WENATCHEE WASHINGTON AUGUST 4 1934

To Your Excellency President Roosevelt,

Grand Coulee Dam Site Washington.

ack 12-8-7

It is with pleasure that we present to you this basket of peaches.

They were grown on "Columbia and Okanogan" soil, such as you see all around you here. Their growth was made possible by tha use of water taken directly from our mighty Columbia and Okanogan Rivers. These peaches are typical "Columbia and Okanogan" fruit. They have been fittingly named"Candoka"- the name being a contraction of the words "Columbia AND OKAnogan.

Through your vision- wisdom- and above all ACTION, this great Grand Coulee Columbia River Dam, which we are starting to build has been made a reality. As a result of the mighty electric energy to be generated and the water to be made available for future and further irrigation we vision more of the Columbia and Okanogan lands to be reclaimed. More citizens will be given a chance to build happy homes,enjoy the fruits of their labors, raise stock, vegetables, grain and fruit such as this, which is typical and representative of the Columbia and Okanogan Country.

Dear Mr. President:

In presenting to you a copy of "Sons of Martha", written by Dixon Merritt, we do so thinking that you might be interested in the historical and biographic record of the Silas Mason Company.

Our company was fortunate in securing the contract for construction of the Grand Coulee Dam in the Columbia River at Seaton's Ferry. You made this stupendous power development project possible by the allocation of $63,000,000.00, and we thought you would be interested in knowing something about the company to build this dam.

Therefore, it is with great pleasure that we present to you a copy of "Sons of Martha".

Dear Mr. Secretary:-

Archie Roosevelt, my treasurer, and I went up to see our Boy's Club camp all the monitors in which are Harvard Sophomores working their way through college. One of them, who plays the Trombone for his supper, rooms with young Teddy now at Cambridge.

Archie thought the President might be interested in the biography I wrote in "Diogenes" of Quentin. His mother, and the family generally, speak approvingly of it.

There is another Harvard man biographed in "Diogenes - Evert Jansen Wendell. I think the President knew him personally.

I won the Sportsman American Olympic Games Literary award on the Lord Burghley essay.

I inclose also some matter on the last Oxford-Cambridge-Princeton-Cornell expedition. Yale and Harvard meet them next year. Presidents Harding and Coolidge were particularly interested in this schedule.

You note I am in the N. R. A. A year before N. R. A. I won the first case in Court holding that compulsory cost finding installations did not violate the anti-monopoly laws. Copies of my briefs were with Senators Wagner, Nye and Harrison at the time N. R. A. was projected.

re McGovern Speech

LONDON TIMES

A Dinner for Athletes

After the Oxford and Cambridge athletic team had defeated Princeton and Cornell at the White City yesterday the two sets of competitors dined together in noisy amity as the guests of the Pilgrims, and the athletes of England heard some nice things said about them by their visitors. Professor Burnham E. Dell, of Princeton, in spite of having found himself in England during a Test match, declared that "the British have to maintain sanity in sport; we have to restore it."

Some of his English hearers may have felt that he flattered them, but the flattery was sweet. Mr. J. T. McGovern, of Cornell, an old friend of all who have run in these meetings, expressed with a perfect and convincing simplicity his faith that some day both countries may be better served because some of their young men to-day have grown to like and understand each other.

LONDON TELEGRAPH

MR. J. T. McGOVERN, whose witty speech was a feature of the recent Pilgrims' dinner, leaves for America to-day to resume his N.R.A. work. His fortnight's holiday here, he tells me, has been fruitful in another sphere.

International—or rather British-American—sport has been his concern since the war.

He was largely instrumental in bringing about a regular interchange of visits between British and American University athletic teams.

Now he hopes to do the same thing for Rugby football.

DIOGENES DISCOVERS US

JOHN T. McGOVERN has again given richly of his knowledge of men and women and of life. This book is one of optimism, firmly based on experience. It is a grand answer to the discouragement of the day.

Some years ago, Mr. McGovern found that Diogenes had a much better record for sleeping than even Rip Van Winkle; in fact, he discovered that the Greek cynic had never died but was still asleep at the beginning of this century! He accordingly went to Greece, hunted up Pan who never dies, and with him awakened old Diogenes. In this book, Pan induces Diogenes to visit America and England in order to observe us and to compare some of our best with the ancient philosopher's heroes and contemporaries.

Diogenes and Pan though invisible to us, are however able to see us and through us. Among those whom they observe are Devereux Milburn, Lady Astor, Babe Ruth, Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney, Gilmour Dobie, Evart Jansen Wendell, Lord Burghley, Elizabeth Mills Reid, Frank Hinkey, Sir Thomas Lipton, E. K. Hall, Willard Straight, Quentin Roosevelt, Johnny Overton, Hobey Baker, and Gustavus Town Kirby.

Diogenes and Pan recently finished their travels and observations and returned to Greece where Diogenes announces his comparisons and conclusions. These are not by any means unfavorable to our generation.

Should we feel ashamed of our generation when we compare it with that of Homer, of Pericles, of Plato? Or should we be proud and satisfied with what we have become and apparently are destined to be? Was Achilles better than Babe Ruth? Jason superior to Thomas Lipton?

Diogenes answers these questions and many others in Mr. McGovern's book.

DIOGENES DISCOVERS US

IRVIN COBB: "I have been reading Terry McGovern's book. I have written to congratulate him and have said quite sincerely that I feel complimented to hear that his style is said to resemble mine."

GRANTLAND RICE: "I regard Terry McGovern as at present our most profound observer of the needs and hopes of the younger generation. When I finish reading something new from his pen, I save it carefully and often go back to it again."

RUPERT HUGHES: "I will lay odds that nobody can start a Terry McGovern sketch and lay it aside without reading it to the end. My advice to owners of his books is never to let a guest peer into them for the result will be a lost book either through loan or larceny."

F. P. A.: "When I have finished reading one of Terry McGovern's books my sole regret is that I did not write it myself.

RICHARD DANIELSON, Editor of "The Sportsman": "If O. Henry were alive to-day and read some of Terry McGovern's stories, he would understand he had to be on his guard against a worthy rival. Mr. McGovern can readily make the reader forget O. Henry, and while he cannot cure the depression by his books, he can actually make you forget it while you are reading them."

GEORGE CURRIE, of the Brooklyn Eagle: "Terry McGovern is never dull. He is wide awake and he keeps his readers wide awake. I recommend his books and his style to conventional pedagogues, lecturers, and writers who possess nothing of his color and rythm yet wonder why their audiences are dwindling while those of McGovern grow with each of his efforts."

ROBERT HARRON, of the New York Evening Post: "Terry McGovern is one of those unusual writers whose style is so quiet and tranquil that the reader does not realize the efficiency with which he brings him into agreement with the author's conclusions."

ALBERT SPALDING, violinist: "I feel certain Mr. McGovern, the writer, must be a musician also. After reading one of his stories I am convinced that only a man who understands and loves music could have composed the style of that story."

DR. HOWARD SAVAGE, Secretary, Carnegie Foundation: "Readers who are fortunate enough to encounter his Diogenes Discovers Us will undoubtedly force this author into the longer and broader field of the novel."

DIOGENES DISCOVERS US

W. O. McGeehan: "I will trail with Terry McGovern. He forgets statistics and sees human beings."

Geo. E. Timpson, in the Christian Science Monitor: "To any of us who has ever grubbed his way through Caesar, Virgil, or Homer, the cadences of Terry McGoven's gentle satires on classical composition come as a relief and a delight. Sometimes when I read a paragraph, for instance the introductory part of Lady Astor's biography, with its twentieth century paraphrase of the 'Commentaries', I decide I am going to try to write something like that myself."

Romeyn Berry, Graduate Manager, Cornell University: "When Terry McGovern argues a case he talks as a cool-headed, shrewd lawyer is expected to talk. But when he writes a story he belongs to his Galway ancestors and his pen is guided by an Irish piper and one thousand Irish leprachauns."

Edwin B. Dooley, of the New York Evening Sun: "There is a charm and melody in Terry McGovern's graceful and unaffected style that carries me unknowingly without pause to the end of the book. I find myself then putting the book down with a feeling of regret that it is not twice as long."

Dear President!

I wrote you a letter about the time you set sail for your vacation, and I recieved a reply from your Sect'y a few days ago.
In this letter I promised you a walking stick that I have hand carved for your use.
I procured the sprig of ACACIA at Pasadena Cal and I have did the work here on my job at odd spells.
the wood is very substantial and you will find it will support a very heavy person in case of a sudden slip.
I am hoping you will find use for it and it is with the greatest of pleasure I assure you that I am herewith presenting it to you.
I only it were possible for me to present it to you in person, but My most hearty wishes go with it just the same.
I am also hoping that you can see the posibility of the Townsand OLD AGE REVOLVING PENSION PLAN and that you will help put it over and I feel sure that you are mad out of that kind of stuff, to help the aged when it will be a Boon to the old folks and an assured wgy to place several million of worthy men and women into paying positions that are now beiong occupied by men and women past the three score year.
This amount of money added to the paying jobs by younger people spent every thirty days would get business on the move right now.
And the beauty of this plan is that the Gov't has complete charge and the Banks cannot tie it up in frozen assets as they do now.
And again it will eradicate the Poor houses and old Soldiers and Railway pensions and these items will help wonderfully to eradicate much of the Govt expences and will also do away with the cursed Comunity Chest drives that are spent mostly for big officials pay and eradicate the red tape that one has to go through to obtain even a small living for groceries if they are able to get by the first base in their efforts.
Well Brother Roosevelt. I am looking forward to a letter from you If you care to write me letting me know how the cane suits you.
I made it rather long so you can cut off to your hight.
I have also seen the ACACIA.
Wishing you Oodles of lock and my best wishes are for all the U.S. to Co-operate with you in all your endeavors.
Iremain your very Respf'y.

Dear Mr. President Roosevelt,

I am sending you this picture, I drew it myself less than an hour. I hope you will like it.

My mother brought me home from an Orphans Home, and can hardly take care of me. We are poor and I loved to draw, but need training.

Well so long Mr. Roosevelt, I hope you answer with a reward.

Dear Mr. President:

We do not feel any too good over the fact that so much publicity has been given that piece of Tweed cloth, which your Lovely Mother, (meaning well, we realize) brought over from the other side.

It kind of puts us in the background, among some foreigners, and gives them something to boast about, saying, "that even our President is about to wear one of their Tweeds, and that their's are the only fit kind to wear.

Perhaps you may know, as per the enclosed samples, that right here, in the mountains of North Carolina, are made the finest handwoven, Homespuns, Shetlands, and Tweeds, in the world. In all our experience in tailoring clothes, we have never seen their equal.

With your kind permission, I will be glad to come at any time you say, measure you for a suit of this American Tweed.

This would surely offset the feeling created in the minds of many, that only imported Tweeds are the best. Now, Mr. President, do not think me rude in calling this matter to your attention, as we only are trying to do our part in promoting the sales of American made cloth.

Very Respectfully Yours,

Joseph Mandel

Dear President Roosevelt:-

I wanted to put this little personal message in for you so you could have it straight from the heart. So you could really know just what you are doing for people, beside making food and clothing a reality instead of a desire.

When you say "My Friends", we each individually feel that you are talking to us. Our hearts warm and our souls expand. We of the masses, are beginning to believe that we count in the scheme of things, and it is a wonderful thought to know that you as our President, are interested in our personal welfare.

For the first time in the Thirty Six years of my life our country seems literally mine. The hills, the rivers, the great winding highways take on new beauty, for somehow, I feel they belong to me as much as to anyone. I seem a part of this wonderful country at last. Know what the word patriotism really means.

When I read in the paper about the New Liberty League organizing. I could not ease my conscience until I sent them a long night letter. Among other things I said;

" I am for President Roosevelt if his ship sinks, or floats...But I know it will not sink. It is too well founded. A ship constructed of human hearts.....What does your league stand for? It spells all."

And I want you to know that I meant every word of it. I am pulling for you in my limited sphere n now, and I am hoping that by the time the next Presidental election arrives, that I will have won recognition as a writer, and then my influence can be used and made to count.

Mine has been a hard old struggle, and if I can do my bit toward making success a little easier for the next generation of young folks who are born into the middle classes, I shall be proud and happy. I feel that in standing by for you and your great purpose, that I shall in a very small measure play a part.

I have never been interested in politics, but from now on I am keeping myself posted, and on the alert. I want to be equipped when the time comes to fight for you like a soldier in full panoply.

"Understanding Men" is my first novel and I hope you and each member of your family enjoy it. I asked my publisher to save the very first copy off the press for you, and if it succeeds in taking your minds off the affairs of State for a few hours, I shall be more than glad.

Should I be so fortunate as to have this reach you personally, I would like to say to Mrs. Roosevelt, that we feel she is capably bearing her end of the great burden, and that we love her and respect her equally as well as your splendid self.

May God bless you both and guide and direct you, and reward you for your great service to mankind. This is my daily prayer.

I sign myself,

Respectfully and Sincerely,

Adeline Morrow

To the President of the United States,

President Roosevelt:

Kindly accept these baskets as a present from me. I have applied for a patent on the idea because I thought it would be a quick way for selling handkerchiefs in this particular form as both a novelty and a useful article.

I do wish you could correspond with me and give me your frank opinion as to wether or not my idea is prospectively profitable.

I have been under very trying circumstances the past couple of years including losing my home and my health I am a victim of a paraletic stroke.

I also have three children one at working age but unemployed. The other two are youngsters depending upon support from the States Board of Childrens Guardian of this state witch dose not help very musch, because of its irregularity, but I don't mean to complain.

This is my only chance to gain any advantage in the line of prosperity. Again I ask you to kindly correspond with me expressing your sinsere opinion.

I remain a very sincere follower of you and admirer of your marvelous achievements.

Dear Mr Early.

I am sending with this letter a picture of the President which, if you think he would be interested you might show him sometime.

A short time ago a fire gutted my little Studio, and dozens of pictures hanging on the walls, and standing framed on shelves, were completely destroyed.

This one of President Roosevelt was in the center of

New Jersey.

Because I think this a good omen, I am sending it on with my very best wishes, and the assurance of my hearty support of the administration. I feel sure that President Roosevelt will come thru victorious. There are a lot of us out here who feel that way-
