Overview

Learn how to effectively facilitate in an online or blended classroom. This course focuses on building facilitation skills in four areas: technical, managerial, social, and pedagogical. This course also covers the skillset required of an effective online facilitator, learning styles and teaching strategies to address them, effective communication in a primarily text-based medium, interactive course components and various instructional strategies, management and organization in the online classroom, and assessment and feedback strategies.

Topics

Online Learning and the Facilitator – Participants will explore the online environment in order to become familiar with it and how it is different from the face-to-face learning environment.

Learning Styles and the Online Learner – This topic explores how students learn so that facilitators can adjust and adapt their teaching methods and strategies.

Communication in the Online Classroom – Participants will learn how to foster a sense of community in the online classroom and enhance the learning experience for everyone.

Facilitating Collaborative Activities – Participants explore a variety of instructional strategies so that each student can be successful in the classroom.

Management and Organization – This topic focuses on developing time management skills when dealing with students who now have 24/7 access to courses.

Assessment, Grading, and Feedback – Participants learn how to provide effective feedback to students during the learning process while setting clear expectations for communications and grading policies.
