Secretary to The President,

Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

We furnished an advertising plaque to our business associates, as described in the enclosed mimeographed sheet.

To our surprise we received such appreciative letters from our associates that it occurred to us it might be a convenience to The President to have one of these plaques for a handy reference as to the dates on which some of his distinguished predecessors served our nation.

He might also be interested in the list of questions enclosed, which we put in largely with the idea of getting more response, and he undoubtedly would get several good chuckles if he could see the diversity of remarks referring to the third paragraph of the circular. One bird even objected to the fact that Theodore Roosevelt's name was abbreviated.

Yours very truly,

PATRICK LUMBER COMPANY,

At various times in the course of a year conversations will take a turn to who was President in 1846. Or, perhaps we want to know when William Henry Harrison was President. Then we start with George Washington and hurriedly add their terms of office, but when we get up through John Quincy Adams we begin getting hazy as to who succeeded him.

So we had a bronze plaque made scheduling all Presidents, and are taking the liberty of sending one of these to you under separate cover. If not received within one week will you kindly advise so we may check and locate reason for non-delivery.

These were originally ordered for November delivery, but we then made the mistake of holding up production until November 6th on the possibility (some say a "prayer") a 32nd or 33rd President might be elected (depending upon how you count Grover Cleveland)one of our great Presidents. Further delay then developed account the rearmament program and we are just getting delivery.

We are also enclosing a set of questions we sent to INFORMATION PLEASE, which apparently do not fit their program. If you do not know all the answers, and are interested, drop us a postal and we shall be pleased to forward promptly.

Yours very truly,

PATRICK LUMBER COMPANY

Dear Miss Le Hand:

I cannot resist writing to you about a book, not a nautical book, in the hope that you can persuade President Roosevelt to read it, if he has not done so already. I refer to James Burnham's THE MANAGERIAL REVOLUTION, just published by John Day Co.(220)

This book describes in 'scientific' and unimpeachable terms what is happening in the world today, and what is probably going to happen in the near future. This is the most interesting book I have ever read, and I am convinced that it is of the utmost historical importance.

Burnham advocates nothing; he draws no moral comparisons. He restricts himself to a search for knowledge and facts.

If either you or President Roosevelt will promise to read the first chapter I will gladly send you a copy with my compliments. I might add that I have no financial interest in this book, but merely have an overwhelming desire that as many serious and intelligent people read it as possible.

Sincerely yours,

Alfred Paine

His Excellency
The President of the United States
The White House,

Sir:

As a patriotic citizen, I am extremely desirous of offering the services of my son, aged 21, and myself which have not been availed of, although I am registered with the New York State Employment Service and have been so for the past six months. In fact my son has been so registered for the past two years.

I am an interior decorator and thoroughly experienced in all phases of the painting industry, having conducted my own establishment for many years.

I consider it the duty of every citizen to tender his services, particularly those who are well versed in some occupation, in order that the United States might reap the fullest benefit. Unfortunately, I have been unsuccessful in my efforts to connect with any project essential to National Defense, hense this appeal to you.

I am 57 years of age, the father of four sons, a citizen of this country 25 years, and can assure you that your assistance will not be unappreciated.

As a loyal Democrat of long standing, may I offer the enclosed portrait drawn by me, as a testimonial to your greatness.

Dear Mr. President:

I am enclosing herewith, a picture of yourself together with part of your family. I realize that my work is no masterpiece, inasmuch as I am a barber, by trade, and painting is only a hobby to me.

I, therefore, would thank you to accept my little token, as being a gift from one of your many admirers.

Respectfully,

Dear Mr. Roosevelt,

I do not address you as 'Sir', because all of us here feel nearer to you than that.

I am sending you with this letter a copy of a little Guide to Washington published in your capital in 1826 - not because I believe there is not one available to you in the White House library, but because I think you may like to have it for your own keeping. It brings with it my very best wishes, and, if I may be permitted, my warm congratulations on your re-election.

You have never heard of me, but my colleague, Denys Smith, can tell you, if you are at all interested!

Yours sincerely,

O J Pulvermacher

My dear Miss LeHand:

I am returning herewith the letter addressed to the President by Mr. O. J. Pulvermacher, together with the copy of the Guide to Washington which Mr. Pulvermacher sent to the President.

I have checked with Mr. Denys Smith, the Washington correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, who informs me that Mr. Pulvermacher is a very responsible person whom he knows very well and that Mr. Pulvermacher is in charge of the Manchester edition of the Daily Telegraph. Since there would appear to be no reason why the President should not accept this interesting volume, the American Ambassador at London has has been requested to thank Mr. Pulvermacher for his courteous gesture.

Honorable President Roosevelt

Dear Sir:

During the week of Oct. 16, 1940 "Registration Day." We were inspired to write a song which we dedicated to you being the nations Chief Executive and also to the Selective Service Act. So as an appropriate title we used this one, "Gone with the Draft."

We played and sang it in the clubs out in Hollywood, California and it made such a public hit that Decca Records Inc. heard about it which resulted in our recording the song for them exclusively.

Just recently the record "Gone with the Draft" was released so we are sending you a complimentary copy which we hope you and Mrs. Roosevelt will find both amusing and in keeping with our National Patriatism.

My dear Mr. President:

As evidence of my conviction of the absolute necessity for delivering the goods to Great Britian as the best way of insuring victory and ultimate peace, I am sending you today under separate cover the original of a drawing used in April, in its newspaper syndicate, by The Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies. Dr. Terry, of the New York office, has just returned the drawing to me, and I hope you will accept it.

I believe firmly in your all-out aid to Britian policy, and have supported it to the full. I hope you will go further, as necessity demands, and use our Navy and all our other force toward the accomplishment of this end.

You have not only my faith and trust, but that of the vast majority of Americans I know, and under your leadership and guidance we look to the future with confidence.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Pres.,

Dear Sir:

Several days ago I sent you my book, The New Art Education, Harpers.

I did this as an impersonal gesture because I wanted to have on record at headquarters my statement of approval, in book form, of the Federal Art Program which I consider to be the most important single cultural event in American history.

The last two pages of my book sum up my opinion of this issue.

Sincerely yours,

Ralph M. Pearson

My I urge that cultural programs, including all the Arts Projects, shall not be curtailed or eliminated because of the pressure of defense problems. We must keep the culture which we are defending in operation.

SALISBURY, Frank O.
London, England,
June 4, 1941.

Writes the President he wants to present to him the portrait which he did of the President at the White House sometime ago. States the portrait has been widely shown in England.--Attached is memo. to the President from Gen. Watson of 7/11/41, saying that Lord Halifax had given him the above mentioned letter for the President and that the picture was en route.--The President, by memo. of July 14th, asked Miss Tully to prepare a letter for his signature to Mr. Salisbury.---The President, on the 15th of July, wrote Mr. Salisbury saying he and Mrs. Roosevelt were thrilled that they were to have the portrait. The President said they had always felt that it was by far the best one ever done of him and that the family would be very happy to own it. The President said they thought much of Mr. Salisbury these days and hoped the day was not too far off when Mr. Salisbury would be coming back for another visit.

--- Mr. Salisbury commended the President on his radio speech of May 27, 1941.

FRED PABST
917 W. JUNEAU AVE.
MILWAUKEE, WIS.

June 27, 1941.

Dear Mr. President:

According to a recently published news item, our Honorable Governor, Julius P. Heil, has directed to you, at the White House, a package of our fine Wisconsin cheese and a case of good Milwaukee beer, a brand from the vats of only one of our well known and esteemed Milwaukee breweries.

Recognizing, as you undoubtedly do, that Milwaukee is the beer capitol of America, and that we are all envious of our reputation for brewing several brands of fine beer, six other breweries are looking to protect their laurels and all feel that the selection of one brand over that of another is a matter of choice, or, as the old lady said when she kissed the cow, "Every one to his own taste."

Not to be outdone by our generous and promotional minded governor, we are shipping to you a specially made up case of the brews of each of our six Milwaukee breweries.

We hope you will enjoy these beverages and we most certainly will appreciate having you sample each of the six brands of beer that Milwaukee has made famous.

On those "resting periods" that our good governor mentioned, and on such other occasions when appetite craves a snack of delicious wholesome Wisconsin cheese and rye bread, may you also enjoy a refreshing glass of good Milwaukee beer.

Respectfully yours,

Fred Pabst

And lets Him out to go and free
An erring heart from sin.

I wish I were the little bell

When God comes down each day to dwell
With hearts He loves the most.

I wish I were the chalice fair
That holds the Blood of love,
When every flash lights holy prayer
Upon its way above.

I wish I were the little flower
So near the Host's sweet Face—
Or like the light that half an hour
Burns on the shrine of grace.

But, Oh! my God, I wish the most
That my poor heart may be,
A home all holy for each Host
That comes in love to me.

REUNION:

The world would probably not be embroiled in war today if two of the present dictators had been extremists in the observance of their religion, Woodrow W. Jones, assistant state treasurer, told an audience of 157 Pottsville Catholic High Alumni at their annual Communion Breakfast in the Nech Allen Hotel, Sunday morning.

Jones, one of the youngest state officials, urged that the Alumni members practice their religion "not in moderation, but to extremes."

The moderates and the extremes are the two classes into which the church members are divided, he said.

"Adolf Hilter was an extremist when he received his First Communion—his heart was filled with the love of God. Since then he has fallen away from the church and now stands for everything contrary to its teachings.

"Josef Stalin was a seminarian when he first grew lax in reading his office. Eventually he grew lax in all his moral obligations and today he heads a Godless state."

The Alumni attended the eight o'clock Mass in St. Patrick's Church and received Communion in a body. Afterward they adjourned to the hotel.

George Schu, Alumni President, who was re-elected at a business meeting which followed the breakfast, welcomed fellow members of the Association and introduced Joseph Lynch, the toastmaster.

Lynch introduced the other speakers.

Msgr. James E. Heir, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, commended the Alumni on their attendance and their aims. They were given some advice by Father Jas. Kavanagh, their spiritual director.

Dr. Joseph Murphy, volunteer physician for Catholic High athletic teams and an annual honored guest at these affairs, entertained with a few humorous stories.

Cecile Griffin sang two selections, "Thank You America" and "Bless This Home." She was accompanied by her sister, Mary Griffin.

Among the honored guests were four nuns who taught many of those assembled. They are Sister Carlotta, Castanzo, Marie Madelin and St. Edmond.

Mary Griffin, '35, was elected th chairman of the committee i charge of the tea for this year Pottsville Catholic High graduates.

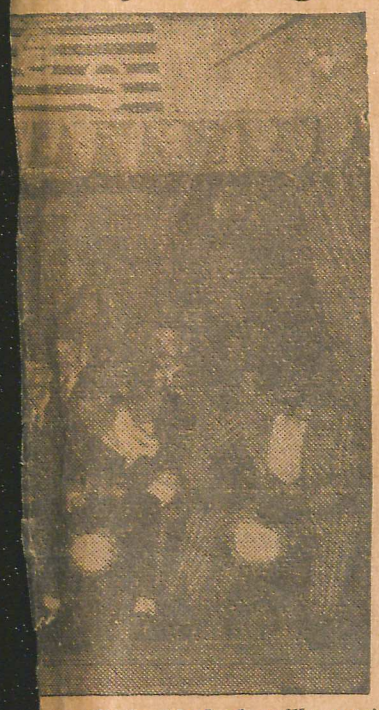

Martin F. Malarkey, Jr., '35, i chairman of the committee arran ing the annual Alumni dance.

Other officers elected, in additio to Schu, are Joseph Lynch, vic president; John O'Donnell, secre tary, and Mary Buehler, treasure

An outstanding feature of the at tendance was the distance some o the Alumni had to travel to be pres ent. At leas twenty who are at tending college or working in th Phila. section were at the break fast.

CREW ESCAPES AS SHED BLEW UP

Forest Fires Ignite Bootlegger's Shanty Containing Dynamite and Tools

When a coal bootlegger's shanty, along the Delano road, northeast of Mahanoy City, containing dynamite sticks and caps, blew up, Sunday afternoon, Allan McKinley, of the latter town, and his crew of eleven men had a close call from being blown to atoms. They constituted part of a state fire-fighting force who, after a battle, extinguished fires that covered one-fifth of an acre.

Unaware of their danger the "bush-whacking" force followed line of fire which roared through underbrush and old caves covering the forest-floor to the depth of a foot or more. Unsuspecting, they were within less than 300 feet of the little frame building when it was blown skyward.

Instantly the air was filled with two-by-fours and boards, tools and light machinery, which the shanty contained. These were hurled high and fell a few feet behind the view. Strange to say not even a small firebrand struck any of the party.

There were 31 fires reported by State Forester Samuel L. Kurtz in the Weiser district, over Sunday, ten of them in Schuylkill County. The largest one, in the district, near Raven Run, burned over 18 acres. Other county blazes were: Forestville, four acres; North Union Township, near Fellin's farm, half-an acre; Ashland one and a half acres; north of Shoemaker's in Mahanoy Tunnel, one fourth of an acre; Lost Creek, three acres; Lost Creek No. 2 three acres.

On Saturday there were 35 fires in the Weiser district, the largest burning over 75 acres on Wilkes-Barre Mountain. in Hanover Township, Luzerne County. There were ten fires in Schuylkill County. The largest did not cover more than three acres.

Today the humidity registered 28 percent, a condition of inflammable character. A six-mile, northeast fire was the order throughout the day. Barometrical conditions suggest thunder storms.

Class of 1936 Will Discuss Reunion Plans

The members of the Class of 1936 of the Pottsville High School will have a meeting, Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, at the home of Miss Ruth Jones, 1335 W. Norwegian St., when arrangements will be made for a class reunion.

The President,

Dear Mr. President:

I cannot tell you how happy I was when I read the news of the occupation of Iceland in last night's papers. I think this is the greatest step yet taken for the protection of this country. By this action I feel that we have secured our left flank.

May I most respectfully urge upon you the desirability of taking over the Azores Islands and Dakar. If this is done we will have secured our center and right flank.

I am enclosing a copy of Pierre van Paassen's book "The Time is Now!" which, if you have not already done so, I urge that you read. I realize that you probably know everything that is in this book and a great deal more but I think you will at least find it of great interest if you can spare a few minutes from your many burdens and duties.

Miss Grace G. Tully
The White House
Washington, D.C.

My dear Miss Tully:

Thank you for the note acknowledging the copy of the book, Full Employment, which I sent to the President recently. May I suggest that the enclosed memorandum, which represents conclusions derived from the analysis in that study, be placed with the book?

Sincerely yours,

John H. G. Pierson

MEMORANDUM ON ~~A PERMANENT~~ AN ECONOMIC POLICY TO INSURE PERMANENT FULL EMPLOYMENT

- by John H.G. Pierson -

PURPOSES: To establish ~~permanent~~ guaranteed full employment in the United States, while at the same time strengthening democracy and promoting effective, non-wasteful use of manpower and other resources.

* * * * * * *

1. It shall be the policy of the U.S. Government to establish ~~permanent~~ guaranteed full employment - a state of affairs in which all men and women willing and able to work shall always have the opportunity to do so, at prevailing rates of pay and under prevailing hourly specifications and working conditions generally.

a) Full employment as referred to herein means employment of all except 1) unemployables and 2) a normal quota temporarily idle because of shifts in demand, technological progress, or any other form of frictional (i.e., transitional) unemployment. Unemployability shall be determined objectively, by medical test, in a manner subject to popular control. The amount of unemployment designated as the normal quota of frictional unemployment (which may vary seasonally) shall be decided democratically; expert opinion shall be taken and the final decision shall be reached in a manner giving an adequate voice to labor and all other sections of the population.

b) In case the definition of unemployability herein adopted creates a situation in which the work of some employables is not worth, in terms of value added to product, no matter where they may be employed, as much as minimum wage laws of the U.S. require that they be paid, the difference between what they are deemed to be worth when most effectively employed and said minimum legal rates shall be a charge on the general economy, to be met out of taxation.

c) To assure that prevailing rates of pay, hours, and working conditions shall be decided democratically, collective bargaining and the right to strike shall be fully supported by the U.S. Government.

2. The measures taken to assure full employment shall be such as require the least sacrifice of other desired ends. Not only must democracy be preserved and strengthened, but in addition full employment should not conflict with effective use of resources.

To secure a truly effective use of manpower and other resources, as judged by the success with which these ~~resources~~ factors are applied to satisfying the wants and needs of the people, planned public enterprise (i.e., production of a socially planned quota of the specified goods and services, whether for sale or for free distribution) is required in some cases. In other cases production is best left to private enterprise producing to meet an anticipated market demand. In still other instances a compromise solution may be most serviceable; for example, associations of private enterprises may practise some aspects of production planning with approval and collaboration of government.

3. In order to promote private enterprise and limit government intervention in economic matters to the necessary minimum, it shall in general be the policy of the U.S. Government to secure full employment by the method of underwriting the aggregate amount of consumer expenditure and preventing monopoly price exactions (as hereinafter noted), thus encouraging private employment.

In each specific case where socially planned and organized production may be urged as a substitute for private enterprise, the burden of proof shall be on the proponents of public planned production to demonstrate that that procedure would be superior to free or regulated private enterprise. However, where competition cannot function and regulation of private monopoly or of associated private producers has proved to be unsatisfactory, or wherever the superiority of public planned production appears at any time to be established beyond a reasonable doubt, public planned production shall be instituted.

4. In addition, as a second and final line of defense against unemployment (the first line being the guaranteed ~~adequacy of~~ applied to total consumer demand together with control of monopolies), a planned program of Federal, State, and local emergency public projects shall be maintained as a regular part of the nation's economic apparatus, and employment thereon shall be expanded and contracted as may be required ~~by the general employment situation of the moment.~~ to keep the total number of jobs adjusted to the labor supply.

Insofar as private construction continues to be peculiarly subject to fluctuation in spite of stability in the market for ordinary consumer goods, construction projects (i.e., durable public works) will tend to preponderate in this emergency program. Conservation offers another great field for expansible public employment. However, a sufficiently wide range of projects of all types shall be planned in advance so that a selection can always be made that will fit the localities and kinds or skills of labor currently available, whatever they may be.

Compensation to labor on emergency public projects shall be at rates prevailing in private and nonemergency public work.

5. Contrary to the view formerly held by most economists, prices are not flexible enough to keep the volume of production and employment in the field of private enterprise from contracting when anything happens to check the circulation of money around the production-consumption circuit. Moreover the circulation of money does not maintain itself automatically. It is therefore fundamental to a full-employment program that government take steps to maintain the monetary circulation.

It shall be the purpose of the U.S. Government, by guaranteeing or underwriting total consumer expenditure (thus so to speak organizing a system of national income insurance, to operate as hereinafter indicated), not only actually to maintain an adequate flow of purchasing power, but, by assuring this flow of purchasing power in advance, to let the prospective demand exert its full stimulating force upon all enterprises producing goods or services for market.

Insofar as the inducement thus offered to private enterprises stimulates economic activity, it will also ~~stimulate~~ swell the flow of consumer income and spending by way of the normal channels of income. It is to be expected that a governmental guarantee of consumer spending will have some tendency to secure full employment without the need for emergency public employment, and that regular and emergency employment together will have some tendency to fulfil the consumer spending guarantee without the need for special subsidies to consumption by the government. ~~How~~ But ~~even~~, the consumer spending guarantee given by the government must in any case be accurately fulfilled, whether this requires additions to consumer purchasing power from the Treasury, or whether it requires subtractions from consumer purchasing power to prevent overfulfilment of the guarantee, with ~~the~~ consequent possibility of price inflation.

6. How large a volume of consumer spending shall be ~~guaranteed~~ stipulated for any given year or other period of time shall be determined by experts after due consideration of the factors relevant to the problem, such as prevailing money wage rates, price-level policy (taken in relation to total productivity), the expected extent of the additional market provided by government orders, foreign investment, and consumer credit.

The spending guarantee shall within limits of feasibility be presented for a number of years in advance, thus establishing a confidently expected trend, which, by making price trends more predictable, will ~~reduce~~ lessen the fluctuations in investment activity (capital formation) that arise out of speculative anticipations of price changes.

7. To bring consumer spending up to the ~~guaranteed~~ stipulated level when it tends to fall short, orderly and just means must be provided for putting additional purchasing power into the hands of consumers. Congress shall therefore determine in advance how the additional income money is to be distributed if and when such distribution proves necessary - whether through established channels of the social insurance system in the form of extra benefits, or by payments to all family units and individuals in the nation, or in some other manner. In deciding upon the formula for distribution of additional income money, so far as that is required, Congress shall take into account the ~~importance of lessening~~ desirability of reducing existing income inequalities.

8. It is as essential to prevent an excess of consumer spending as to prevent a deficiency. Monetary measures undertaken without full realization of this fact carry with them the grave danger of inflation. Congress shall therefore legislate in advance the form of taxation or other means whereby consumer spending shall be brought down to the ~~guaranteed~~ stipulated level in case it tends to exceed that level.

9. The sources of funds for subsidies to consumption, when needed, are in general the same as the sources of funds for public works or for any other purpose of government. Governments may levy taxes, or borrow, or issue their own noninterest-bearing notes.

In accordance with its objective of a full volume of production and employment, the U.S. Government shall levy any taxes designed to pay for subsidies to consumption or for public works in such a manner that they do not burden production or reduce mass purchasing power, but fall rather on large wealth and large incomes, inheritances, etc., or on the idle bank balances of individuals and corporations.

The U.S. Government shall also borrow such idle balances as it may require for these purposes, compulsorily if necessary, since the hoarding of money, representing refusal either to spend or invest it, is clearly an antisocial abuse whose correction in no way voids the rights of private enterprise, properly construed.

Generally speaking, it is better in maintaining the monetary circulation to tap existing idle pools of money than to create additional money to substitute for what is lying idle. However, if for any reason the program of taxing or borrowing existing money proves inadequate to accomplish the named objectives, the U.S. Government may issue its own noninterest-bearing notes.

10. The U.S. Government through its central monetary and banking authorities shall control the net rates of interest paid on money borrowed at long and short term.

A low basic rate shall at first be established, in order to encourage housing and the further development of the nation's physical plant generally, and in order to keep down the cost of any government borrowing incidental to fulfilment of the full-employment policy. Moreover the future trend of the rate of interest shall so far as feasible be determined and announced in advance, both to minimize uncertainties and wastes connected with the construction of houses and other durable equipment, and to prevent fluctuations in hoarding such as arise from speculation regarding the future course of the rate of interest.

Ultimately the decision as to what constitutes an adequate rate of return on loaned money should belong with the people; first, because it has an obvious bearing on income distribution, second, because it plays an important part in determining how large a proportion of current economic activity is to be devoted to social saving, or in other words to the production of capital goods rather than goods for immediate consumption. Hence steps shall be taken to make the rate of interest a political issue as soon as intelligent debate on the subject is possible and to settle this issue in a democratic manner.

11. The U.S. Government shall take the monopoly problem in hand. The concept of control over the volume of production activity exercised by way of control over the volume of consumer spending presupposes the kind of response to buyers' demand associated with (a) competitive producers, or (b) monopolies that, as the result of regulation or for some other reason, act not to maximize their profits but rather to approximate or at least parallel the results given by competition.

Conceivably the beneficial effect of a guarantee of ~~sufficient~~ an amount of consumer spending sufficient to assure a normal competitive profit throughout industry as a whole, with industry operating at levels yielding full employment, might be entirely destroyed by the price-raising and output-restricting policies of monopolies. Dominating the production and distribution of the necessaries of life, they might levy an increasingly large toll of profit for themselves, without permitting either themselves or others to give the normal competitive response (expansion of production and employment) in the exceptionally profitable lines in question. Meanwhile not enough market demand would be left over for the products of competitive producers in other lines (who incidentally would also have to pay exorbitant prices for any products bought from the monopolies) to justify expansion on their part. Hence total employment would fall short of what could be expected to result from the same total consumer demand in a system of universal competition. These unfavorable tendencies are very much in evidence today, being greatly strengthened by technological progress where patent control is used to increase the dominance of corporations already powerful in their field, and by financial tie-ups, etc.

In addition to restricting output directly, monopolies by their excessive profits accentuate income inequality, which is undesirable in itself and furthermore tends to depress total consumer spending and increase the volume of hoarded money. Also monopolies can be a grave threat to political democracy.

From all of these considerations it follows that private monopolies must be subject to adequate restraint or regulation to safeguard the general welfare, and consequently it shall be the business of the U.S. Government to see that adequate restraints and regulations are imposed. These may take the form of publicity, price regulation, vigorous action under the antitrust laws, encouragement of cooperatives to enter into competition with monopolies, public yardstick plants, revision of the patent laws, obligatory output rules based on criteria other than maximum profit - or such other forms as may be held advisable. While so-called monopolistic competition is not necessarily undesirable, and indeed may often be the only kind of competition possible, and while even private monopoly as such is not to be condemned automatically, the crux of the matter is that the restrictive practices of profit-seeking private monopoly cannot be tolerated. The U.S. Government shall therefore prevent these restrictive practices; or, if that is not feasible, then Federal, State, or local government shall own and operate the economic facilities in question.

12. Foreign trade and investment must be viewed from the standpoint of the general interest. From that standpoint it is seen that they are desirable insofar as they serve to promote an effective use of resources by securing a balance of trade based on regional (international) specialization in accordance with comparative efficiencies, but undesirable where they are used in an attempt to expand the volume of domestic production by securing foreign markets not offset by home markets opened to foreign producers, or to exploit foreign labor or foreign natural resources or achieve political domination abroad. The effort to avoid or eliminate domestic unemployment by finding convenient foreign outlets for goods, money, or population leads down the road of economic imperialism to war, and in view of the injustice and suffering ultimately involved can now be supported only by those who do not understand that a nation like the United States can establish permanent full employment without resorting to external economic expansion or aggression.

What is needed is not an isolationist approach. On the contrary.

While sources for many previously imported strategic materials can be developed at home, the superior foreign sources should still be kept open if it does not take war to keep them open. Existing export trade should be an object of consideration, so as to avoid, where it can be avoided, the dislocation of the particular industries and kinds of farming, etc., that rely upon it. When requests are received for funds for development of backward areas, loans should if possible be granted, provided repayment seems assured and the terms are generous and fair, i.e., not such as may drain the wealth, restrict the economic independence, or infringe the political sovereignty of the borrowing countries. Every effort should be made to get rid of tariffs and other trade restrictions (on a bilateral or multilateral basis so far as that can be arranged) and thus to move toward a condition of free trade, qualified as required by defense and by considerations of long-run evolution; for in that kind of free-trade world, producing a surplus of those things at which we are most efficient to exchange abroad for those things at which we are least efficient, we can have a higher national standard of living than if we are obliged to be our own jack-of-all-trades. Indeed it is obvious that the more international cooperation in all spheres of peaceful action, the better.

What is essential, however, as the foundation for any kind of sound foreign policy, is recognition that the problem of quantity of production and employment - the problem of securing prosperity in the sense of full employment - must be solved by domestic economic measures. Only on this foundation can be built a structure of durable peace in which the good will that Americans feel toward other peoples can find adequate practical expression.

13. While taking steps to avoid needless exchange fluctuations, which discourage trade, and while renouncing the use of currency devaluation as a weapon of economic aggression, the U.S. Government shall vary the exchange value of its currency if and when that proves necessary to correct a deeply rooted tendency for the foreign demand for dollars to fall short of or exceed the domestic demand for foreign currencies at the existing valuation.

¶→ If necessary ~~it~~ the government shall also place limitations on speculative short-term capital movements, and on any other international economic activities, including long-term ~~foreign~~ investment, ~~generally~~, that may be found to be sacrificing the general welfare to the private advantage of the few.
