Message From the Stauffer Center

Though the door and entryway are temporary barriers, they are not insignificant. They will not replace the technological advancements that have improved communication and accessibility. The front desk to the Stauffer Center is now equipped with a ZoomBox, a high-tech telecommunication system that connects to the United States and other countries. The ZoomBox allows users to connect to the internet, make telephone calls, or video chat with friends and family.

Managing Feedback in Students

As faculty move further into teaching all of courses online, you can expect feedback to come in at a higher frequency. Feedback often comes in overwhelming quantities and can be overwhelming. Feedback can be seen as a form of communication between the instructor and students. It is communication that evaluates, but it can be packaged in a variety of shapes and sizes and delivered globally through Blackboard tools not specifically designed for faculty or students.

Managing Feedback to Students

As faculty move further into teaching all of courses online, you can expect feedback to come in at a higher frequency. Feedback often comes in overwhelming quantities and can be overwhelming. Feedback can be seen as a form of communication between the instructor and students. It is communication that evaluates, but it can be packaged in a variety of shapes and sizes and delivered globally through Blackboard tools not specifically designed for faculty or students.

Managing Feedback to Students

As faculty move further into teaching all of courses online, you can expect feedback to come in at a higher frequency. Feedback often comes in overwhelming quantities and can be overwhelming. Feedback can be seen as a form of communication between the instructor and students. It is communication that evaluates, but it can be packaged in a variety of shapes and sizes and delivered globally through Blackboard tools not specifically designed for faculty or students.

Managing Feedback to Students

As faculty move further into teaching all of courses online, you can expect feedback to come in at a higher frequency. Feedback often comes in overwhelming quantities and can be overwhelming. Feedback can be seen as a form of communication between the instructor and students. It is communication that evaluates, but it can be packaged in a variety of shapes and sizes and delivered globally through Blackboard tools not specifically designed for faculty or students.

Managing Feedback to Students

As faculty move further into teaching all of courses online, you can expect feedback to come in at a higher frequency. Feedback often comes in overwhelming quantities and can be overwhelming. Feedback can be seen as a form of communication between the instructor and students. It is communication that evaluates, but it can be packaged in a variety of shapes and sizes and delivered globally through Blackboard tools not specifically designed for faculty or students.

Managing Feedback to Students

As faculty move further into teaching all of courses online, you can expect feedback to come in at a higher frequency. Feedback often comes in overwhelming quantities and can be overwhelming. Feedback can be seen as a form of communication between the instructor and students. It is communication that evaluates, but it can be packaged in a variety of shapes and sizes and delivered globally through Blackboard tools not specifically designed for faculty or students.

Managing Feedback to Students

As faculty move further into teaching all of courses online, you can expect feedback to come in at a higher frequency. Feedback often comes in overwhelming quantities and can be overwhelming. Feedback can be seen as a form of communication between the instructor and students. It is communication that evaluates, but it can be packaged in a variety of shapes and sizes and delivered globally through Blackboard tools not specifically designed for faculty or students.

Undergraduate Education

Admissions and Academic Policies

The American Council on Education (ACE) Global Learning Initiative, in collaboration with Mason, is offering a series of webinars to help students and faculty navigate the challenges of teaching and learning in a virtual environment. The webinar series will focus on strategies for managing feedback to students and will be held on Thursdays until further notice. All webinars are located on the ACE Global Learning Initiative website.

Graduate Education

Applications for Fellowship

Due June 1

Spring 2020 is a time of unprecedented change, and this change has only accelerated the need for urgent assistance in the hands of students facing an unexpected financial crisis. To provide urgent assistance to students, Mason has established the Emergency Assistance Fund (EAF) to provide immediate financial assistance to students who may be facing academic or financial hardship. The EAF fund will continue for however long the need exists.

Undeclared Undergraduate Students

Applications for Fellowship

Due June 1

Spring 2020 is a time of unprecedented change, and this change has only accelerated the need for urgent assistance in the hands of students facing an unexpected financial crisis. To provide urgent assistance to students, Mason has established the Emergency Assistance Fund (EAF) to provide immediate financial assistance to students who may be facing academic or financial hardship. The EAF fund will continue for however long the need exists.

International Research Sharing

International Research Sharing Enactment for Fall, 2019

The Office of the Provost has enacted a new policy for international exchange and sharing of research. The policy takes effect for all international activities starting Fall 2019.

Office of the Provost

Special Edition Issue: April 9, 2020

This email was sent to you.
Fairfax, VA | 22030 United States
4441 George Mason Blvd
View this email
Got this as a forward?
Share this email: