Subject: TRANSMITTING FOUR PRESENTATION COPIES OF PAN AMERICAN POSTAL AND TELEGRAPHIC GUIDE

DEPARTMENT OF STATE
JUL 13 1943
DIVISION OF
RESEARCH AND PUBLICATION

The Honorable

The Secretary of State,

Washington.

Sir:

I have the honor to report that the Embassy is transmitting, by steamer pouch, four copies of the 1943 edition (No. 3) of the Pan American Postal and Telegraphic Guide. The editors of the Guide informed the Embassy of their desire to present a copy of the new edition to the President, to the Vice President, to the Secretary of State, and to the Postmaster General and requested the aid of the Embassy in forwarding them to the recipients. It will be noted that a letter of presentation is attached to each of the packages. The books are transmitted for such action as the Department deems advisable.

Respectfully yours,

Edward Reed

de R-QUISTGAARD, J.W.
New York, N.Y.
June 30, 1942. - Ackd.

Letter to Mr. Early, saying that Dr. Schultz of the New York Graphic Society invited him to paint a portrait of the President and the project fell through as the President did not have time to pose for the picture, but he has undertaken to paint a reproduction from another portrait. He would like to have appointment with the President to show him the portrait and perhaps by seeing him would get pointers on changes he can make. ------ Ackd. June 30 by Mr. McIntyre saying it would be impossible for an appt, but asks him to send a photograph of the portrait and he will turn it over to him. ------Another let. from Mr. de R-Quistgaard saying that he is having photo (7/3) made and will send them later. ---- Let., 7/5/42 to MHM from Mr. de R-Quistgaard saying he is mailing under sep. cover these portraits, and if the Pres. finds them favorable and they can be found useful for some organized propaganda purpose he would be happy to donate the necessary copyright for its use. Also if the Pres. likes the portrait, he would like permission to send him a framed copy with his compliments. ----- Another let. from above to MHM, 7/7/42, enclosing enlargements which are better than the first he sent. ---- Ackd. July 16, 1942 by Mr. Early, thanking him in behalf of the Pres. for the portraits.

Most highly respected Mr. President and dear Miss Grace J. Tully:

It gives me extreme pleasure to know that I effected even a small measure of happiness for our beloved and good Mr. President and his host of constituents. Especially am I elated by the knowledge of the spirit in which my humble gift was received. For this is the expression of appreciation from my faithful heart to our dear President for all his goodness and his tireless work in the interest of his people to whom he gives every joy and happiness.

Your having rewarded me with such a beautiful and friendly reply leaves me without adequate expression of gratitude. The joy that your letter gave me as a 57 year old man, resulted in a revitalization that made me feel as though I was reborn.

I am asking the good Lord to lend you, Mr. President and Miss Tully, a guiding hand to lead you through all your wonderfull endeavors & may he bestow upon you, both, his generous blessings. This I wish from the bottom of my heart. May this wish persist forever and may it extend to all of your decendants as well.

I remain forever with devotion and respect,

Anton Sinter

Thank you for your friendly letter of October twelfth. Your kind thought in wanting to present the framed study of the President to him is heartily appreciated, but, unhappily, he simply does not have any more room for works of this general nature, and for this reason he does not feel justified in accepting the many generous offers which come to him from time to time.

Dear Mr. President:

I have forwarded to you, under separate cover a small box of pinenuts. This nut is typically western and came into use through our Indians, who would gather them and sell them to us at this season of the year. We have all become so fond of them that we now take a day off and go gathering pinenuts. That is what I did to get the ones that I sent you.

I hope you enjoy them as much as I have enjoyed gathering them for you and that they will give you a little taste of the West.

Wishing you continued success in your great task,

I am

Yours sincerely,

SUMMERLIN, Hon. G. T.,
Department of State
October 19, 1943

Writes to Miss Tully enclosing a copy of a despatch dated Sept. 21, 1943 from the American Consulate at Colombo, Ceylon, which, he thinks, may be of interest to the President.--The enclosure consists of a letter from Hon. Robert L. Buell, American Consul, at Colombo, Ceylon, to the Secretary of State, in which the former acknowledges the receipt on Sept. 18th of the Department's instruction of Aug. 7, 1943, transmitting an autographed photograph which the President desires to present to His Highness Sultan HASAN NURUDDIN ISKANDER II, K.C.M.G., of the Maldive Islands in recognition of his assistance to the American Merchant Marine. He states that since the channel for communicating with the Sultan of the Maldive Islands is the Chief Secretary to the Government of Ceylon, who is in charge of External Affairs, that he has contacted the Chief Secretary, and they have decided to have the President's photograph framed, and he describes the method to be pursued in selection of frame, etc. The Consul encloses a photograph of a Maldivian sailing vessel, together with two other photographs for the President.

Miss Grace Tully
The White House
Washington, D. C.

Dear Grace:

Clarence Pritchard, connected with the Treasury's War Savings Staff in New York, became very friendly with Lieutenant Commander Bulkeley when the latter was here and did many nice things for him. The Commander gave him the enclosed autographed photograph. Now, the one great ambition of Mr. Pritchard's life is to get the President to autograph it.

I know of no way to do this, except to appeal to you. Pritchard is really a very nice person, and they tell me he is doing a fine job in the Bond campaign. He would be eternally grateful if you could do anything about this.

Speaking of Lieutenant Commander Bulkeley, by the way, he talked to me for ten minutes straight about you and I could not have said any prettier things about you myself. That is saying a good deal.

If you ever have a minute, won't you please tell me where Missy LeHand is. I don't know whether she is in Boston or back in Washington or down South, and I want to send her a small lollypop for Christmas. I do wish I could see you and all the others of the old crowd. I send a lot of love to all of you.

Yours,

Walter

Dear Miss Tully:

During the several months that he was here I was with Lieutenant Commander John D. Bulkeley a great deal - with his family, on the boats, and at the training base. Walter Trumbull spent one evening with me at the Bulkeley's home and he offered on that occasion to ask you to request the President to autograph a photograph which Commander Bulkeley had inscribed for me - a photograph of the Commander receiving the Congressional Medal of Honor from the President. Walter sent the picture to you and you returned it to him with the President's signature, and I thank you for that.

My particular reason for writing to you today is to tell you of a cigarette box that I had made with this photograph baked into the cover. Because it is unusual, and because it is such a fine and happy picture of the President I thought that he might like to have one of these boxes. It arrived today and it is being mailed to you.

I hope that the President may find it interesting and useful.

Sincerely,

Clarence Pritchard

PASS AND STOW
PHILAD.A
M D CC LIII

PROCLAIM LIBERTY THROUGHOUT ALL THE LAND UNTO ALL THE INHABITANTS THEREOF—LEV. XXV. VS. 10.

For almost two hundred years, this Proclamation of Liberty has been the keynote of our American Spirit of Independence. Americans love Liberty dearer than life itself. Time and again they have demonstrated their fierce devotion to the cause of personal freedom: at Bunker Hill and Valley Forge, at Gettysburg and in the fields of Flanders, where "row on row" stand the crosses of doughboys who believed in an ideal . . . and fought for its preservation.

As visitors to Philadelphia's Independence Hall gaze at the inscription on the Liberty Bell (historic old relic of a time when Pennsylvania was a British Province and liberty was a dream cherished by a handful of hardy colonists), their hearts must surely beat faster. There is a quickening of the pulse, a feeling of exaltation, at the recollection of the patriots of that day, in 1776, who declared that "all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness."

The history of this famous symbol of American Independence goes back as far as November 1, 1751, when the superintendents of the State House, in Philadelphia, wrote to the Colonial agent of the Province in London, stressing the need for a new bell of adequate proportions and sound tone. Some ten months later, a bell duly arrived, but "upon it being hung up (on trusses, in the State House Yard) to try the sound, it was cracked by a stroke of the clapper without any other violence."

While the superintendents were endeavoring to have it returned to England, "two ingenious workmen undertook to cast it here . . . When we broke up the metal, our judges generally agreed it was too high and brittle, and cast several little bells out of it to try the sound and strength, and fixed upon a mixture of an ounce and a half of copper to one pound of the old bell, and in this proportion we now have it."

So reads an eye-witness account of the incident at the time. The "two ingenious workmen" of the story were Pass, a Maltese, and Stow, a Philadelphian. Although they had made the mould in a masterly manner, and rung the metal well, this second bell, after being hung up in its place, was found to contain too much copper, and Pass and Stow "were so tiezed with the witticisms of the town" that they asked and received permission to cast it once again. In June of 1753 the third casting, which is the bell of history, was finally placed in the steeple.

AMERICANS may well surmise just how it came to pass that the bell which eventually did "proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof" is the same bell that the mother country sent to the colonists of Pennsylvania. Is it not something of an irony that the instrument for the proclamation of America's independence should be of English origin? Can this be construed as a further indication of the "ties that bind" us to that island kingdom across the sea?

The 4th of July is a day sacred to the hearts of all Americans, for it commemorates an event that marked the dawn of a new era in the civilization of mankind. With the Declaration of Independence (to the formal reading of which citizens were summoned by the peals of this same Liberty

e "ties that bind" us to that rts of all Americans, for it

of a new era in the civilizadependence (to the formal
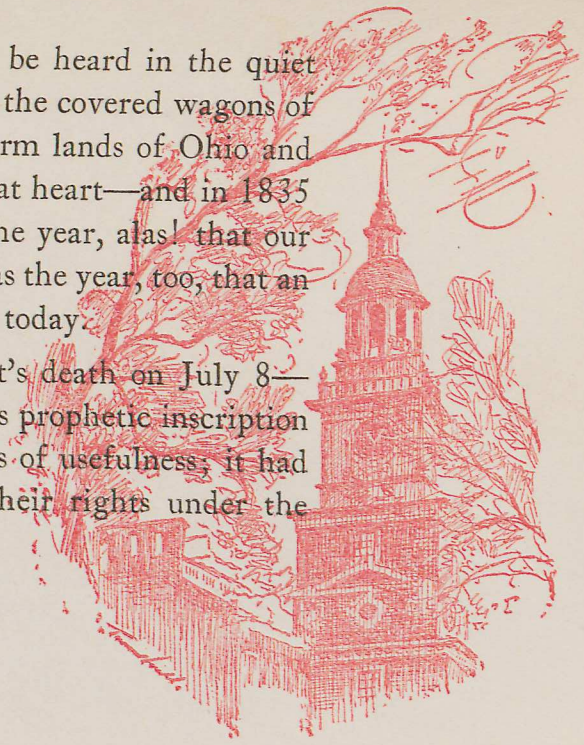
e peals of this same Liberty

Bell in Philadelphia's State House Yard on July 8, 1776), our people inaugurated a policy of government and a way of life which prove conclusively that men can live in peace, that they can work for a common goal, and that the goal can be—and still remains—the common good, the welfare of all.

Another generation of Americans is today engaged in a life and death struggle for the preservation of these same ideals for all time. As a nation, we face truly formidable odds: the combined power of the forces of tyranny, greed and barbarism, whose avowed intention it is to crush, and to subdue for all time, the spirit that is best described as "American." As a people, we are united in the defense of our homeland, of the right to live and talk and think as individuals, as free men, human beings to whom God gave a sense of the fitness of things—the wisdom to see that in the eyes of their Creator all men are identical, and the courage to "see it through."

TRACING FURTHER the history of the Liberty Bell, let us not forget the bravery of Washington, the wisdom of Jefferson and the compassion of Lincoln—those three qualities that make for greatness in men and nations. These qualities were at their brilliant best in 1828, when a new clock was ordered for Independence Hall, to be placed in the tower, and a new bell to strike the hours with a hammer operated by the clockworks. America was beginning the great trek Westward then; the age of expansion and the opening of vast new frontiers was soon to begin.

Already the rumblings of a mighty torrent could be heard in the quiet ebb and flow of New England life. Now could be seen the covered wagons of a few hardy souls who had struck out for the fertile farm lands of Ohio and Illinois—and beyond. We Americans are "pioneers" at heart—and in 1835 that pioneer spirit was in full swing. That was also the year, alas! that our first, great Chief Justice Marshall died. And that was the year, too, that an accident befell the grand old Bell we cherish so highly today.



For, as it tolled the sad news of this eminent jurist's death on July 8—exactly fifty-nine years after the day it had fulfilled its prophetic inscription—the Bell cracked. It had lived out eighty-two years of usefulness; it had called the people together for the preservation of their rights under the British crown; it had recorded many outstanding events of the Revolution and of the "birth of a nation;" it had celebrated the proclamation of the Declaration of Independence.

In later years the crack was bored out in an attempt to prevent further damage and perhaps even restore the tone. This explains why the crack, at the present time, is so very large. No amount of time, however, and no greater damage can ever destroy the spirit that it symbolizes so vividly for Americans.

The Liberty Bell has not always been a Philadelphia landmark. It has made several trips from the Hall; first, in 1777, when, on September 18, the British Army was about to occupy the city. At that time it was removed to Allentown, Pa., where it was hidden for almost a year in the Zion Reformed Church, to prevent its capture and the melting of it into cannon. Upon other occasions the Bell has made journeys to New Orleans, Chicago, Atlanta, Charleston, S. C., Boston, St. Louis and San Francisco. In each case patriotic Americans traveled for many miles just to glimpse, or perhaps to touch, the venerated relic.

Such has been the history of the Liberty Bell—vivid, colorful, eventful, a visible reflection of a nation's faith in Freedom as an ideal worth cherishing. Let us not, for an instant, lose sight of this ideal; let us keep it in our hearts always. In this way will we win the war; in this way will we win the peace that is to follow.

Mr. Early wrote stating that her letter of Dec. 6th to the President has been received and thanks her for the courtesy in sending him the mat with the picture imprinted on it. Further advises Mrs. Myric that her communication is being referred for the consideration of the officials of the Department of Interior, who have jurisdiction over the Office of Indian Affairs. Extends the President's sympathy in the passing of her aged mother. Mrs. Cornealia Ross Presley Taylor - - -The letter of Mrs. Myric was referred to the Dept. of the Int. (Off., Indian Affairs): She apparently wants money from the Government for Indian land. (as per brief)

My dear Mrs. Poland:

Thank you, in behalf of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, for your card of Christmas greetings and for the wreath which you forwarded to them. You may be assured that your prayers are indeed appreciated.

The President asks if you will not be good enough to convey his very best wishes to your son and to express the hope that he will soon be fully restored to good health.

Very sincerely yours,

Grace G. Tully

THE WHITE HOUSE

RECEIVED

President Franklin D. Roosevelt
White House
Washington, D. C.

Dear President Roosevelt:

Last Spring I prepared a book dealing with the democratic tradition in American literature. I included selections from your "Address at Roanoke Island," August 18, 1937, your "Radio Address Before the White House Conference on Children in Democracy," January 19, 1940, and your "Annual Message to the Congress," January 6, 1941. Through your legal adviser, I was permitted to use this material without charge in the book which was mimeographed here for use in the V-12 Navy Training Program. I believe the book has succeeded in doing what I hoped it would do: deepen the understanding of students for American history as a movement toward an ideal. Students in our colleges, which, for the men, means students preparing for the Armed Forces today, need a grasp upon American principles, imagination about the living past and present, and confidence in our ability to shape the future. I have tried to select material which will both present principles and help to shape a uniform will so far as the living qualities of democracy are concerned. I have asked the University Press to send a copy of the book to you. Enclosed is a clipping from the University of New Mexico student paper. The students wrote their own definitions of democracy. The acrostic form, at the end, was written by a V-12 Navy student.

Sincerely yours,

T. M. Pearce

Students of English in Dr. Pearce's Class Write Their Own Definitions of Democracy

The last question of Dr. Pearce's semester examination over the course "Democratic Traditions in American Literature" asked the students to write their own definition of democracy using not more than 25 words. Dr. Pearce was astonished by the intelligence of some of the answers to this particular question. He copied a few of the more outstanding ones, and also a few that were entirely different from the accepted ideas of a definition for democracy. Among these he chose the following:

"I canot think of 'Democracy' in in terms of merely political freedom. Whether or not you have a voice in your government does not mean much when one-third of a nation cannot sustain that voice. Economic freedom is not only a partner of political freedom but a pre-requisite."

"Democracy is an agency of the people which is used not only to govern them but also to help by education and insurance against accident and poverty."

"Democracy is a faith—faith in the representatives of the people to work out the best system for their political, social, and economic equality."

"Democracy is, most important of all, the right to live, live as human beings: the right to freedom of speech, press, and the freedom to go forward and onward as time goes on."

"Democracy is a state in which the people serve themselves and each other; it implies social cooperation as well as equal opportunity and individual freedom."

"To me, democracy is a personal thing. It is the writings of great men like Emerson and Whitman, the deeds of Washington and Lincoln, the right to worship, to say, to follow any causes I may choose; the right to vote, to criticize, to admire; the security of our land, the faith in our people and their philosophy, humor, and sympathy."

"D—duty to country
E—emancipation of all people
M—minorities have no fear
O—official, people's choice
C—courage to progress
R—representation (equal)
A—authority vested in the people
C—Crosby can start out as a small time singer and finish by being a millionaire
Y—"Yanks" are defending this thing called Democracy."
