POLE TO PANAMA
PUBLIC RELATIONS COMMITTEE
P. O. Box 135, MADISON SQUARE STATION
NEW YORK CITY

March
May 28th, 1935.

His Excellency,
The President of the United States,
The White House,
Washington, D.C.

My dear Mr. President:

Your personal Secretary, Miss Hand, has kindly written me that my new book, POLE TO PANAMA, has been received at the White House. Can I hope that you have had the time and interest to read it, and if you have, to tender my most cordial thanks for your attention.

Should my thesis have interested you, I beg to be permitted to add a few words, in the event it may have struck you that my suggestions implied only a "military" move on the part of the United States. Such, my dear Mr. President, is not the case. At present my book does not contain all the sidereal illustrations, adumbrations and explanations of this, that and the other points raised and as originally conceived and written, entirely because of lack of space - a restriction of my publishers'.

I venture, therefore, to be allowed to set down herewith some of the collateral ideas which are in my mind as to the application of my thesis; and so as to indicate there may be, indeed, that there are, other things to be said in this vital field besides those which imply force.

Beyond its implied intensification of our mutual friendships with Latin-American countries, and with Canada, which in any event should proceed, it is my contention that the first move in applying a catharsis for present problems relating directly to us (and what major problem of the New World does not concern us intimately?), should be in the enlargement of the meaning and functions of the existing Pan-American Institute. Plenary power over certain matters should be the aim and eventual function of this institution; at first, perhaps only tentatively; but the ground cleared for still larger activities throughout its field.

The spheres of strong reciprocal trade agreements should be surveyed, and such agreements established. The ultimate movement should be in the direction of sweeping away all trade barriers (tariffs, foreign, i.e., non-New World economic and financial preferentials), insofar as these can be eliminated, reduced and adjusted upon existing local production costs (wage levels, standards of living, etc.), of others.' Between the United States and Canada, for example, no such thing as a "line" of tariffs, etc., should exist at all, providing protective provision is made against the entrance to our country of foreign-produced goods. Canadians should be permitted, indeed, encouraged, along with their goods, to enter here, and we and our goods enter there, without restriction.

There should be established, and actually function (which again means a reorienting of plenary powers, subject, of course, to the agreements of the U.S. Congress), a New World Central Clearing Bank. This bank should have the first study and consideration of all major financial operations affecting New World trade and investment, especially Old World investments in the New World. Instead of, as at present, credits being obtained abroad, which is to say, in the Old World financial centers, this field should be exclusively an "American," a Pan-American, a North American, field. Instead of, as at present, the "whole world" being invited, solicited rather, to invest in Latin-American bonds, securities, private economic enterprises, etc., of Latin-American countries, - considering the immensity of the sums for such Latin-American investment always available in our country, ours should be the first opportunity for such investments, as arranged, presented and thereafter to be regulated through this New World Central Clearing Bank. Such an institution, if ably and broadly conducted, would, of course, have all the basic and reliable data upon the worth, reliability and potentialities of such investments, and the alleged existing hiatus between promises, hopes and fulfillments now prevailing, tend to disappear. Thus would investments be made more secure, and the international political complications now inherent in existing Old World investments in the New World tend to be minimized, and eventually done away with entirely.

Under the new conceptions of an extension of the Pan-American Institute and from the creation of the above New World Central Clearing Bank, a policy of pacific penetration through colonization from the United States could be launched. With a supervised, de facto and benevolent, so to speak, occupation by emigrants from the United States; an actual living and working and supervising in person by our citizenry, the often deplorable frictions arising from foreign investments in Latin-America because of long-distance "control" by a limited foreign personnel, and a local (foreign-employed) personnel of Latin-Americans more interested in percentages from investments than in considering what the local (and international) social and political results are upon Latin-America, - these would tend to disappear. This would take place because of the superiority of American methods in actual close personal control on the spot. Current and periodically recurrent instabilities in Latin-America would be greatly minimized.

Such, my dear Mr. President, are some of the "longer view" ideas which my book, POLE TO PANAMA, should - and were intended to - convey.

In my opinion, it is a question ultimately of American bonds or American bayonets, or somebody's bayonets. The U.S. will some day be looked to, and depended upon, presumably, to defend all the Old World's present investments in Latin-America. In POLE TO PANAMA I have set it down that "where responsibility exists, there also should go occupancy, authority and control." It should be growing ever more clear that this is axiomatic. The existing actual and potential mess in Cuba is a striking illustration; our own actual occupation of the Philippines where, since liquidation of the Insurrection, there have been no situations comparing to present-day Cuba's, another. In the Latin-American world today "anything" is henceforth a likely possibility...

Should you, my dear Mr. President, have found time to concern yourself with my book and the foregoing ideas, you will have my deep appreciation and thanks; and if I may venture to express it without offense, there is in my POLE TO PANAMA thesis as great, if not greater, opportunity to render immense constructive services to our country, and to place yourself as imperishably in American History as did your great predecessor and relative, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt.

Again with all thanks for your every interest and courtesy, I beg to remain, dear Mr. President,

Respectfully,

Frank Pease

Frank Pease (Maj.)

U.S. May I add what a prominent American writer has just said of POLE TO PANAMA: Mr. Arthur B. Reeve, author of the "Craig Kennedy detective tales and numerous other books: "This is the most American thing I have ever read. It is a whole new Americanism. It will have as great an effect upon the future of America as the Constitution did upon its beginning."

My dear Miss Hand:

Please accept my cordial thanks for your kind note of acknowledgment of the receipt at the White House by the President of my book, POLE TO PANAMA.

As you did not state that the President had read it, I have no means, of course, of knowing that he has, although I am inclined to believe it is the sort of thing which he would be, as so many prominent men are, interested in.

On the assumption that he has, or will some time read it, I have ventured to set down a few ideas in the book's connection. These I beg to send to the President care of yourself, for the reason that I am not a "letter-writer," generally speaking, and I beg to leave it to your own knowledge and discretion as to the President's time and interest whether or not to present him my enclosed letter.

Again let me thank you for your kind letter.

With all respects, I am,

Sincerely,

Frank Pease

Frank Pease (Maj.)

P. S. Of course, it goes without saying, that I shall be highly gratified to learn of the President's further interest and of his having read the book. Hen. Herbert Hoover, who received a copy, was most cordial in its reception and acknowledgment, unusually so, we thought, for Mr. Hoover, and sent me his latest book, THE CHALLENGE TO LIBERTY. But, entre nous, it would take more than Mr. Hoover's book to make me a "Hooverite;" 'cause - if you will permit - when I listened in, years ago, to President Roosevelt's Al Smith nomination speech, or some wonderful speech at, I believe, the Chicago Convention then, I turn to a fellow-listener, and "prophesied:" "There's the next President of the United States!" *F. Oregonian July 10 A Buck of Bonneville Natty Bumpo himself couldn't have scored a cleaner hit, and down crashed the regal mule deer, to flounder and die. Mr. Mike DeCicco, president of the board of trustees of the Willamette Democratic society, lowered the rifle. All this was in open season, of course, and in accordance with the statutes made and provided. A day or so ago the mounted head, a trophy proud even in this mimicry of life and alertness, went to Washington to be placed in the White House. A fine deer. An almighty fine deer.

The big buck looked his last on this pleasing world in the hills above the great river of the west, where now is the Bonneville dam site. It was there that the president of the board of trustees of the Willamette Democratic society laid the quarry low. And he thought, Mike did, with the instantly responsive loyalty of a good democrat, that here was a gift for the president—something to remind him, in his moments of care or of relaxation, of the west and of the vast project he sponsored. The mule deer had a mission.

All this is idly said, and without real purpose. Heaven above us, what a head it is, to be sure. Those branched, strong, symmetrical antlers. The fearless poise of the head, borne high and gallantly—the almost vibrant suggestion of freedom and self-reliance. Of adequate survival against natural odds. A sort of antlered freeman of the Oregon forest. Tameless and compliance have their uses, let us grant, but this creature was free, and nature was as proud of it, let us suppose, as was Mr. DeCicco. The president receives many gifts whose disposal must perplex him—but this gift is of another sort.

Order

An Oregon mule deer will take its place alongside the democratic party's emblematic donkey.

Mike DeCicco, president of the board of trustees of the Willamette Democratic society, shipped a 16-point, 37-inch-spread mounted deer head to the White House Monday.

DeCicco offered the deer head to the president last summer when, as head of the Willamette society, he went aboard the Houston to greet the president on his arrival here.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who has seen a number of deer when she drove through Oregon en route from San Francisco to meet the president in Portland, became interested. Before DeCicco left the Houston, Mrs. Roosevelt told him she would write when they wanted the deer head shipped. A letter instructing DeCicco to send the deer head to the White House was received from Mrs. Roosevelt Saturday.

"The president should enjoy that deer head," DeCicco explained. "I shot it on the Oregon side of the river near the present Bonneville dam site."

Pres. Roosevelt was chiefly responsible for the authorization of Bonneville dam. He visited the dam when he stopped in Portland last summer.

DeCicco offered the deer head to the president last summer when, as head of the Willamette society, he went aboard the Houston to greet the president on his arrival here.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who has seen

a number of deer when she drove through Oregon en route from San Francisco to meet the president in Portland, became interested. Before DeCicco left the Houston, Mrs. Roosevelt told him she would write when they wanted the deer head shipped. A letter instructing DeCicco to send the deer head to the White House was received from Mrs. Roosevelt Saturday.

"The president should enjoy that deer head," DeCicco explained. "I shot it on the Oregon side of the river near the present Bonneville dam site."

Frs. Roosevelt was chiefly responsible for the authorization of Bonneville dam. He visited the dam when he stopped in Portland last summer.

Dear Mr. President:

It is with a good deal of pleasure and pride that I present you with the final publication of the Real Property Inventory of the City of New York, the largest inventory of its kind ever undertaken, the gathering of the data for which at one time required the services of six thousand men and women. It is similar to real property inventories taken in other cities, but I should like to call your attention to the fact that the total populations of the sixty other cities was only nine million, while that of New York City alone is seven million. This perhaps will give you some idea of the size of the project, which was started originally under the Civil Works Administration and then was transferred to the City Works Division.

This is the kind of work which will remain as a living memorial to Work Relief and I want to state that those who took part in making this Inventory possible showed an interest and a devotion to the task which could not have been excelled under any other circumstances. If anybody thinks that a dole is more advantageous to this country than this sort of work, it's time he went off by himself to do a little meditating.

Dear President:

A few days ago I sent to you
a book DOGS OF THE WORLD by Eve Parshalle, which we released last week.

This book has been written with the hope that it may be included in the schools of America. There is not anything new to say about dogs, but there is a new field in which to exploit them; with this in view the authoress has written the book
under a vocabulary list from the Los Angeles Board of Education.

My next desire is to do a book
DOGS OF THE WHITE HOUSE in which human interest stories about White House dogs and their owners for the past decade, would be used as the material. Don't you think it would prove interesting reading to admirers of dogs?

I'm so glad you have a copy of the book, and hope you will find time to read it.
