Coaching programme

Support the teachers and school leaders working to build a fair education for all.

Our teachers and school leaders work in schools serving low-income communities. As a coach, you can help them to make an even greater difference to the lives of disadvantaged children across the UK.

Your expertise, time and commitment will help our talented teachers develop their professional goals, as well as address the challenges they face in school.

You'll also expand your own professional skills, with training on specialist coaching techniques and one-to-one support from experts in the field.

Together, we can make a difference where it's needed most.

As a coach, you'll get:

- Bespoke, high-quality training on a range of professional coaching techniques from experts in the field.
- Year-round support from us and expert coaches.
- Regular newsletters with stories from the coaching community, as well as articles and online CPD (continuing professional development).
- An insight into the impact our teachers make and how you've helped them achieve this.
- The opportunity to work with coachees from across our programmes, such as the Careers Leader Programme and the Teach First Training Programme

Is coaching right for you?

- ◆ You have over three years' experience working in a professional environment.
- ◆ You're willing to learn and develop the use of coaching techniques to support teachers.
- ◆ You're committed to our vision that no child's educational success should be limited by their background.

How to become a coach

Applications will be open on our website from January 2020.

You'll then be invited to attend one of our coach training events.

"Being on the [Coaching] Programme not only helped me develop my own skillset, but I've also built a lasting relationship with my teacher helping them to overcome barriers and challenges of their own."

I have had a really positive experience coaching with Teach First, and so have many others who have also coached. I have thoroughly enjoyed it."
