Most Honorable Sir;

Please accept the framed picture which copy appeared in my home paper, the New Orleans Evening States. Your appearance in the Senate on the bonus proposition was unprecedented and although I feel sure that your heart's interest is with the sailor and soldier boys I am sure that circumstances and financial conditions prompt you to move and act cautiously in the best interests of every citizen of the United States.

With best wishes for a continued successful administration

Yours respectfully

Glenn Springs

More Than 100 Years Ago the Indians Discovered the Health-Giving Qualities of This Wondrous DRINKING WATER

Innumerable traditions and romantic legends are forever linked with this famous, ancient watering place — mecca of Cherokee chieftains and courageous colonists in the days when America was being carved out of the wilderness. But no legend is the wonderful water that gushes from this natural spring; a water whose analysis has hardly changed or varied in over a century. As pleasant to drink as any fine table water, Glenn Springs Water provides the natural minerals so essential to good health; in your own home you may now have every benefit that has come to the countless thousands who have visited the Springs down through the years!

from the President of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., Philadelphia

"In July, 1886, I slowly and painfully got out of the buggy at Glenn Springs, hardly able to walk. Rheumatism made dressing and undressing a painful and tedious job for me, lasting nearly an hour. In fact, I could not turn over in bed without severe suffering. I commenced to use the water systematically, drinking three glasses from the spring half an hour before each meal. Under this treatment, I steadily improved, and in one month left Glenn's able to walk with ease and almost entirely relieved. My cure was completed by using the water at home. You are at liberty to publish this letter if you so desire."—Wm. A. Law.

Medicinal Classification—Weak calcic sulphated 4 or (-CaS4). Chemical classification moderately mineralized calcic sulphated, magnesia, calcic, bicarbonated alkaline-saline water carbondioxated.

This class of waters stimulates the secretions of the digestive tract, neutralizes hyperacidity of the stomach, increases metabolism, dissolves uric acid, and uric acid deposits, increases the flow and overcomes acidity of the urine. They exert a diuretic action, and in large quantities increase peristaltic action, liquefy intestinal contents and exert slight laxative action.

Waters of this type are a valuable adjuvant in promoting a proper functioning of the stomach and aid the action of synergictic Galenicals which may be indicated. They possess diuretic, antacid, antilithic, solvent and tonic properties.

Their use has given pleasing results in digestive disturbances and disorders of the stomach, and of the genito-urinary tract, and have been recommended in uric acid, renal and vesical calculi.

Dr. Fitch declares: "I have visited Glenn Springs, in South Carolina, have had occasion to recalculate the analysis of the water, and have no hesitancy in pronouncing its therapeutic value to be unusually beneficial in effect. My observation is that the medical profession is taking cognizance more and more of the important role the right water can play in restoring and maintaining health. No longer is it necessary, incidentally, for physicians to recommend foreign spas when we have at home the equal, if not superior, to any foreign mineral waters. You certainly have in Glenn Springs Mineral Water a truly exceptional product."

Stimulant to respiratory tract. Expels waste, freshens and purifies system. Invigorates, renders tissues elastic, liquefies bile, and intestinal contents—laxative. Exerts diuretic action, counteracts acidity. Antacid, favors excretion of uric acid, counteracts acidity, excretes uric acid. Antacid, uric acid eliminant, tonic. Antacid, tonic to blood stream. Increases coloring matter red blood cells. Styptic in catarrhal conditions.

Soothes the nerve centers of the brain. Oxygenates the blood stream. Stimulates gastric secretion.

From the Honorable Governor of South Carolina

"I will be delighted to have the water in my office, according to your suggestion, and wish that you may know that I have always been a strong believer in Glenn Springs Water, and wherever I go I am ready and prepared to offer a testimonial as to the merits of Glenn Springs. I have frequently thought that we were unfortunate in that this fine medicinal water had not been exploited. During my entire administration I shall be glad to put behind it my prestige as a public official and a private citizen, and will place my stamp of approval on this fine water any time."—*Hon. I. C. Dear Madam:

Sometime ago I saw an article in the "New York Times" that Mr. Roosevelt was a lover of rare books. I am a collector of rare associated volumes, and under seperate cover I am mailing to you the following photographs showing three historical treasures:

1- "The Obedience of a Christian Man and How Christian Rulers Ought to Govern" - by William Tyndale. This volume has the association of our puritan Captain Miles Standish.

2- "The Treasurie of the Catechisim." with the autograph of John Winthrop. Mr. H. I drus Bell Keeper of Manuscripts in the British Museum says that this is the autograph of John Winthrop the younger.

3- a New Voyage and Description of the Isthmus of America, having the very rare bookplate of Captain Cook.

On account of the unusual associations and great rarity of these volumes, I thought that Mr. Roosevelt would like to have photographs of them. As you are his personal secretary, I trust that you may have an opportunity to convey these photographs to him.

HENRY McMANUS
79 GARDEN ST.
HARTFORD, CONN.

February 27, 1935.

Dear Mr. Roosevelt:

One of your distinguished predecessors used to stop at a tavern in this locality whenever he came to New England, many years ago. There was a tradition in the tavern keeper's family that he stayed there because he liked the cooking, the cellar and because he admired the bed and window curtains in the room he always occupied. Charles Croft wife's family owned the tavern in the days of the Revolution and for many years after. He gave me part of one of the curtains twenty years ago.

A piece of it I have made up into a tray, useful for a purpose he did not object to and which you have made possible to accomplish without breaking the law. The frame is old, the glass is new, the handles are open to question.

May a man, who believes that God Almighty restored you to health so you could save the country your predecessor established and who also believes and hopes you will occupy your present home in Washington as long as he did, offer this little souvenir of the past to you with the assurance that in accepting it you will make him your ever grateful debtor.

I have the honor to be yours faithfully,

Henry McManus

P.S. It's perhaps unnecessary to mention that your distinguished predecessor was General George Washington and the tavern is now The Elm Tree Inn, Farmington, Connecticut.

Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt,
