Faculty Mentoring Service
Remote Training

Workshop Content
This service is designed to provide one-on-one mentoring to an institution’s faculty members. Through this individual, personalized service, faculty with different levels of experience, knowledge, and expertise can expand their online teaching and learning skills by working directly with a Blackboard product expert. The service consists of 60 hours of one-on-one remotely delivered meetings. A Blackboard training expert will conduct scheduled office hours for which faculty can register.

Workshop Materials and Requirements
Sessions are delivered via Blackboard Collaborate. To get the most out of the sessions, participants should have a computer with a high-speed Internet connection.

Who Should Attend
These remote sessions are intended for Instructors who are responsible for creating and/or teaching Blackboard Learn courses.

Duration
60 hours of one-on-one remote meetings within a 12-month period.

Workshop Topics
Topics for these personal sessions are chosen by each individual faculty member. Some instructors arrive at the session with a prepared list of specific questions; others may be looking for more generalized help with a particular tool or feature. Participating faculty may be new to Blackboard, or they may be experienced users wishing to go into more depth on a given topic.

Common topics include (but are not limited to): grading, tests, discussion boards, assignments, wikis, and group work.

Logistics
Typically, office hours are scheduled in four-hour blocks. Faculty sign up for hour-long sessions from a posted schedule, and are provided with a link to a Collaborate meeting room.

At the client’s discretion, individual faculty may sign up for multiple sessions.
