not satisfactory. With such material, if the patient lies in one position, one point will become definitely moist and will carry more than the desirable amount of current, which causes heating or even actual discomfort. This causes further perspiration at this one point, and the effect is cumulative. With wool, however, the moisture diffuses throughout the pores of the material, and unless excessive sweating takes place the current density over any area of the patient's body is self-limiting. This current diffusion occurs even though a thin sheet be placed over the wool, though I prefer not to do this unless the patient has an extremely sensitive skin which is irritated by contact with wool. The matter can be stated crudely by saying that the cotton sheeting acts as if it were either a complete conductor or a complete non-conductor, whereas the perspiration supplied by the patient and acting as an electrolyte so diffuses through the wool, even though the latter be covered by cotton, so as to distribute the current supplied.

The actual method and means for applying the invention can best be understood by reference to the various figures of the drawing, wherein:

Fig. 1 is a plan view of a pad embodying my invention and designed for use over the customary mattress.

Fig. 2 is a fragmentary sectional view of a portion of the pad of Fig. 1.

Fig. 3 is a preferred form of the device, shown in longitudinal section, and including a schematic showing of a rectifier circuit for supplying treatment current.

Considering the figures now in detail, the two conductors 1 and 3 are preferably loosely woven screen of very fine wire. No. 10 mesh screen formed of No. 36 bare copper wire is satisfactory, although the actual mesh, size of wire, and even of material are not important.

Covering both sides of the screen forming the conductors is a bag or double layer 5 of blankets, which may be all or part cotton as has been indicated above, but is preferably wool. The blanket material is sewn around the edges and is preferably quilted as shown by the stitching 7 to prevent shifting of the conductors. A connection cord 9, provided with a plug 11, is connected to the two conductors. The size of the applicator is made so that it will cover substantially the whole top of a standard size mattress—single, double, or three-quarters as the case may be—and the patient lies upon the pad either directly or upon a sheet placed over the pad. Ordinary covers are used over the patient. The plug 11 connects to an ordinary lighting service, and the maximum current which can flow is limited by a resistor 13 included in the cord 9. This resistor is ordinarily of such value as to limit the current to a few milliamperes at most, even should a dead short be applied across the conductors 1 and 3.

Figure 3 illustrates a form of the invention wherein the device is embodied in a thicker pad or mattress, this being a preferable form, although it is of course, more elaborate and hence more expensive than the pad first described. The body 15 of the mattress is composed of any of the ordinary mattress materials—curled hair, cotton linters, excelsior or any of the other resilient substances customarily used for this purpose, including, if desired, the so-called "inner-spring" resilient wire fabricated body. The two conductors 17 and 19 are disposed over the surface of the body 15 in substantially the same manner as the conductors in Fig. 1, and comprise bodies of resilient "metal wool." I prefer for this purpose to use a brass wool, compacted of thin ribbons or coils of brass, and without sharp ends. Steel wool, as customarily used, possesses sharp ends which may and almost certainly will penetrate the upper covering of the mattress, and lead to penetrating contact with the skin of the patient which may cause laceration or even serious burns. The two conductors 17 and 19 are separated by a strip 21 of the more usual mattress padding.

The lower cover 23 of the mattress may be ordinary ticking. The upper cover 25 however, is again preferably of flannel or other woolen fabric. The usual tufting 27 is employed to hold the padding in place. For obvious reasons metal buttons should not be employed for locking the tufting. I prefer, also, that the cords or threads 29 used in forming the tufting be of silk, and the same is true of the threads 7 used for the quilting illustrated in Fig. 2.

Contact with the conductors 17 and 19 is preferably made by contact to pieces of screen 31, held in place between the mattress body 15 and the metal wool by means of one of the tuftings in each section of conductors. Any other method of making a contact to the metal wool, which is firmly locked in place may, of course, be used.

In Fig. 3, I also show schematically one method of applying direct current treatment to the patient from an alternating current source. The simple connection shown in Fig. 1 can, of course, only be used to supply current of the same type as is supplied by the mains, and can be connected either to direct or alternating current supplies. With the type of connection shown in Fig. 3, only alternating current can be used.

With this arrangement connection to the A. C. supply is made through a plug 33, which is connected to the primary 35 of a transformer which has two secondary windings. Of these, one is a high tension winding 37, the two ends of which connect to the two plates of a full wave rectifier tube 39. The second secondary winding 41 is a low tension winding for supplying the filament of the tube 39. The two leads 43 and 45, connected to the conductors 17 and 19, are also connected respectively to center taps on the two secondary windings. A resistor 47 may be supplied for controlling the current in the filament of the rectifier tube.

The circuit described is, of course, a simple rectifier circuit such as is frequently used in the radio art. It supplies unidirectional current to the conductors 17 and 19, and if the current be limited by the values of filament current supplied it has the advantage that a relatively high overall voltage may be used applying a fairly high current through to the patient, even in the initial stages of the treatment, and that when conductivity has been increased by the patient's perspiration the current will still be limited. In other words, the use of an electrical discharge tube as current-limiting device has the effect of a variable resistance which is high when the external resistance is low, and low when the external resistance is high.

Dear Ray:

Well, Son, you don't know how much good you did to me when you gave me the mattress.

After using it for three nights I was able to sleep within fifteen to twenty minutes after I lay down, and Boy Oh Boy, my leg and stump was as warm as toast. I slept the clock around every night. But Ray, that is not all. When we came from our trip, Mama was so sick and nervous that I called the doctor for her. During the conversation with the doctor I told him about the mattress. You should have seen him. "That is what she needs!" he said. Her trouble was blood pressure. It was down to 105. So I made her use the mattress and it did her more good than all the medecine. She is feeling about as good as ever, but still very weak.

Well, Old Boy, I am feeling about as good as one can expect of an all-around has-been. You know 66 years like mine take something out of a person. Take care of yourself. Well, I am going to close now. Write soon.

With lots of love,

Mr. J. R. Lubeck.

Dear Sir:

In 1906 while working on a mining claim near Yerington, Nevada, I was taken sick. The doctor who examined me told me I had an incurable case of mineral poisoning, and that I couldn't last over six years. Later examinations by other doctors showed quicksilver and lead poisoning, lead predominating.

I have undergone treatment by different doctors; tried Springs, taking the baths and treatments; I've dieted and fasted, living on a straight fruit diet for six months at one time, and have undergone several water-fasts, the longest being twenty-one days with nothing but water. With all my different treatments, as time went on, my condition gradually grew worse.

About a year ago you brought me two screens encased in woolen blankets, for me to sleep on, and also a means of charging these screens by direct or indirect current of electricity. I now notice an improvement in my condition and although I am now nearly sixty-five years of age, I am strong in the belief of an ultimate recovery.

We have an old saying, "Electricity is Life." If this is so, why shouldn't electricity be recognized as the best treatment for any wrong condition of the human body?

Yours truly,

Gentlemen:

At the age of three I had infantile paralysis, and have not been able to walk since. I am now seventeen and have been confined to a wheel-chair for the past fourteen years.

As can well be imagined, everything has been tried in an effort to make me walk again, all of which has been unsuccessful.

Two months ago I started to sleep on the electric mattress and after this short time, have already noticed improvement. My legs, which before were thin and small in comparison with the rest of my body, have grown both in length and fullness. The muscles are getting stronger gradually, and I have much more control over my legs than before.

With this much improvement in that time I am sure that by the end of a few months I shall be well on my way to recovery.

Sincerely,

Dear Sir:

A few months ago I wrote you a letter telling of the improvement I had noticed since sleeping on the electric mattress. I also said I would write and tell you if anything further had developed. I am happy to say it has.

In all the years I have been unable to walk, my legs no matter how long left in the sun, would never tan or even sunburn. This summer I have noticed a decided tanning of my legs where they are exposed to the sun, showing that there is better circulation. Also, I am able to stand a little on my left leg, without having to have support for my knee. To do this, my legs must be getting stronger. I had been able to move my legs only from the hip before, but can now move them from the knee.

As you have probably noticed from the foregoing, all of the trouble is from the knee with one exception. There is a curve in my spine, causing my back to slump to one side. Since using the mattress this has improved, and I am sitting much straighter.

With these changes for the better, there is little doubt that, aftering using the mattress awhile longer, I shall be as well as anyone.

Sincerely,

Gentlemen:

I purchased one of your electric mattresses about two years ago for my arthritis and low blood pressure. I was suffering with arthritis in the shoulder and the left arm. Within two weeks I felt a great deal of relief, and I can say that I slept well from the very first week. I also had blood pressure of 106, and within six weeks it was up to 128. Since that time I have slept well, and I would not part with my mattress for ten times the money I paid for it.

Yours for success,

Dear Sir:

I take very great pleasure in reporting the wonderful results I have received from the electric appliance you installed in my home some six weeks past. The appliance approved my general health beyond my wildest hopes, as I had almost completely given up hope of ever feeling well again.

Gone is most of that exhausted all-gone feeling. The complete rest and normal sleep at nights brings me up mornings so refreshed and ready to start my routine house work that I take pleasure in doing it. Six weeks ago I almost dreaded the dawn of another day. The convenience of having such a wonderful treatment in one's own home! I would certainly hate to see you pass anyone by that is sick, discouraged, and ready to give up. How I would like to say to all those poor unfortunates, "Don't give up at least until you have given the electric appliance (Kozy Kushen--that is my name for it) a chance to restore health and happiness to one and all."

Sincerely wishing you many years in the grand help you bring to the needy,

Gentlemen:

Some time ago my mother was very ill. Her heart pressure was very low, in fact, it was around 22 for her pulse and there did not seem to be much that we could do about it. I heard about your electric appliance from the inventor himself, John Lubeck, and was persuaded to put one in my mother's bed for her use. It was not long after that before her pulse increased and she began to feel better. Now her pulse is normal, she is about the house and garden, and, although still weak from her long seige of illness, she is gaining every day and getting to be more and more her normal self. We would not do without it now and I feel sure that its use certainly aided very materially in bringing her back as we felt that there was not much hope for her recovery. She is past 82 years of age.

May I say that you have a very fine product and I have recommended it to a number of my friends who should avail themselves of the opportunity to purchase and use one of them.

With the best of luck in your work, believe me to be,

Dear Mr. President,

I have sent you thirty pounds of my regular pack of dried apricots and dried prunes. I hope that part of the fruit will be prepared and served at the White House, and that you may sample it. I think the goods will show how good dried fruit can be when properly handled.

I am fearful that some sweeping move on price-ceilings may bankrupt me at a time when my facilities and experience can best serve the country by producing all of the fruit of this grade possible. The enclosed copy of a letter to Mr. Henderson explains my misgivings.

It is my hope that differences in costs due to differences in quality can be provided for from the outset should price-ceilings become necessary on dried fruits.

(TRUE COPY OF ORIGINAL LETTER)

Dear Mr. Henderson,

Over a long period of years I have been building up an unincorporated family-size business in extra quality dried apricots and dried prunes. I operate efficiently, but since I put more value in the box, my cost of production is substantially higher than that of ordinary commercial packs. Dr. W. B. Cruess, Head of the California Fruit Products Laboratory, University of California, Berkeley knows me personally and is familiar with my plant, methods, and products. I refer you to him.

Ask any housewife for her evaluation of dirty dried fruit. Ask any soldier, or any Englishman, what he thinks of the standard commercial prunes he has had recently.

I am sending you a 25-lb. box of my prunes, and a 5-lb. carton of my sulphured apricots. Please have some prepared in your own home. If convenient, give some to friends for their comment. Turn the balance over to some food agency you trust for further testing. Have them secure a sample of Army-ration prunes, and a sample of the best 30/40 French (variety) prunes on sale in Washington. Their report on the comparative taste, texture, and cleanness both before and after cooking on the three lots will state my case cogently.

I have been in the dried fruit business in California for over forty years. In 1941 I dried over 1,200 tons of apricots--- probably the largest single output in the state. Most of the fruit was prepared without sulphur dioxide for use in manufacturing baby food. This is a new product I have pioneered since 1930. Commercial packs, which are sulphured heavilly, do not earn American Medical Association approval for this important use.

If price-ceilings are established which fail to recognize my extra quality (and the extra costs incurred to produce it), I will be crushed financially and my useful products will be lost.

With government policy so strongly in favor of fruit-drying as a substitute for canning, I am sure you will not place price-ceilings in such a manner that experienced producers of sound products are bankrupted at a time when their experience and output is most needed.

I developed my packing operations as a supplement to my growing operations because I could not make a living, doing business with the major packers controlling the California Dried Fruit Association (a trade association, not a co-operative). I would scarcely expect any recommendations of theirs to be in my interests on the matter of price-ceilings. The fruit that has gone to England and the Army can certainly be sold cheaper than the goods I sent you. I have complete cost schedules for several years back which guided me in establishing my selling prices.

Last year I sold prunes like the sample at 10¢ FOB San Jose. Apricots were 27¢. I shipped the Beech-Nut Packing Company of Canajoharie, New York over two million pounds of top quality fruit for use in baby food. They packed it in glass without sugar. I ship a dry pack to which no water has been added. Such a program certainly helps on sugar, tin, and transportation.

The samples will arrive shortly via prepaid railway express. Please have the tests run off immediately. I hope the report will be on your desk within 48 hours.

I have condensed this letter so much that my explanation may be inadequate on certain points. I will be glad to elaborate by letter, or go over it here with any local representative you name. I appreciate your difficulties from lack of general brevity. I hope you will appreciate the potential injustice of over-simplified price-ceilings on quality producers of sound food items.

Sincerely,

John Leonard

Writes to the President, transmitting letter by Vice President Wallace, expressing her wish to bring a few things to his attention. Says from their numerous contacts with Latin AmericanAssociations they have just found out that Frances H. Grant, the "lady" who resorted to blackmail during the last campaign, made a South American tour, financed by the Hearst News Syndicate, with objective - "Anti-Roosevelt, anti Administration propaganda. Refers to Roerich (no other name mentioned) being at the time fishing in the muddy waters of India, etc. Miss Lichtmann has developed "a marvelous strain of strawberries,"and asks permission to bring a basket of these to the President, probably latter part of June. States that Mr. & Mrs. Louis Horch join in good wishes.--President's memo to Gen. Watson, 5/4/42, asking that he arrange appointment for Mr. Horch and Miss Lichtmann, is attached.--Also attached is office memo re a phone call from Mr.Horch, from N.Y. to the effect that the Vice President told him that the President would see him and Miss Lichtmann possibly while the President was in Hyde Park.--On 5/13/42 Gen. Watson wrote to Miss Lichtmann expressing hope that he may soon be able to arrange appointment for her as indicated above.-- Attached is letter to Gen. Watson, 5/19/42 from Miss Lichtmann in acknowledgment of his letter, and reitterating her desire for a brief appointment with the President.

Dear Mr. President.

I donot always see eye to eye with you, Mr. President - but your address over the Radio a couple of nights ago, did something to me, so much so, that I am coo'ed with you from now on.

To prove to you, Mr. President, that I mean it, I am mailing, under separate cover, a likeness of another illustrious american, a likeness of the late Woodrow Wilson.

It is not a photograph, it is not an engraving - it is woven in silk.

I am sending it without a frame, I feel Mr. President that you will give it a more appropriate "cadre" than I could chose. I have had this thing in my possession for more than 20 years, and I am glad that I have it to give to you as a token of sincerity.

With my respects, believe me, Mr. President,

March 29, 1942

The President of the United States,
Franklin Delano Roosevelt,
Washington, D.C.

Your Excellency:

Under separate cover is being sent to you a hand-made Victory Blanket, which is a gift from the Ladies' Aid Society of the Spiritual Church of Flowers of Huntington Park, California.

Our Pastor, Rev. Victoria M. Freutel, was inspired to make this blanket and her inspiration has been followed in the execution of the work. You will note that there are forty-eight blocks, representing the forty-eight states of which you are the chosen leader. The colors are the national colors, red,white,and blue; and if you will look closely, you will note that each stitch forms a "V" for Victory, which is the ultimate aim of the United Nations.

The blanket has been specially blessed, and carries with it encouragement in this critical period of our national life; and the knowledge that there is a very strong spiritual force guiding your every move in leading us out of the chaos and strife.

May God Bless your every effort.

Dear Mr. President:

My I have just a few minutes of your valuable time to tell you how the poor people of our section of the country are all with you in your efforts to make our land a better place in which to live and a place where every one will have a free and equal chance to live. I know you are the greatest President we have ever had or ever will have.

I am 62 years of age and I make my living with my own hands and I know what the poor people were up against before you were President.

I am sending you a walking stick that I made with my pocket knife and other small tools. I want you to use this stick to knock the day-lights out of those dirty little Japs and send them back home.

You will note the lettering on the stick represent "Remember Pearl Harbor" with "V" for Victory and the 26 knots on the stick represents the 26 Allied Nations.

This stick is made of Good Old Georgia Hickory and will stand most any kind of blow that you might like to give the Japs with it, or possibly you might like to try old Hitler a few cracks with it and I am sure it will stand in case you should use it on either of these fellows.

I hope you will have the guidance of the Higher Power and win victory for all of us at an early date.

With all good wishes, I am

Most respectfully,

Hon.Franklin D. Roosevelt
Washington,D.C.

Dear Mr.President;
It is my pleasure to mail you a walking cane made of the Cholla cactus,(pronounced chō-ya),which grew near Hot Springs in the Big Bend Natl.Park.

The hollow,and each hole were filled with a mucilagenous substance, when dry becomes hard and is easily pulverized,resembling English resin, except in color.

Each hole is just like nature left them,except they were polished with platinum file;over each grew a cluster of spines as you will observe from sample enclosed with cane.

During World War No.1,while working in U.S.Motor Transport shop Ft. Bliss,I made a cane of 50 pieces of various hardwood, graduated in size and length from one and a quarter inch,down to three eighth inch,glued on steel rod.

The hardness of this cane is typical of the hardheaded German,and was named "Victory Cane",dated Armistice day,and is in my museum.

It is hoped that you will likewise name the cane sent you "Victory Cane",bearing date of our next armistice,by which time the Jap will resemble this cane with its hundreds of perforations.

Most Sincerely

Realizing that you are very much occupied in your extremely responsible service to our President and Commander-in-Chief, I have hesitated to write to you respecting my "War Label Poster" tendered to the President on April 15th, 1942 via express. I sincerely hope it arrived in your care as addressed, as Secretary to your office for the President.

With kindest regards and best wishes to you and the President and your entire staff, believe me to be,
