Dear Don:

This brief note is to tell you that your gift, with accompanying poem, amused the President very much. He asks me to thank you for being so thoughtful.

Also, may I, at the same time, thank you for your contribution to my medicine chest. I think it helps a lot.

It was grand to see you last week and I do hope by this time you are settled at O.P.M.

President F. D. Roosevelt

My Dear Mr. President:—

Three weeks ago I sent you a booklet and a few days later your secretary informed me he would bring it to your attention. I am proud and grateful to Mr. H. M. McIntyre for the very nice letter he wrote me and I hope sincerely you gave the contents of "Why I am a Catholic" some consideration.

And Mr. President you must know our great country is dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary and won't you please ask Her to help you to direct the destiny of our nation? In this letter I am enclosing Her Miraculous Medal. It has been blessed. Also is a clipping as an introduction. Please don't consider me too presumptuous my only thought is for your and our country's happiness and safety.

Very Sincerely,

"Those who shall wear the Medal when it is indulgenced will receive great graces, especially if they wear it around the neck. Graces will be abundant for those who wear it with confidence. But they must pray, they must pray!" Thus spoke Mary, the Mother of Jesus, to the obscure and lowly-born Sister who was entrusted with the mission of introducing to the world the Medal of the Immaculate Conception, now commonly known as the Miraculous Medal. on Nov. 27, 1830 in Paris, France.

An immediate operation was decided upon, and in the middle of the night—the eve of the feast of the Sacred Heart—the surgeons worked over her. All that human skill was capable of was done for her. But she failed to rally, and her loved ones were sent for. "The girl cannot live—we have done our best for her—given her the one chance we thought might spare her life, but we have failed!" Thus said the doctors. "Send for her people, for there is not a ray of hope."

Wrote to Mrs. Roosevelt asking what was done with a framed copper plaque, on which was embossed a copy of the Declaration of Independence, which Mr. Mayer sent to the President in 1933. -- Miss Tully wrote to Mr. Mayer on Nov. 17, 1941, stating that the plaque was placed with the President's mementos and no doubt it will eventually reach the collection at the Library at Hyde Park. -- (Miss Tully's letter is as per information received from Fred W. Shipman, Director, The Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, Hyde Park, N.Y., Nov. 12, 1941, in response to Miss Tully's request of Nov. 10, 1941.)

A traveling salesman registered at a small town hotel and informed the landlord that he would need a room for several days. He handed the landlord a $100 bill and asked him to keep it in his safe until he checked out, as it was a large sum to carry in his pocket. Next day, a garage man presented the landlord with a statement for $100. Not having that much cash on hand the landlord used the salesman's $100 bill to settle the account, planning on replacing it before the bill was called for by its owner.

The garage man paid his grocery account with the same bill; the grocer paid a debt for clothes with the same bill and the clothier paid the hardware dealer an account of $100. The hardware man had borrowed $100 from the hotel man so he settled by using the same bill. The hotel man put the bill back into the safe. Several days later the salesman paid his hotel bill with some money he had in his pocket and the landlord gave him back his $100 bill. The salesman lighted a match and burned the bill, stating that he had found it was counterfeit and must be destroyed.

The question is, who lost by the transaction? The answer is, nothing was lost. Circulate your money and many obligations will be met before it lands in some Eastern vault. -- The Thornton and Minor Clinic Magazine

President Roosevelt,
The White House,
Washington, D.C.,
U. S. A.

Sir,

I am sending you under separate cover a booklet containing a small portion of the Correspondence which brought into being the Joint Industrial Council of the Printing and Allied Trades in this country. Perhaps you may have time to look through it.

The J.I.C. has brought peace to our industry where formerly there was bitter antagonism. There are now no "Strikes" or "Lock-outs" in the Printing and Allied Trades. There are 60 members of the J.I.C., 30 representing Capital and 30 representing labour, and you would hardly know which is which, there is now such a desire to see the other fellow's point of view. They met previous to the war every three months. This has been established for 22 years, and what is known as the J.I.C. spirit has taken the place of former bitterness.

I shall be interested in the development of a similar scheme in the U.S.A.

With best wishes.

I am,

Yours sincerely,

Ernest Quitty

Dear Mr. President:-

"What America Thinks" has just come off the press and it is our distinct pleasure and honor to present you with the first copy herewith. This encyclopedia of American newspaper cartoons and editorials on the current European imbroglio is our contribution to the cause of democracy.

Numerous advance orders have already been received from universities, libraries and prominent individuals in the United States, Canada, and foreign countries. With this beginning, it is our plan and hope to distribute this document as extensively as possible within popular reach, that it may serve as a lesson and inspiration to free men everywhere.

We sincerely trust that you will have the time to feel some of the satisfaction in reading that we have had in compiling these masterpieces of American journalism.

Honorable F. D. Roosevelt,

Dear Mr. Roosevelt: I am enclosing a badge of the League of the Sacred Heart.

The Catholic wear this as a petition for divine aid. We say the prayer on it, and wear it near the heart. We do not regard it as a charm nor do we give it any adoration only as a very poor picture of the Sacred Heart as it was revealed to Saint Margaret Mary.

I would suggest that you try wearing it when you go into conference with your cabinet. See how God will direct your ideas and give you confidence. And when you come out do not forget to thank Him.

Openness I cannot know of all you suffer on being obliged to declare war. But I feel for you & would try to alleviate it as much as possible.

I have told no one about my sending you this and I don't want you to give me any publicity on account of it. I don't like publicity. So please withhold my name if you speak of it. I trust you to do so.

My dear Miss Clough:

Thank you, in the President's behalf, for your letter of December twelfth. It was kind indeed of you to send him the religious medal and I can assure you that it is most gratifying to him to know that he has your friendly thoughts and your prayers during these trying days.

Very sincerely yours,

"Give heed, O my brother..."
Twelve hundred years ago St.
Odilia so prefaced a remarkable prophecy that to date has proved true.

The sisters of the convent agreed that it was probably Odilia's duty to go home. So beautiful a character, they thought, could not but bring a blessing to the lonely old man, her father. So she made ready to go with her brother. But before she began the journey, they sat together and she wrote out the vision she had had that seemed to her to be far in the future, that both might remember clearly all the details.

ODILIA: Give heed, O my brother...for I have seen the terror of the forest and the mountains...the Era has arrived
when the conqueror will come forth from the banks of the Danube. He will be a remarkable leader of men. The war he will wage will be the most terrifying that men have as yet undertaken...he will be victorious on land, on sea and in the air. Winged warriors in incredible attacks will arise to the fir-mament to seize the stars and hurl them upon the cities from one end of the universe to the Then will come the last battle

...there shall have appeared the warrior who will scatter the troops of the conqueror, and the nations will say, "The hand of God is in it. It is a just chastise-ment"...Men will have beheld such abominations in this war that their generations will be determined never again to see others like them...

HUGO: But when will all this happen?

ODILIA: I don't know exactly
...I think it will happen...and perhaps when it does if anyone remembers these words, he may recognize that this is the time to which they refer. But I remember how a good bishop warned me that prophecy is a dangerous gift. I wish none of these things would happen except what I

THEY'VE LOST FACE

The Samurai of old Japan was honest, brave and true—
At stabbing neighbors in the back he would have looked askew;

But he has gone and in his place has sprung a mongrel horde,

Whose claim to fame is putting babes and women to the sword...

Our love of peace they take for fear, and bomb us from the sky,

So let us smite the yellow sons of the one-time Samurai!

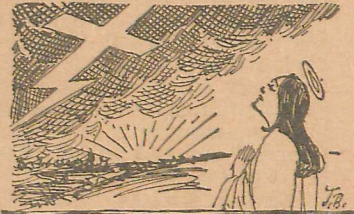

AMAZING THINGS have been happening since we published the prophecies of St. Odilia in this column on Sept. 27, 1940. We repeat our story of St. Odilia's life today due to the way the actions of Japan are bearing out what the little Saint predicted about the Orient. Read on, gentle reader, and wonder:

"Give heed, O my brother..."

Twelve hundred years ago St. Odilia so prefaced a remarkable prophecy that to date has proved true.

...Toward the middle of this period, the small nations submissive to the peace conqueror will cry: "Give us peace. But there will be no peace for these nations...This will not be the end of the war, but the beginning of the end...It is then that there will be revolt among the women of his own country who will try to stone him.

There will be prodigies, too, in the Orient. The third period will be the shortest of all and the conqueror will have lost faith in his warriors. This period will be called the period of invasion because the soil of the conqueror will be invaded from all sides.

Dear Mrs Roosevelt,

I am mailing you by attached parcel the prints which I mentioned in a recent letter. I am very glad to be able to add a complete set of these for his Hyde Park Library; and I hope that he may have as much pleasure when you give them to him as I have in sending them.

We who are too old to be of active service to our Country and our President can serve a little if, from time to time, we can take his mind away from the affairs of state with some item of peculiar interest to him. I do hope that these prints may help him in such a way at this time of strain and stress, when even a moment or two of diversion and relaxation may mean rest and new strength for the tasks at hand.

When I think of your husband I recall the words of Paine in the Crisis where, referring to General Washington, he writes, "he never appeared to full advantage but in difficulties and in action. There is a natural firmness in some minds which cannot be unlocked by trifles, but which, when unlocked, discovers a cabinet of fortitude; and I reckon it among those public kind of blessings, which we do not immediately see, that God hath blessed him with uninterrupted health, and given him a mind that can flourish upon care."

Dear Mr. Morrison:

I have asked the President about the Naval prints which you so kindly offer to send him, and he would be delighted to have them for the Library at Hyde Park. He has one or two of the Cozzens prints in his house, but not the whole set, and would therefore be grateful for this addition to his collection.

Thank you very much for writing to me about them.

Dear Mrs Roosevelt,

I am writing to you rather than to your husband who, as our President has his time too busily engaged to be approached on a matter pertaining to one of his hobbies--the collecting of American Naval documents, models, prints, etc. At a recent church rummage sale I acquired a set of Old Navel Prints by Fred Cozzens published by the National Military Publishing Co of New York City in 1893. These are in color and in good condition. If Mr Roosevelt does not have these and you think that he would be interested, I should be very glad to send them to him.

As Mrs Morrison has a very large collection of perfume bottles both old and modern, I realize that one's friends are very apt to duplicate items already possessed, and I have therefore taken the liberty of intruding upon your time with this enquiry..

Most sincerely yours
